MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY// JOHN A. HANNAH

"I do the very best I know how, the very best I can, and I mean to keep on doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right wouldn't make any difference."

—A. Lincoln

John Hannah can do more work in ten minutes than many people would take hours to do.
–Ruth Jameyson, Administrative Assistant to the President

The full scope of John A. Hannah as an individual, lost in a mere recording of his achievements as President of MSU, can perhaps be found through the ideas of his associates.

John Hannah is a bright and warm person who never beats around the bush. He believes in coming to the point quickly and wants to know what is on your mind right away. The efficient interaction between him and others is completed with the quick and accurate decisions he can reach.

He has the ability to conduct meetings of every kind in such a way that people feel invited to be heard. However, they are more than mere group discussion meetings that get nothing done, but rather there is a prevalent air of efficiency that moves the group to decisions.

–C. L. Winder, Dean
College of Social Science

If I had to describe President Hannah in one word it would be "courage." Many people know what to do, but not all of them have the vision and courage to do it. He sees things through and doesn't scare easily. He generally tries to avoid trouble, but when the time comes that a problem has to be faced he does not hesitate to proceed. John Hannah will wade right into a job. His courage is exemplified by his vast purchases of land, his lack of fear of digging holes, or to face legislators on decisions.

He has a wonderful ability to talk to different audiences. He has received standing ovations at meetings of college presidents and does equally well with an audience of farmers. This is reflective of his great range of adaptability to the occasion at hand.

–Thomas K. Cowden, Dean
College of Agriculture

John Hannah is a most energetic person who works harder than everyone. He is consistently rising early and retiring late. His early to rise tendencies are reflected in his universally unpopular breakfast meetings on Monday mornings with staff members.

—James Denison
University Relations

President Hannah is a man of his time with great vision, foresight, boldness, and imagination. I think there is a great gulf to be bridged by his leaving and I don't think you could have had a better president in the time he served.

—Jack Breslin
Secretary of the University

The New Administration Building has been on the construction agenda for about 10 years. However, new needs came up such as the chemistry building and library additions, which pushed them ahead of the Ad building in Hannah's eyes. It seems a shame that now that it is completed President Hannah can only spend a few weeks in it.

–Jack Breslin
Secretary of the University

Very few people have had the opportunity that John Hannah has; starting with so little and building so much. Students can never know the price he has paid to make what we have here today.

In the days of building he gave freely of himself to give speeches to alumni and high schools, and he was a superior who was sometimes very hard to keep up with because he was such a tremendous worker, full of physical and mental strength.

In working with him for 22 years I have seen no change in his demand for excellence, and our athletic department reflects this. Everyone in the country can see this too, because they read how we've done by the scores in the newspapers.

–Biggie Munn
Athletic Director

The next president will have to consolidate the university and build more consideration in the curriculum for relevance to the entire community that MSU serves. If the next President is as capable of doing this as Hannah has been in building this University to greatness, MSU has the potential for being one of the unique institutions of higher learning in this country.

–Ronald B. Lee
Assistant Provost
Director, Economic Opportunity Program

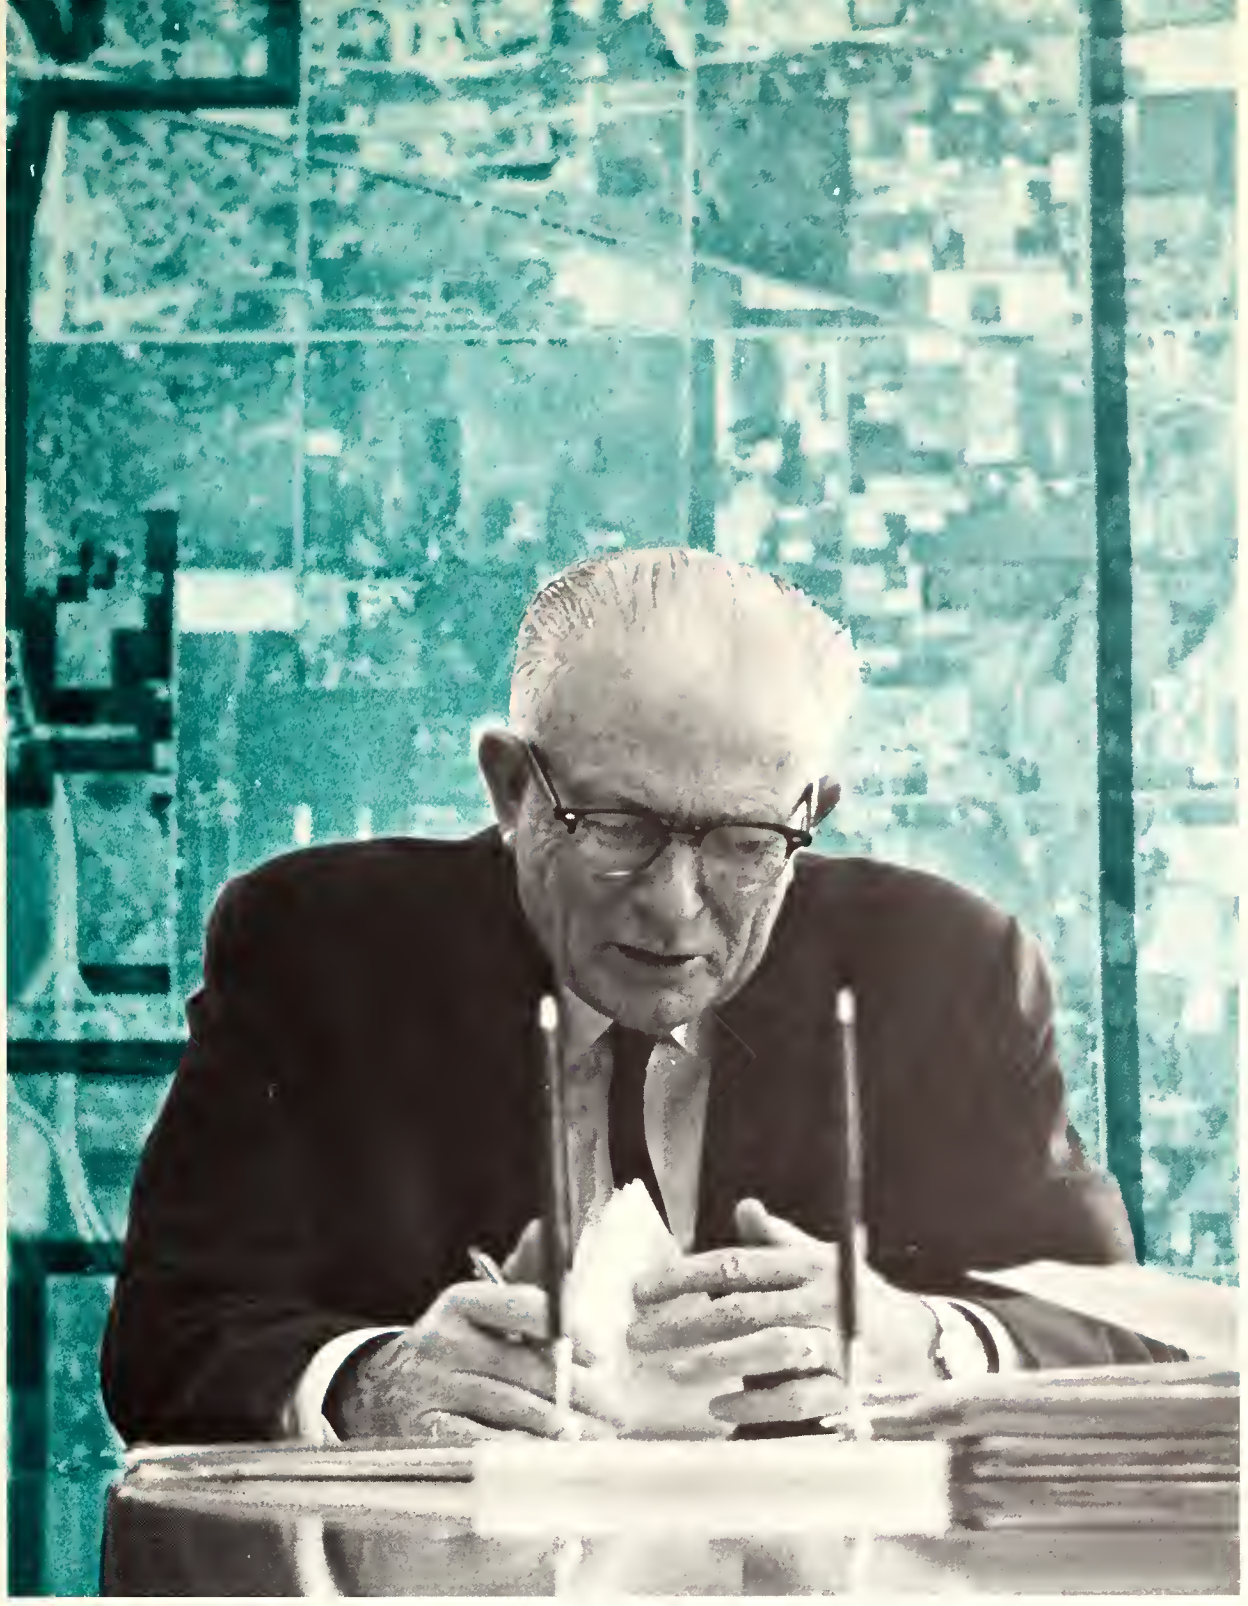
MSU as we know it today did not just happen; John Hannah made it.

One must respect John Hannah as being a man who changes with the times. He is an unselfish pragmatist who works for the good of the university, with the theory that what is good is what works good.

–Jerry West
ATL professor



There are only 11 buildings on campus now that were here when John Hannah was Secretary of the University; the rest were built during his regimes, either as secretary or president. The alumni have been known to say repeatedly and affectionately, "The cement never sets as long as Hannah is President."

–Biggie Munn
Athletic Director

Characteristic of him is his tremendous amount of confidence in himself and the institution as well as the people he worked with. There was never a question in his mind that his programs would work, and most of the chances that he took panned out.

—James H. Denison
Director, University Relations

One of the most outstanding things about my husband is his tremendous foresight and ability to look far ahead. I have often heard him say, "We are where we are, not where we wish we were," and this is so typical of him because there is little gloating or crying over the past for him, but rather a forward look that reflects the idea that when one task is done we should open vistas for new tasks.

—Mrs. John A. Hannah

President Hannah's leaving stirs mixed reactions. We are proud that his career, unmatched, is being capped by an appointment to one of the most important international responsibilities of this country. The loss to the University is deeply felt. One of the greatest qualities he possessed as an administrator and as a leader was to remain ahead of his time. In the process, he brought a quality of constant renewal and excellence to this University.

—Milton E. Muelder
Dean, Advanced Graduate Studies
Acting Dean, International Programs

In my infrequent visits to Cowles House, I have always been welcomed at the door by John Hannah himself. When one talks with him in his office, a relaxed atmosphere prevails, and although the president is a very busy man he will never make you feel rushed. He makes you feel as if he has all the time in the world.

It is astonishing to listen to what he knows about every facet of MSU, from details to generalities.

In speaking with him, I've noticed that he will never duck questions and if by chance he does not know an answer he is not afraid to admit it.

—James D. Rust
Ombudsman

John Hannah has played a great role, not only in the university, but also in the state and country. He has given great impetus in higher education movements.

If this board of trustees can do as good a job in selecting a president as the State Board of Agriculture did in 1941, we will have done a very good job.

—Don Stevens, Chairman
MSU Board of Trustees

EDUCATION

incidents hung on a promise, a collection of experiences haphazardly designed to mold the individual.

We are precious things, watching but afraid lest someone see what it is we are and perhaps tell us so.

We seek the shape of things and describe what it is we aren't.

At first, we knew each other only as parts of a whole.

We were objects to be leafleted, performed for, taught to—rarely talked to.

Membership in our cosm means we have to move and be "doing".

Be it alone or together,
we feel we must be doing something to quiet ourselves.

We watch and wonder what does this matter to whom and why should it matter to us.

We have to answer
ourselves.

We need some way to justify whatever it is we are making of ourselves.
We have to show this thing called "us" to someone who can see.

We have to do something that people see.

GRAPE
NUTS

The face of the future that we must shape
spectres us as we seek to mold ourselves to time's specifications.

And suddenly it doesn't matter so much,
our answer.

26
Michigan State

Competition has become a way of life.
We run a good race
but it's better to win, we've heard.
Slowly we learn.
We want to be first because it hurts less.

We shape ourself by our response to the questions of your time.
We look for some answer that provides a direction away, away from the past
and into our future.

Our actions are our questions
as we make now.

Now demands our attention,
a formless thing
unshaped by expectations,
made of events outside ourselves,
and asks to be dealt with.

The path to our future is littered with presents.

We must identify the present in the past and make it ours.
The control we gain over facts leaves us free to deal with other forms of the future.

We watch our own coming of age and know ourselves
in all our forms and fancies.
Whether we dream
or merely plan,
we learn to watch us.

As our lives and our worlds hang in balance
we seek to shift and change the centers on which we hang the meanings of our time.

STRUGGLE

It doesn't always work, though, this examination and talking and acting.
We find that we,
passive group,
cannot succeed without meeting ourselves.

We eventually become real through our actions
as we extend to people
a portion of what we are for them to touch.

We are ourselves
alone in a splendor we have made, searching through time
for an answer to our questions.

We are ourselves,
still precious,
but not entirely our own.

The future looms with dark and pageantry and we are ours
in a sudden rush of sudden knowledge of our own place in a society which we must form for better or worse, richer or poorer,
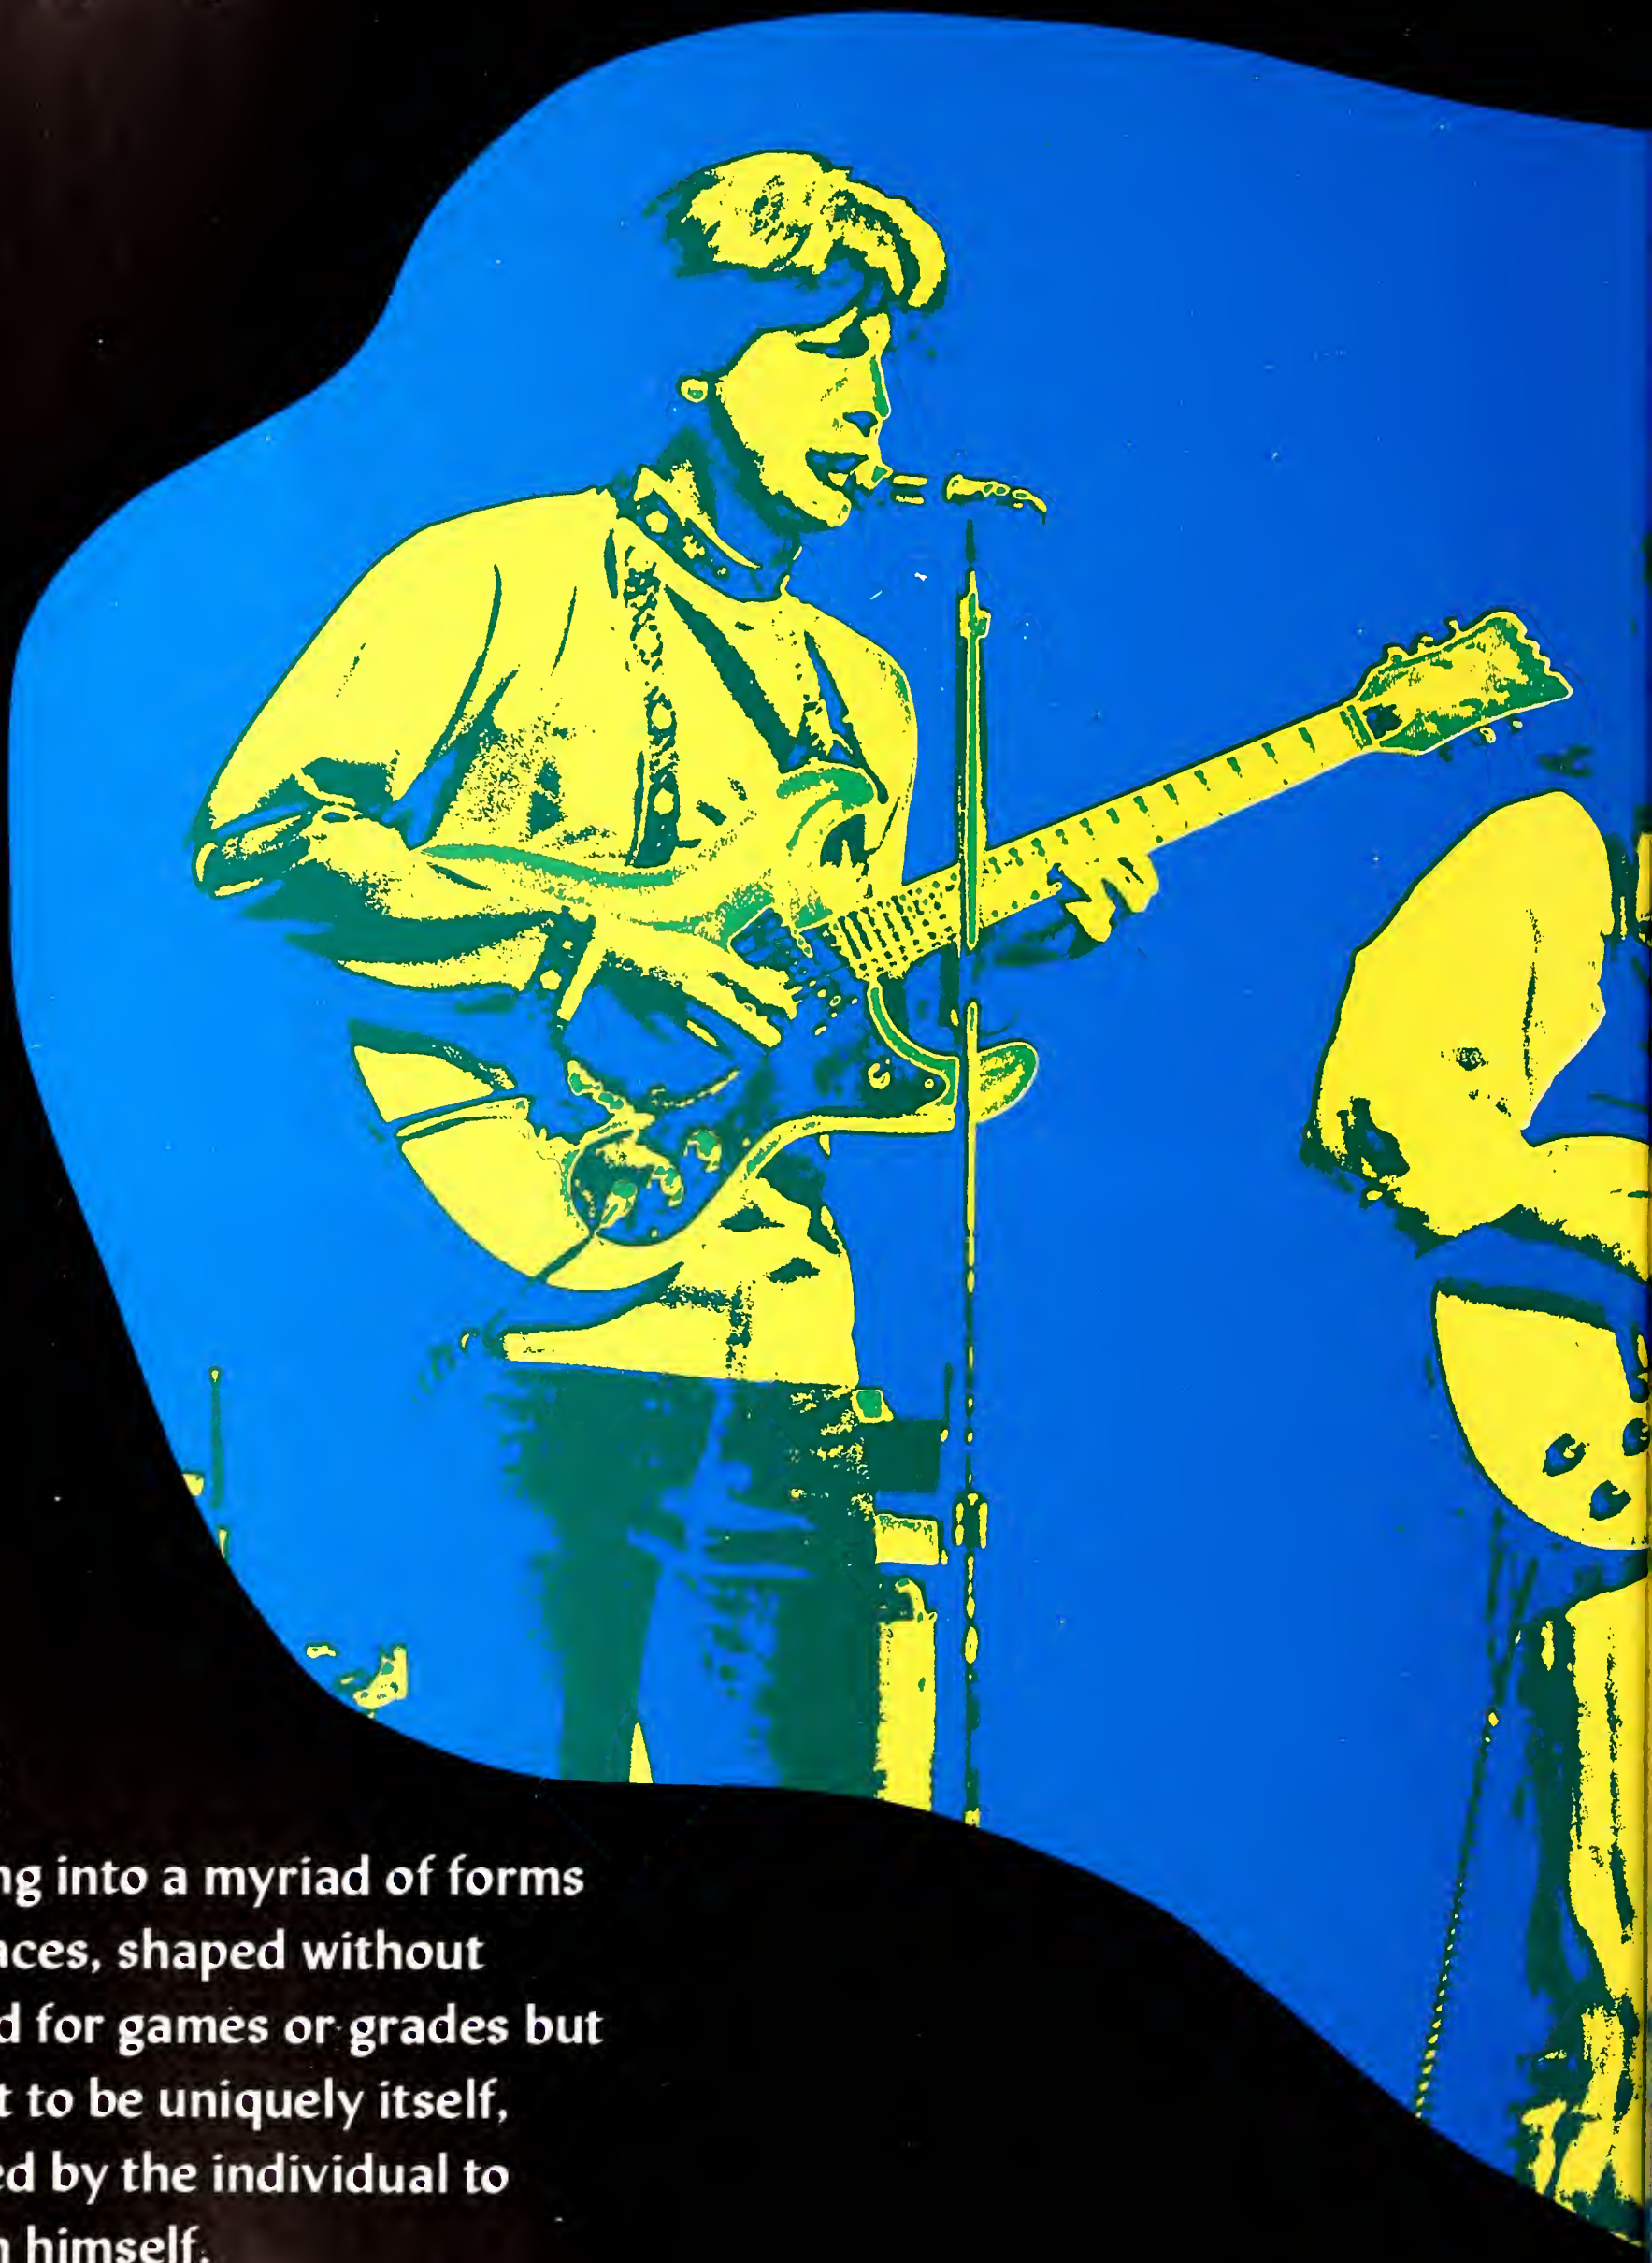
and for our own.



LIFE
varying into a myriad of forms and faces, shaped without regard for games or grades but meant to be uniquely itself, formed by the individual to match himself.

I sought a beginning

I sought a beginning in the world that pulsed around me.
I searched for a familiar face that might recognize me and know immediately where I belonged.
I sought a sturdy hand that would offer me a sealed envelope in which my direction lived.
I found
no face or hand, but instead a Me who was to face the responsibility of becoming.

LAUNDRY

That summer I thought the whole world lived in Wonders Hall;
and I searched for a key that would unlock the great secret of the university and make me a student, a philosopher, a doctor, a scientist, an engineer—or at any rate—an educated person.

I wondered at the beauty of the playful water that was stirring long before my 8 o'clock, and watched the patterns that headlights make as they weave their metal bodies through the timeless night.
I shuffled IBM cards and took my chances in the lottery of registration.

I strolled with my frustrations to Grand River where I could always walk in unannounced and find an old friend enjoying the how of people over a cup of coffee by the window.
Where I could usually go to forget the library, or take another look at my campus
from the other side.

The shuffle of passing feet drones on

Carve your name in a table, joke with friends about your classes,
feed that infernal jukebox,
and brush a handful of sandwich crumbs onto the floor.

The shuffle of passing feet drones on leading to the friendly corner bookstore, the lounges,
library,
alumni office,
and bowling alleys.

And the string of traffic in the Union never stops.

NIXON PRESIDENT

A residence hall is people

You can always find a cardgame in the grill
or a nice quiet corner
in the lounge.
For a residence hall is people who think,
act,
and react;
love,
hate,
fear,

live, learn and share.

It's part of being twenty-one

So the dishes pile up until someone has time,
and every corner gets cluttered with the debris of living from day to day.
Each room still has four walls,
but it's part of being twenty-one,
and trying to be the adult that the magic age deems we should be.

They're off with the pounding of old tennis shoes

The starting gun fires!
They're off with the pounding of old tennis shoes revived after a winter's hibernation.
Hear the slice of the air over bare legs,
and the spinning of wheels on thawing pavements.
The frantic salute to spring has begun.

This is the spirit that brings people together

In sharing a common goal
we can learn about ourselves and one another.
This is the spirit that brings people together
while striving to construct the best float, or win a football game.

Competition makes us stronger individuals

Competition makes us stronger individuals because we are forced to rely upon no one but ourselves.
And the really important reward is not the winning itself but the feeling of making it,
and knowing you could all along,
that warms
you up inside.

It is through her femininity that a woman learns to express herself.
For what is a woman's beauty worth
if it is merely frivilous?
Of what value is her mind
if it is shallow?
A woman must learn to understand, evaluate and utilize her talents to avoid being misjudged.

Life is a real production

The curtain rises;
We live a part,
the life of another individual,
for a while.
An actor or actress is many people
all at once,
then one again offstage.

Life is a real production,
a full time play.
But we play for keeps,
not merely applause.

So much work,
practice,
determination
make it all seem worthwhile.
And knowing we have done our best we allow the curtain to fall.

ATHLETICS

speed and strength and scores and records and heroes and goats and spectators and officials and baskets and still rings and takedowns and touchdowns and sprints and endurance and rules and limelight and derision and faith.

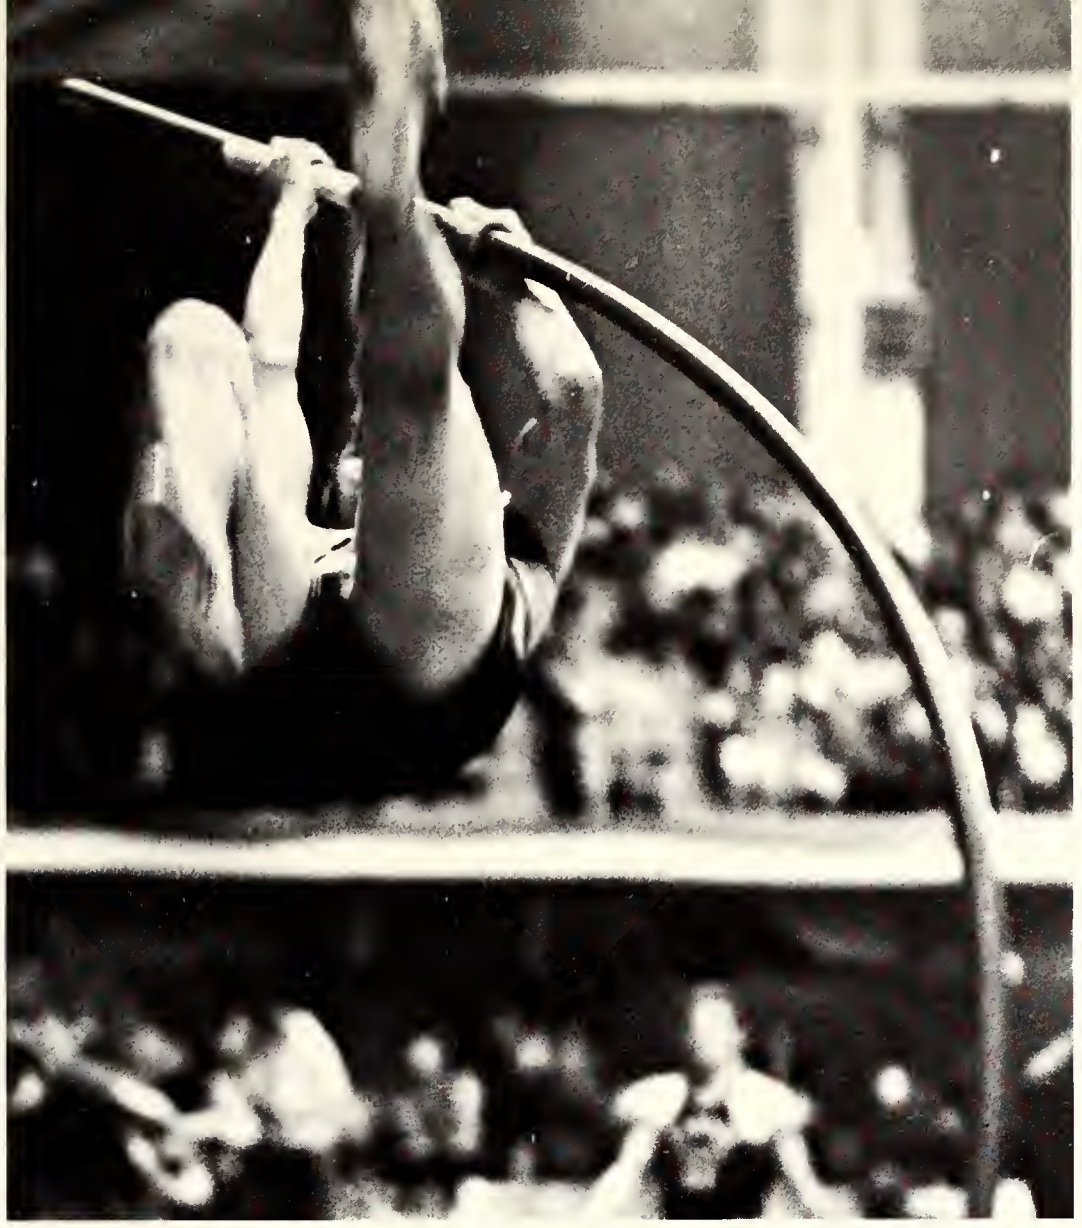
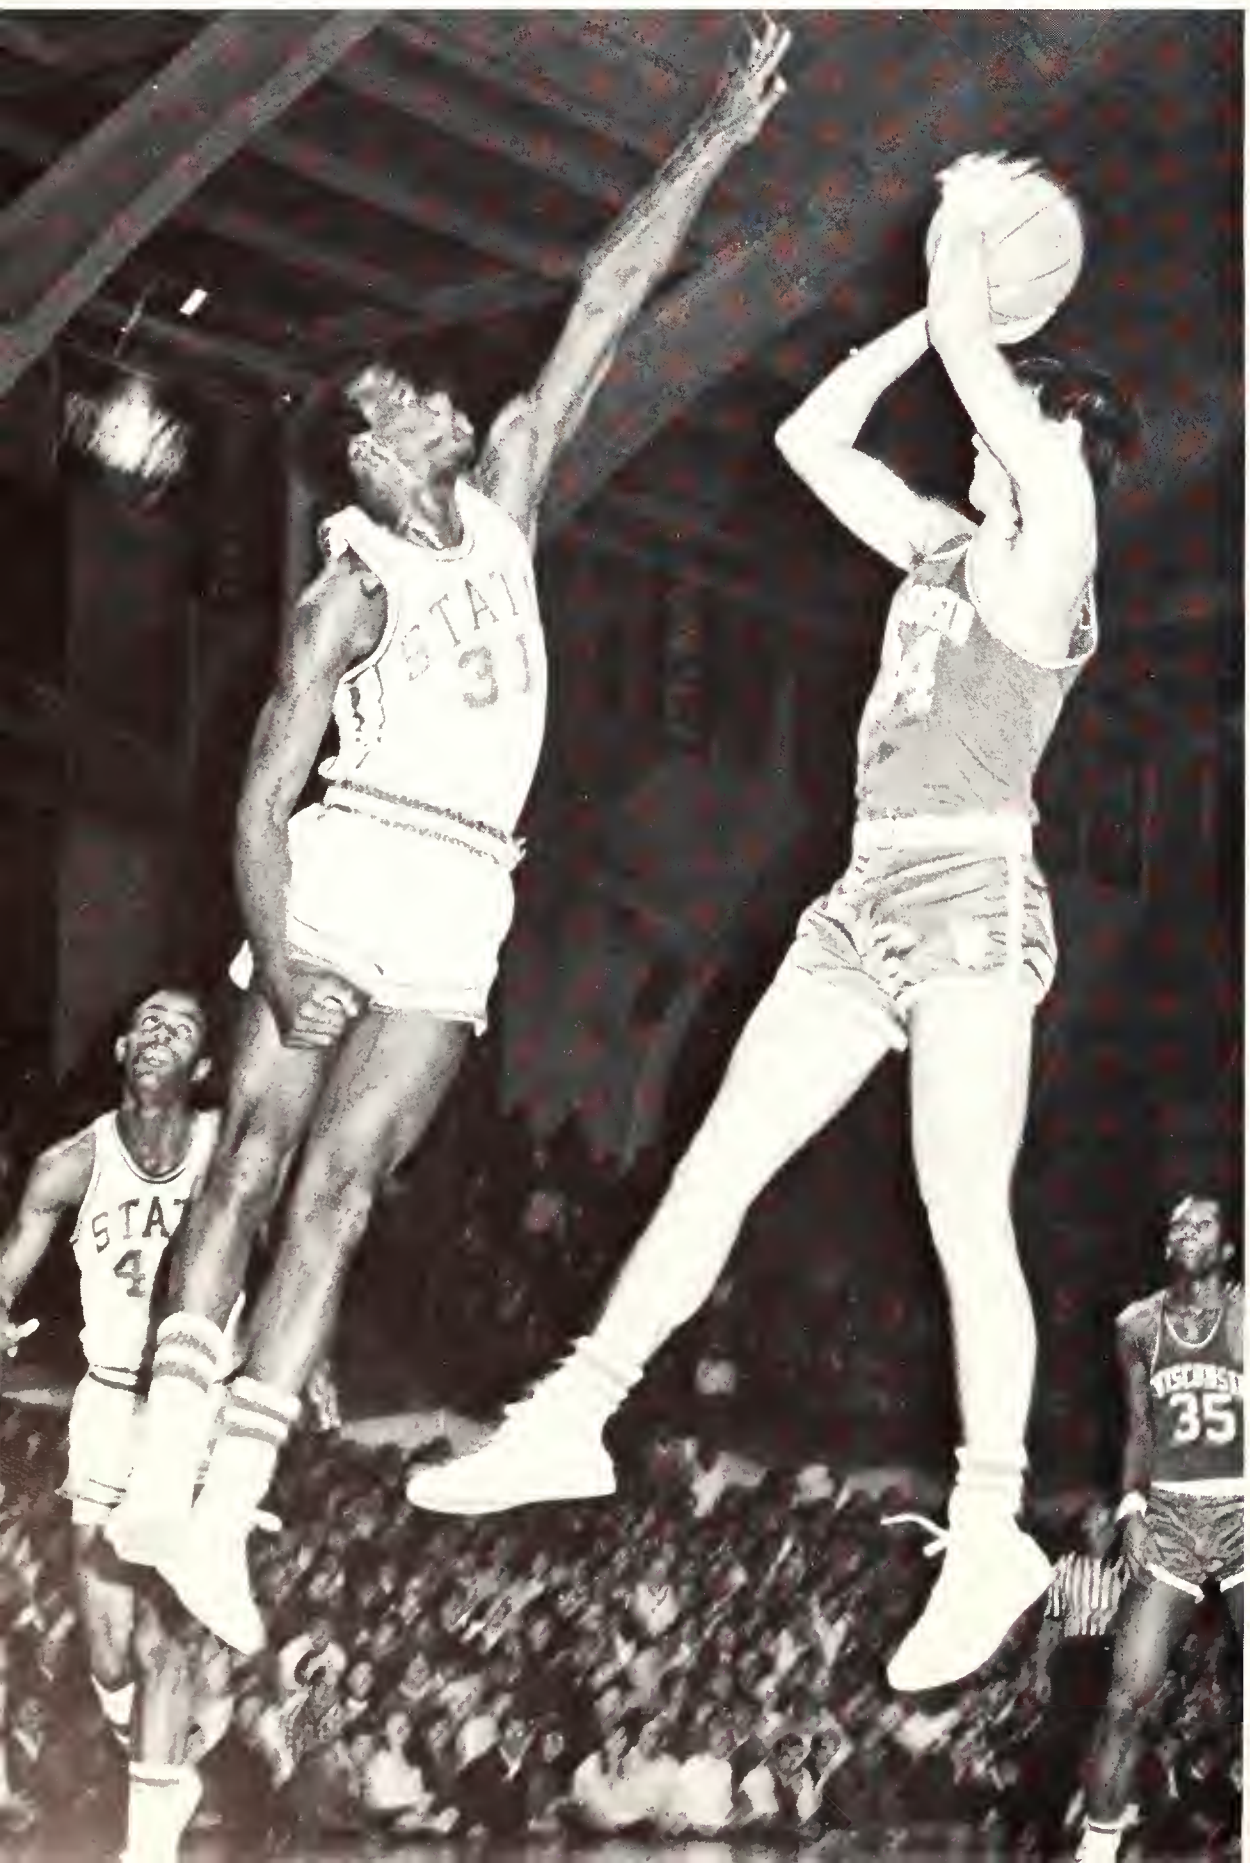
Athletics at Michigan State University are alive. Rugged, as life itself, athletics can be broad-shouldered and barrel-chested. Or gracefully beautiful . . . . . .

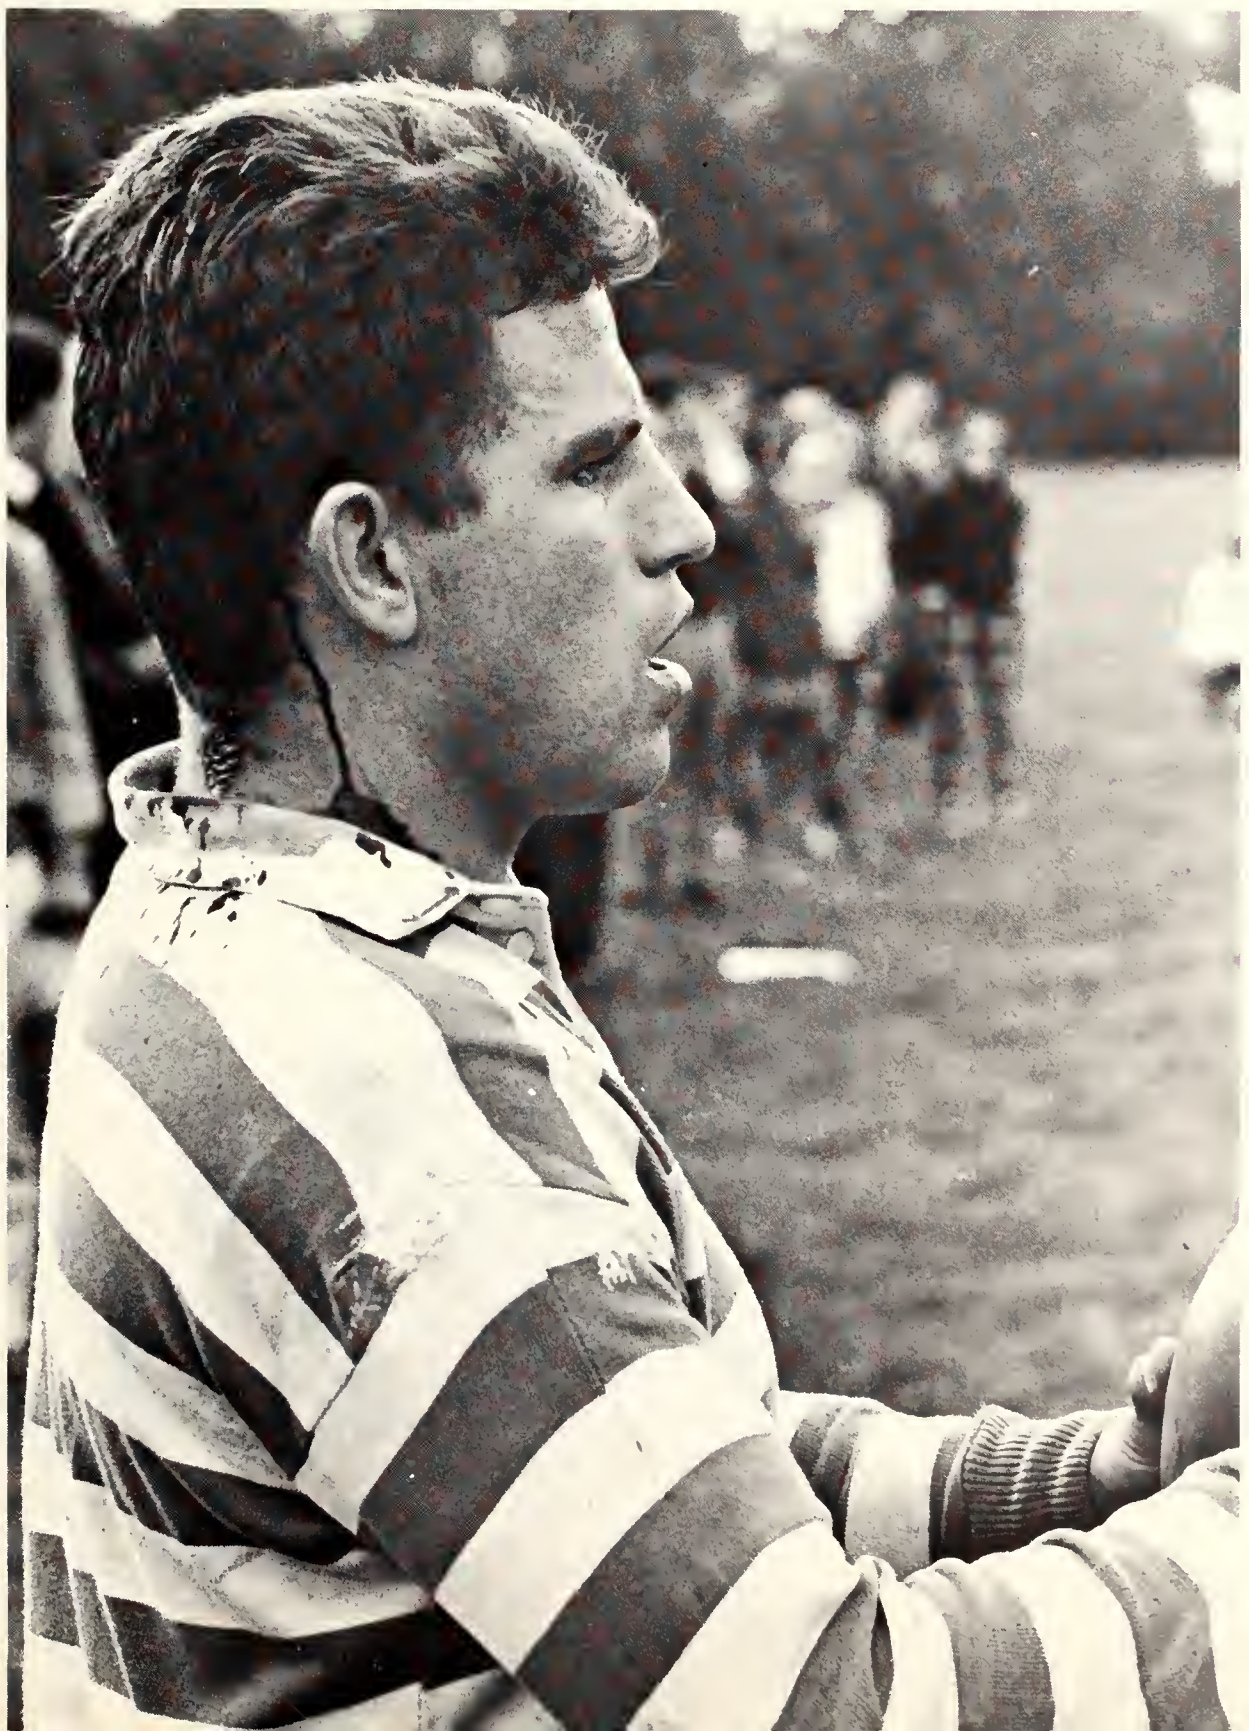
Athletics are a part of this campus; the swagger of a football hero on Friday afternoon. And the library-quiet of the locker room on Saturday morning.



Athletic competition can be fierce, and may leave its blemish on bloody jersey's or in brown bruises.

A more lasting mark will be left in the permanent record of friendships made and memories gained from competition on the athletic field.





There are those who say that the existence of a football stadium that will seat over twice the undergraduate population is superfluous, a needless expense that should have been allocated with more beneficial results elsewhere. What we need are educators, not spectators.

But those who participate know the need to run, to jump, to win. Athletic success is a proud heritage at Michigan State; an institution, not to be lost or changed, but to be preserved and cherished.

"We've figured out every possible way of losing football games by beating ourselves."

Duffy Daugherty

A season of frustration: with less than two minutes to go in the game, Indiana's Eric Stolberg snares a pass on the MSU 1 yard line. Indiana scored on the next play. Defending is Ken Heft, Spartan senior defensive back.

FOOTBALL 1968

During the 1967 football season, Spartan stadium had been a good place for tear-jerking nostalgia. Old friends would meet there every Saturday for a couple of drinks and sooner or later the conversation would always roll around to the inevitable; the great Spartan teams of 1965 and 1966.

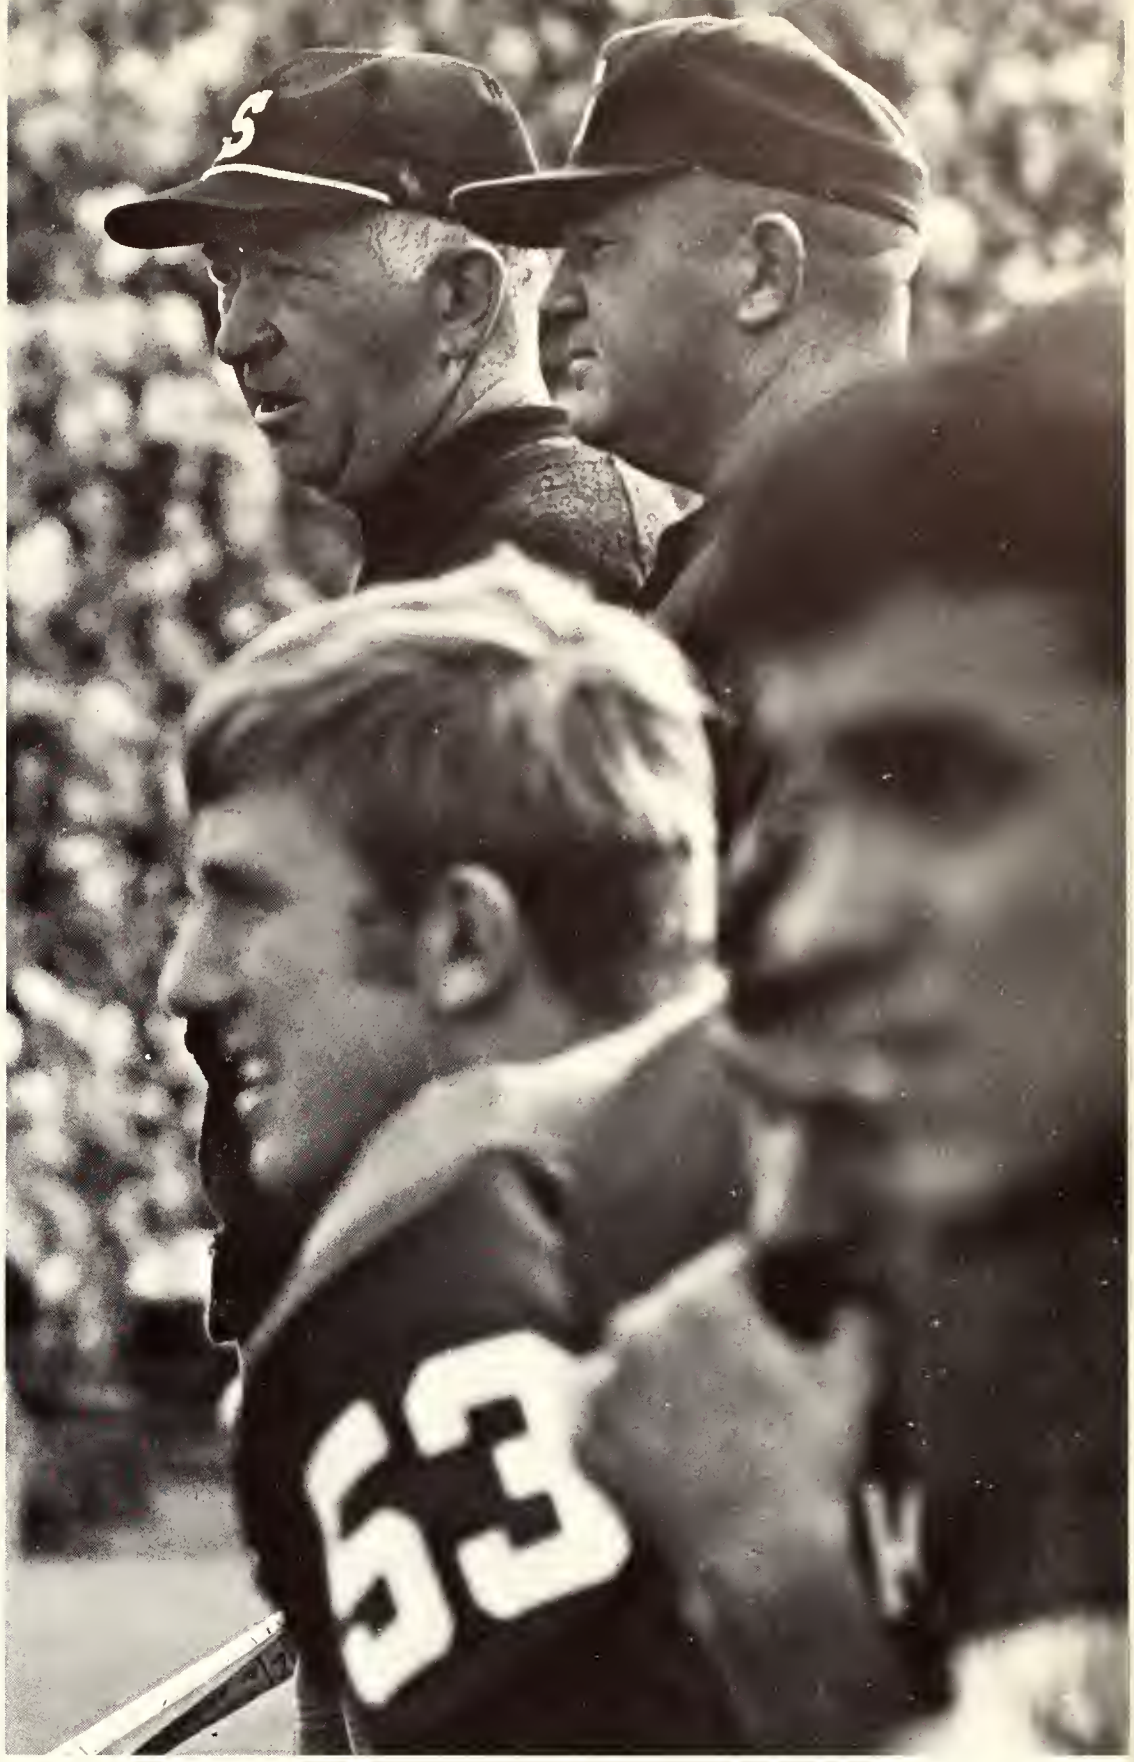
Now the most successful players on those teams are bashing their brains out on Sunday afternoons, playing professional football.

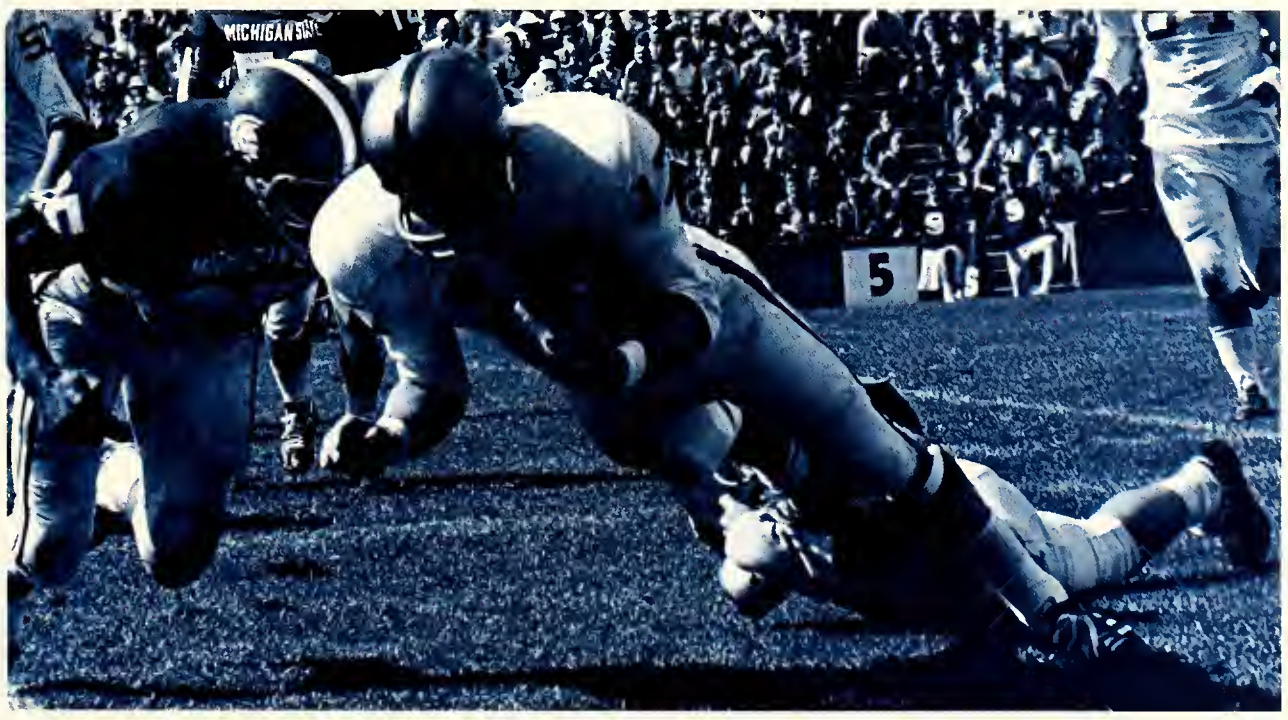
Still, the fans who jammed into the stadium would banter back and forth about old plays and inject a comment or two into the current goings-on:

"Clinton would have given him a good one just to make sure he was dead".

"Bubba would have nailed him good".

That kind of talk was held to a minimum this year. Michigan State had a team we could cheer for. And, too often, a team we could cry for.





Baylor's Alvin Flynn is greeted by Ken Little and Calvin Fox as he lunges for yardage.

Sophomore surprise Tom Love carries on a pitch-out against Baylor. Love was one of the bright spots of the '68 season and figures prominently in Spartan plans for 1969.

Pre-season gab in East Lansing painted a less-than-rosy picture for the upcoming season. A .500 record was held in some quarters as an impossibility. The major reason for this was the inexperience that typified the young squad. Who ever heard of "Scooter" Longmire, Ron Curl, Bill Triplett or Tommy Love?

The interesting part of the season turned out, indeed, to be not who had won, as how well we played; and how close we had come. But close, as they say, counts only in horseshoes, or maybe hand grenades.

In any case MSU, at the seasons end, had the dubious honor of being the finest 5-5 team in the nation. The record could just as easily have been 7-3.

The reason for the difference; fumbles and pass interceptions. In the first 9 games of a 10 game season MSU gave the ball to the opposition 36 times through miscues. In a number of these instances, recovered fumbles or intercepted passes led directly to scores by the Spartan's opponents.

Highsmith finds a hole in the middle of the Indiana defense

Wedyemeyer moves in to pull his man down

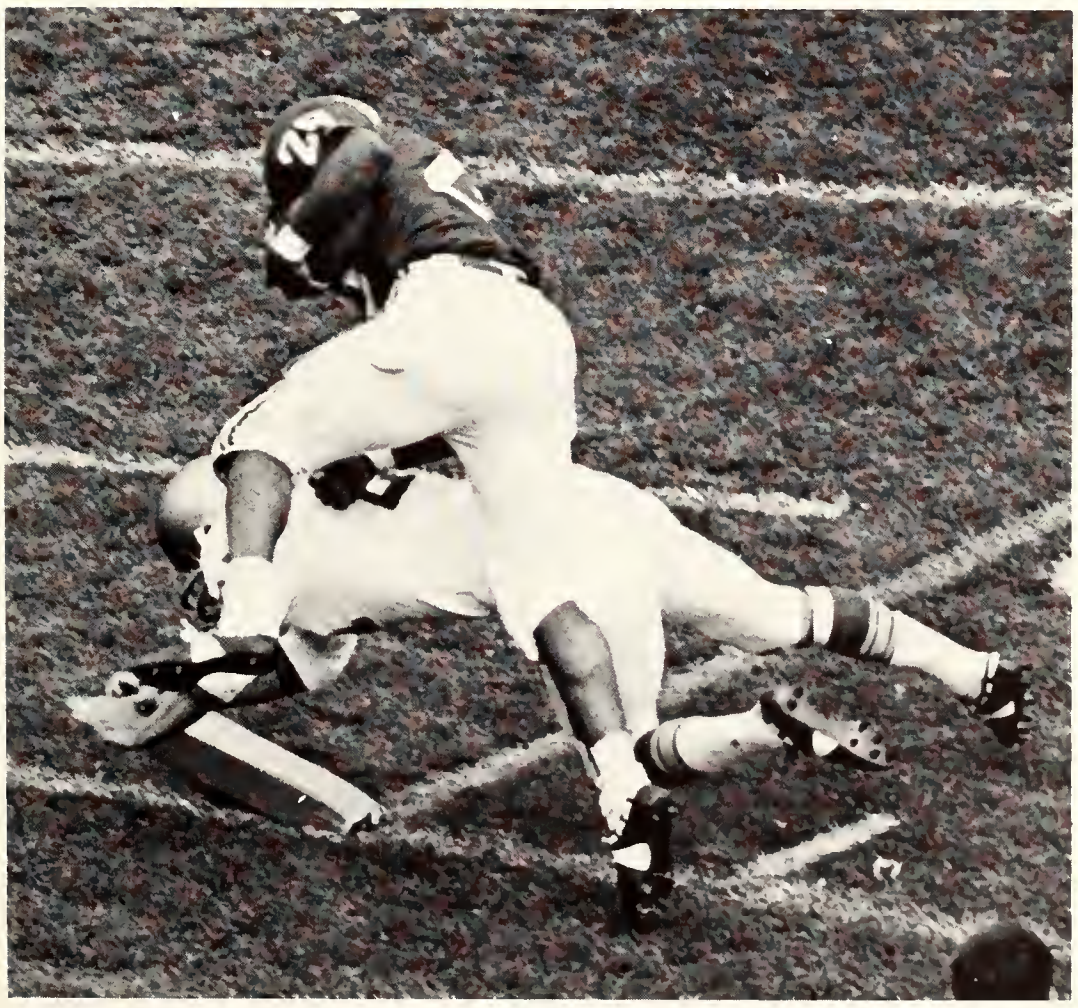
Waters breaks loose after a key interception

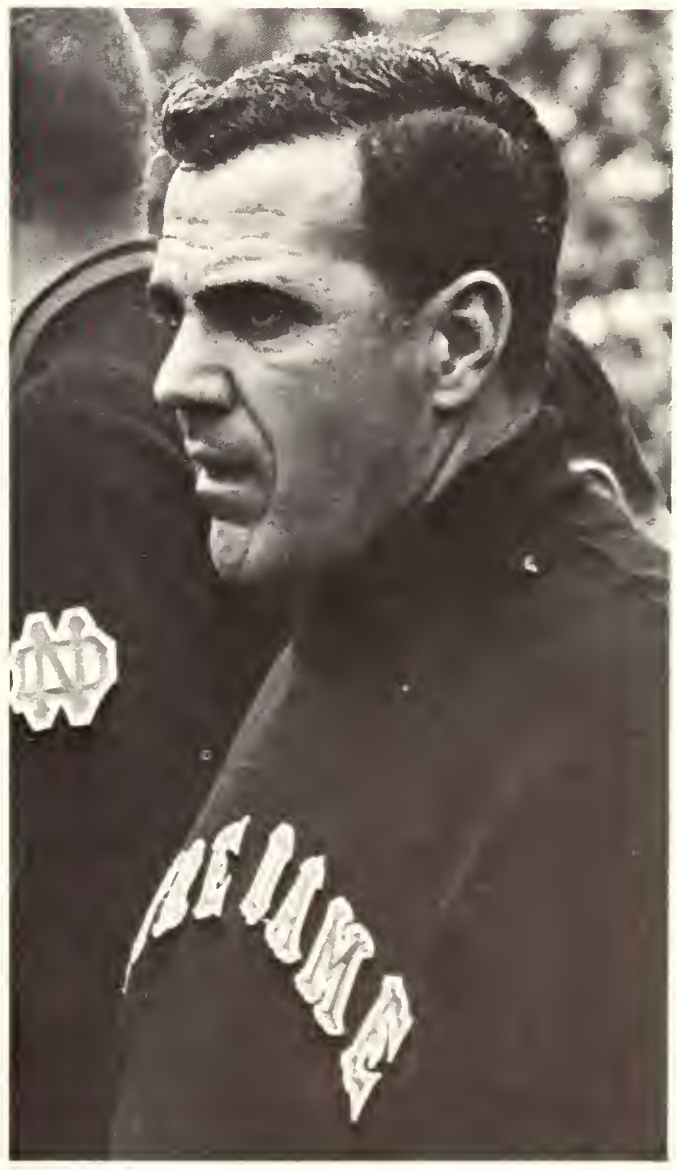
A coach like Duffy Daugherty doesn't like to lose. When it's all over he'll talk about the offense doing this or the defense doing that, and maybe crack a joke. But he doesn't like to lose at all, and he especially doesn't like to lose when he knows he could have won. Duffy wanted to surprise us all this year. He certainly surprised Ara Parseghian.

Notre Dame had established itself as one of the powerhouses of the country when they rolled into East Lansing. They had stampeded over five opponents for an average of 529 yards and 40 points per game.

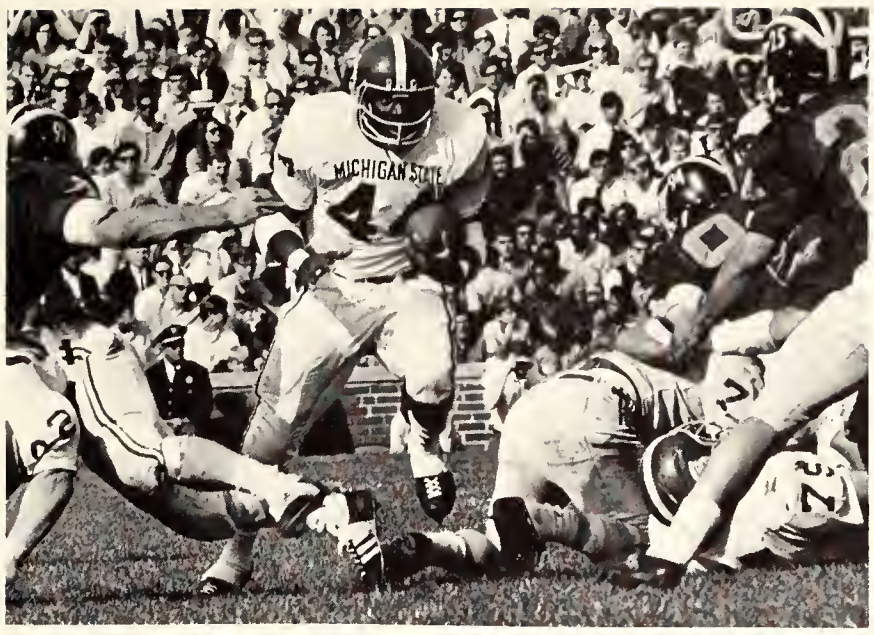
There is no harder fought game in the nation than the annual bloodbath that pits the Spartans against the boys from South Bend, unless it's the Spartans versus the boys from Ann Arbor. The thing that sets the Notre Dame game apart is the fact that MSU has never forgotten the "poll bowl" of 1966.

Two very interested parties view the Spartan onslaught





Sophomore Quarterback Bill Triplett experiments with the center of the Illinois line. Triplett replaced Senior Bill Feraco, injured in the Baylor game.



Earl Anderson finds a hole in the Michigan line. . . .

but it quickly closes as the Wolverines hand MSU its first defeat of the season, 28 to 14

Still, the oddsmakers placed MSU a poor second for the game, confident of another rout à la Seymour-Hanratty. Things didn't work out that way, though; the "dynamic duo" did put on an impressive show, but it was mostly between the two goal lines as a spirited Spartan defense held the Irish to 17 points and extended their losing streak to nine games at MSU.

The game began with a surprise; a successful onsides kick delivered by Gary Boyce to a hefty Notre Dame lineman on the opening kickoff.

It continued that way throughout the game. In both halves, the Spartan defense made two dramatic goal-line stands, stopping the nation's number one offensive power and piling up 21 points for the victory.

Junior defensive end Ken Little combines with Sophomore tackle Ron Curl to put pressure on the Syracuse quarterback.

Spartan fans who watched the methodical destruction of Notre Dame's offense were hoping that the game would begin another string of victories. That didn't happen.

MSU lost the next three games on the schedule — Ohio State, Indiana and Purdue, largely because of tactical miscues — fumbles and interceptions. All that is history now.

The 1968 Notre Dame game will never be played again; there will never be a contest quite like it. The 1968 Indiana game will never be played again — let's hope we never see a demonstration of "Hoosier Hysteria" as we witnessed it last fall.

Graduating seniors can look back on two years of the best college football ever played here with pride. Remember those all-night vigils for tickets?

But those who'll be around for the '69 season are the fortunate ones. They'll see a team next year that has matured; toughened. A team composed largely of talented, quick-moving juniors. It's a team that will move fast with Ron Curl at tackle and Tom Love at tailback. It's a team that will be tough — with Don Law and Ken Little teaming up on defense. Tactically, the team will be led by Bill Triplett, who earned his spurs last year, or Scooter Longmire, who only needs a chance.

Anyone returning to MSU in the fall should tuck away some cash. It'll come in handy for that wintertime California vacation.

Senior All-American tackle Charles Baily puts the skids to Michigan quarterback Dennis Brown as Brown experiments with the Spartan middle line.

SPARTAN MARCHING BAND

"Ladies and Gentlemen—The Michigan State University Marching Band!"

With a clash of cymbals and the thunder of drums the MSU bandsmen kick-step onto the field. The applause, which begins at the South end of Spartan Stadium, increases to an ovation as it waves across the bleachers.

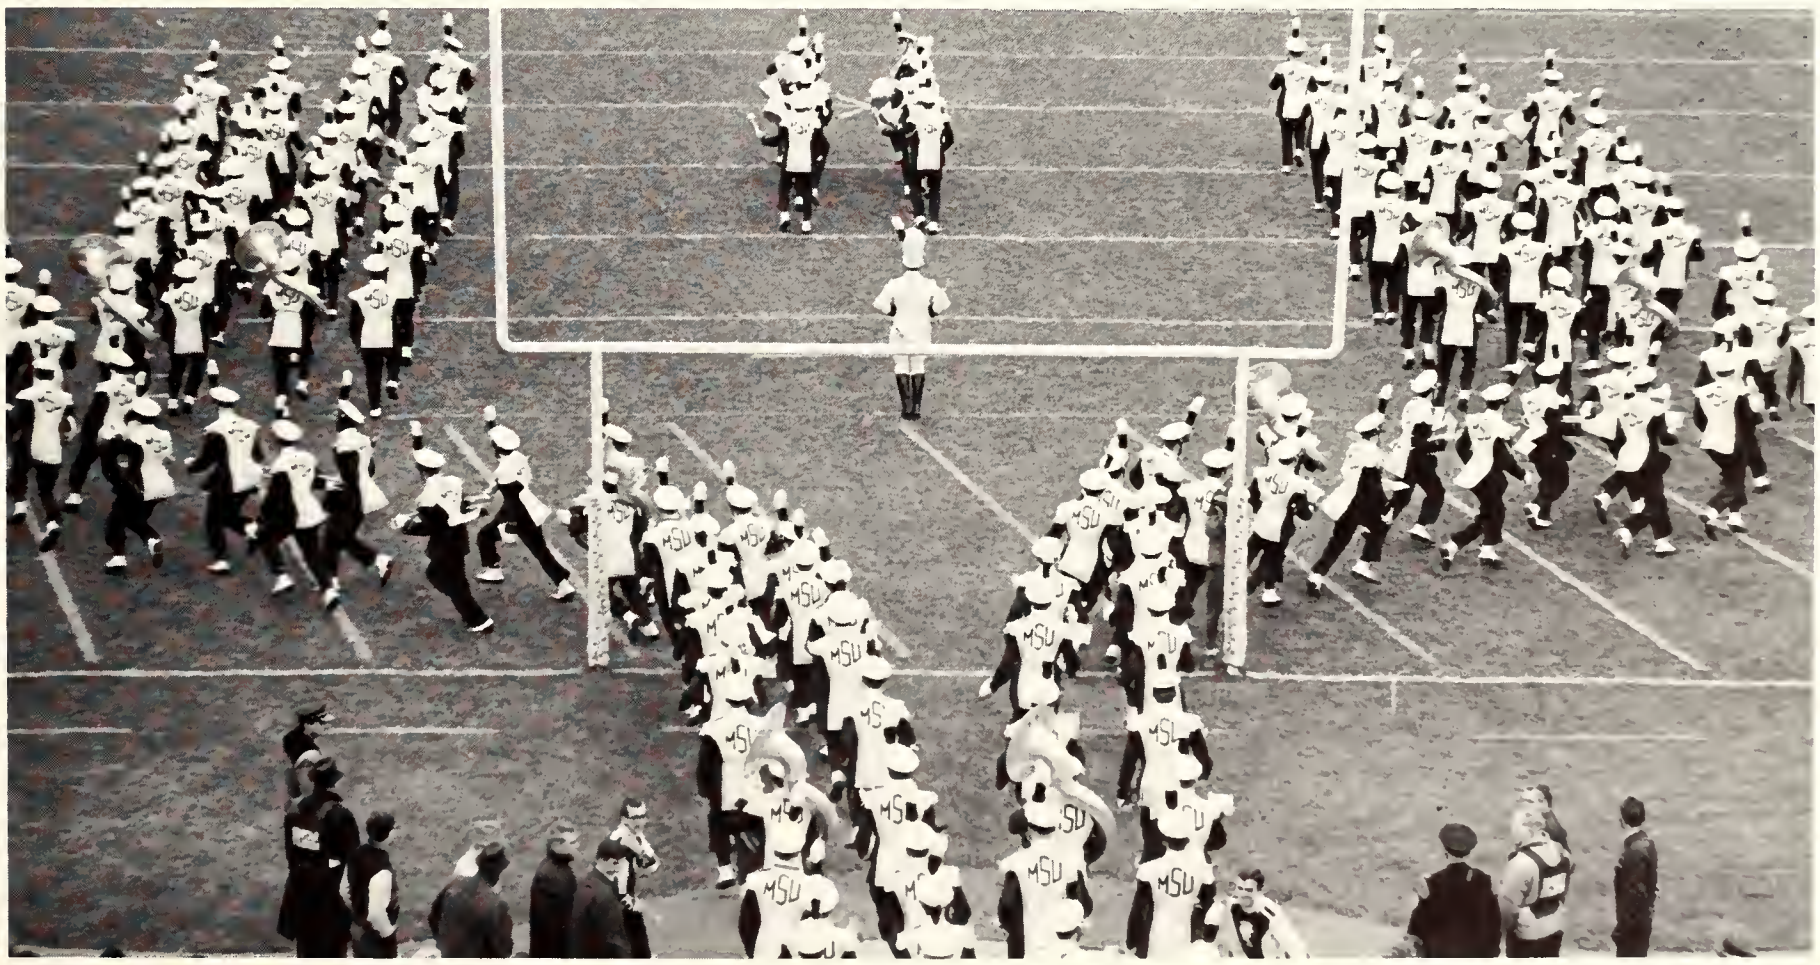
"There he is—Drum Major Bruce Bean, and there they are—the magnificent Spartan Marching Band!"

As the band turns and heads down the field to the MSU fight song, a lump forms in the throat of every Senior, and there is added gleam in the eye of every freshman.

The show everyone looks forward to on game day begins in August—and practice continues until the blowing snow obscures the marching figures as they step over the frosty grass on Landon field.

The band will practice each routine fifty or more times; five days a week for almost four months. And somehow the ovation that greets them as they emerge from the tunnel makes it all worthwhile.

Below a scene to be remembered: perfect symmetry as the band kick-steps into Spartan Stadium.



BASKETBALL

Basketball: sprinting, stopping, starting, weaving

Basketball: "Number thirty-one, for Michigan State, Harrison Stepter"

Basketball: "watch the points keep growwwwwwwing....."

Are Spartan team's bound to win? Will we win this game?

"fight, fight, RAH team FIGHT....."

"Each team in the conference has an almost equal chance to carry off the marbles this year. Home courts will be a decided advantage....."

But Purdue ran away with the conference championship. And MSU beat UM in Ann Arbor, but lost in East Lansing.....Weird.

Senior guard Harrison Stepter brings the ball down court.

"Erratic" is the way to describe MSU's play this season. When we were good, we were so very good, but when we were bad,...

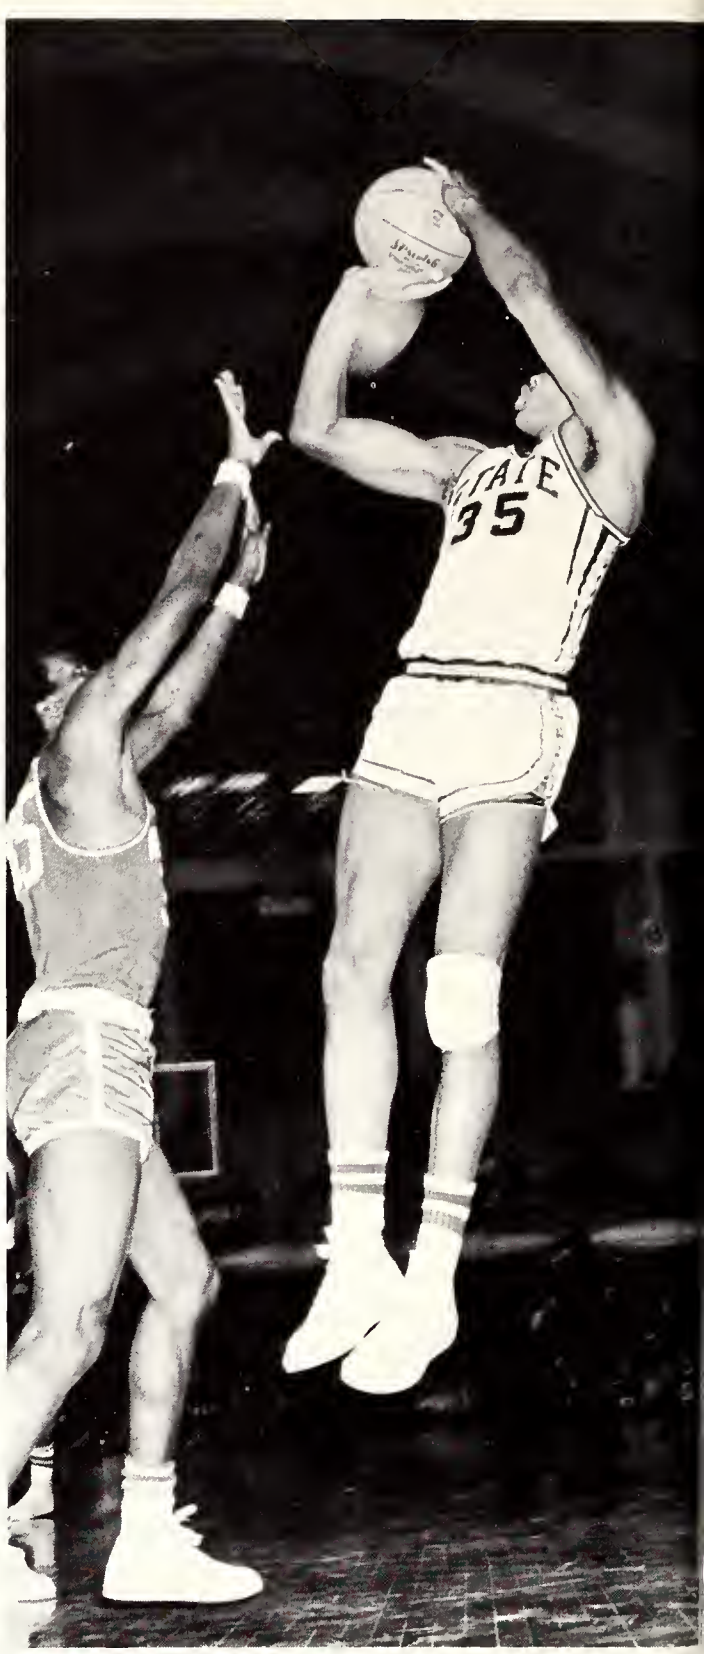
The season began well, consecutive victories over Southwestern Illinois, Western Michigan and Toledo. But then everything became unhinged, and the Spartan's dropped six consecutive games. At that point, things looked bleak indeed.

But a comeback was initiated largely through the efforts of senior center Lee Lafayette, who averaged 22 points per game against Notre Dame, Illinois and Iowa; when Lee was through, MSU was tied for third place in the conference and eyeing the number two spot.

But losses to Wisconsin and Purdue ended all hopes for a championship bid, and the cagers closed out the season with a 12-11 record.

On paper it looks like another mediocre season; which, in a way, it was. Sometimes, the Spartan's played like a 12-11 team.

But there were other times, Ohio State, Iowa, Purdue—when the contrast was amazing. As when Lee Lafayette held Rudy Tomjanovich, Michigan's ace junior center, to just five points. Or when Tom Lick blocked five shots in four minutes. Or the defensive work of Harrison Stepter and Tim Bograkos against Illinois.



Senior center Lee Lafayette goes over his man to get off a shot.

Senior forward Bernie Copeland guns a shot from the outside.

Reviewing his team's efforts near the end of the season, John Benington praised the record of Lafayette, Stepter, Lick, Copeland and Holmes. All five are graduating.

"We'll miss each of them, I'm afraid, sorely," Benington said. "But most particularly Lee— his general attitude this year was one of determined pride, and his scoring shows that."

Lafayette is the third-highest scorer in Spartan history; going into the Minnesota game he had compiled 1,159 points.

Looking towards next season, Benington says' simply: "a rebuilding year— in the classic sense. Our immediate problem will be lack of height, but that's only a starter. Frankly, we need a center to replace Lee."

Benington's problem will be alleviated a little by the eligibility next year of Ron Gutowski and Ralph Simpson, both of whom stand a good chance to land starting varsity berths.

But replacing men like Lafayette, Copeland and Stepter may prove to be impossible in just one year; a good bet is that the 1969-1970 basketball season will be notable for some outstanding individual performances, but lacking in overall team strength.

SOCCER

Michigan State's soccer team once again wound up on the top of the NCAA heap sharing the number 1 spot with another team, the University of Maryland. For the second year in a row, Gene Kenney's booters found themselves a victim of that remarkable Michigan State phenomenon, the championship tie.

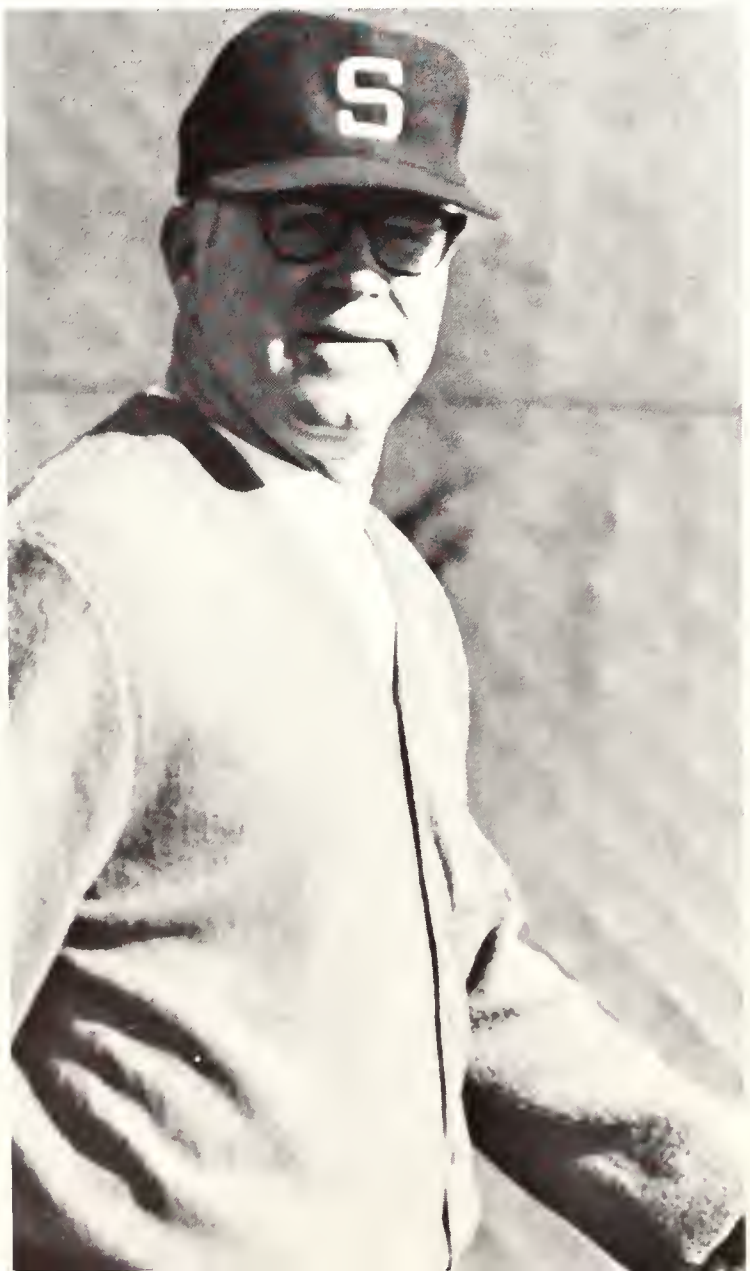
Despite this disappointment, MSU's soccer team has established a reputation and record it can be proud of. Tony Keyes, the team captain, led off the list of records with a 28 goal season, being named to the All-American first team with his Jamacian teammate Trevor Harris. But two standout players don't make a championship team without a consistent effort from the rest of its members, and some exceptional performances in the clutch.

Tony Keyes would argue with the definition of soccer as a "non-contact" sport. Here he lunges for position.

Hustling to position, Archer arrives a second too late.

(Right) Goalie Joe Baum.

(Below) Coach Gene Kenney.



The season began with expectations of rebuilding a questionable defense and correcting injuries to key offensive men like Ernie Tuchsherer, and Alex Skotarek. The "doubtful" defense by the end of the season had only allowed 6 goals, and shut out 12 teams while the offense totaled a record 75 goals.

Soccer success at Michigan State is synonymous with the success of the 12 year career of coach Gene Kenney who has a record of 113 wins, 10 losses and 12 ties. The chances of continuing their impressive performance are enhanced by the return of Harris, Tuchsherer and Alex Skotarek on offense who will be backed up by nearly the same defensive team with an added advantage of experience.

CROSS COUNTRY

During his first year as cross country head coach Jim Gibbard was careful not to make any sweeping predictions of his young, but dedicated, team. "I think we'll do better than last year, but our lack of depth will probably keep us from being a top contender", is the only prediction he would make as the season began. That seemed like a fairly reasonable prediction considering that out of the seven men on the team, only Roger Merchant (captain) and Ken Leonowicz had seen Big Ten competition.

Throughout the season, Gibbard continued with his cautious adjective–juggling about successive opponents; and throughout the season his young team knocked each and every one off. At the end of the season, having placed first in the conference, posting MSU's first undefeated season in eleven years and placing ninth in the nation, (NCAA meet) Gibbard only smiled.

Determined perseverance is the main reason for the improvement. The entire team exuded it, but Kim Hartman and Ken Leonowicz stand out as shining examples. Both took turns breaking records at Forest Akers; they finished the season running together, trying for first place and a new course and varsity record in the final meet with Miami.

INDOOR TRACK

Not so long ago, the indoor track season was regarded as a sort of interim goof-off period, with competition decidedly low-key and coaches more worried about injuries than actual performances. Today lightning-fast track surfaces and technical innovations like the fiberglass pole have changed all that. In most events, indoor track is every bit as competitive as outdoor, with records often set and smashed in the same afternoon. Michigan State ended the indoor season with a 1-2 dual meet record and a respectable fourth-place conference finish. Prospects for the '69 outdoor season look bright following the impressive performances of juniors and underclassmen indoors.

The most dramatic individual effort of the indoor season was by Senior Bill Wehrwein, whose time of 1:08.6 for 600 yards smashed the American indoor record. Wehrwein also was anchor man on the Spartan mile relay team, and his come-from-behind spurt for the quarter-mile leg often hovered at the 46-second mark. MSU's mile relay team, comprised of Jim Bastiann, Roger Merchant, Pat Wilson and Wehrwein topped the conference with a time of 3.13.4 at the Big Ten meet.

Sprint events have been a question mark for Track Coach Fran Dittrich, but the picture has changed markedly since the enrollment of freshman Herb Washington.

Although unable to compete in varsity events because of conference rules, Washington ran a series of exhibition sprints indoors, and tied the Big Ten record for the 60 yard dash at 6.1

The over-all prognostication for track is a favorable one; sophomores Kim Hartman and Dan Simeck lend strength in the distance events and the outdoor season should be marked by closely-fought battles on all levels.

GYMNASTICS

In lacking tangible competitive team effort, a gymnastics meet becomes a conglomeration of individual performances, each with its own spectator following. In this respect a gymnastics meet can resemble a miniature version of a three-ring circus. Team competition is there, however, and with it strategy; competition in the form of an individual's effort to outscore his opponent, and strategy in the form of quiet roster-juggling by coaches. And in this respect gymnastics can take on the air of a chess game. This season's 7-3 record turned out to be a proud team achievement after key injuries to gymnast's Cliff Deihl and Joe Fedorchik cast a shadow of gloom in mid-season.

Gymnast's Toby Towsen, Dennis Smith and Norm Haynie distinguished themselves in their respective events, and in the process filled the gaps caused by injuries. Towson, praised by Coach Szypula as "Michigan State's greatest all-around performer" was especially effective in his specialty, floor exercise. Next year's outlook: dubious. With eight letterman graduating, Szypula hard-pressed for a repeat of last season's fine performance.

WRESTLING

Wrestling enthusiasts will tell you it's muscle, guts and finesse that make the sport great. MSU used a combustible mixture of all three ingredients to win its fourth consecutive Big Ten Championship, a conference record. Coach Grady Peninger looked for a tough battle in the Big Ten tournament: "It could go down to the final matches, or one team could get hot and run away with it", he said. The Spartans ran and ran and ran.

MSU ripped the tourney wide open, capturing a record-setting six individual crowns to pile up the highest team total ever, 93 points. Heavyweight Jeff Smith won unaminous outstanding wrestler honors by pinning every man he faced to grab his second straight title. Going into the NCAA's Smith had compiled an unbelievable 46-2 record during his two-year career. Other Spartan Big Ten kings were Gary Bissell (123), Keith Lowrance (137), John Abajace (152), Tom Muir (160) and Jack Zindel (177). All five will defend their crowns in 1970.

After mid-season losses to powerhouses Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, MSU bounced back to chew up five league foes to post a 9-2 dual meet record. The highlight of the schedule was 20-9 shredding of the Maize and Blue. Early in the season the Spartans took the Midlands Tournament trophy with Smith, Abajace and John Schneider as individual champs.

Before the trophies started to gather, Peninger had termed 1969 as a rebuilding year after three great teams. Peninger and assistant coach Doug Blubaugh have been rebuilding, all right, a power dynasty. In seven years as coach, Peninger has accumulated an enviable record of 56-20-3. MSU has been without a losing season for the past 11 years.

FENCING

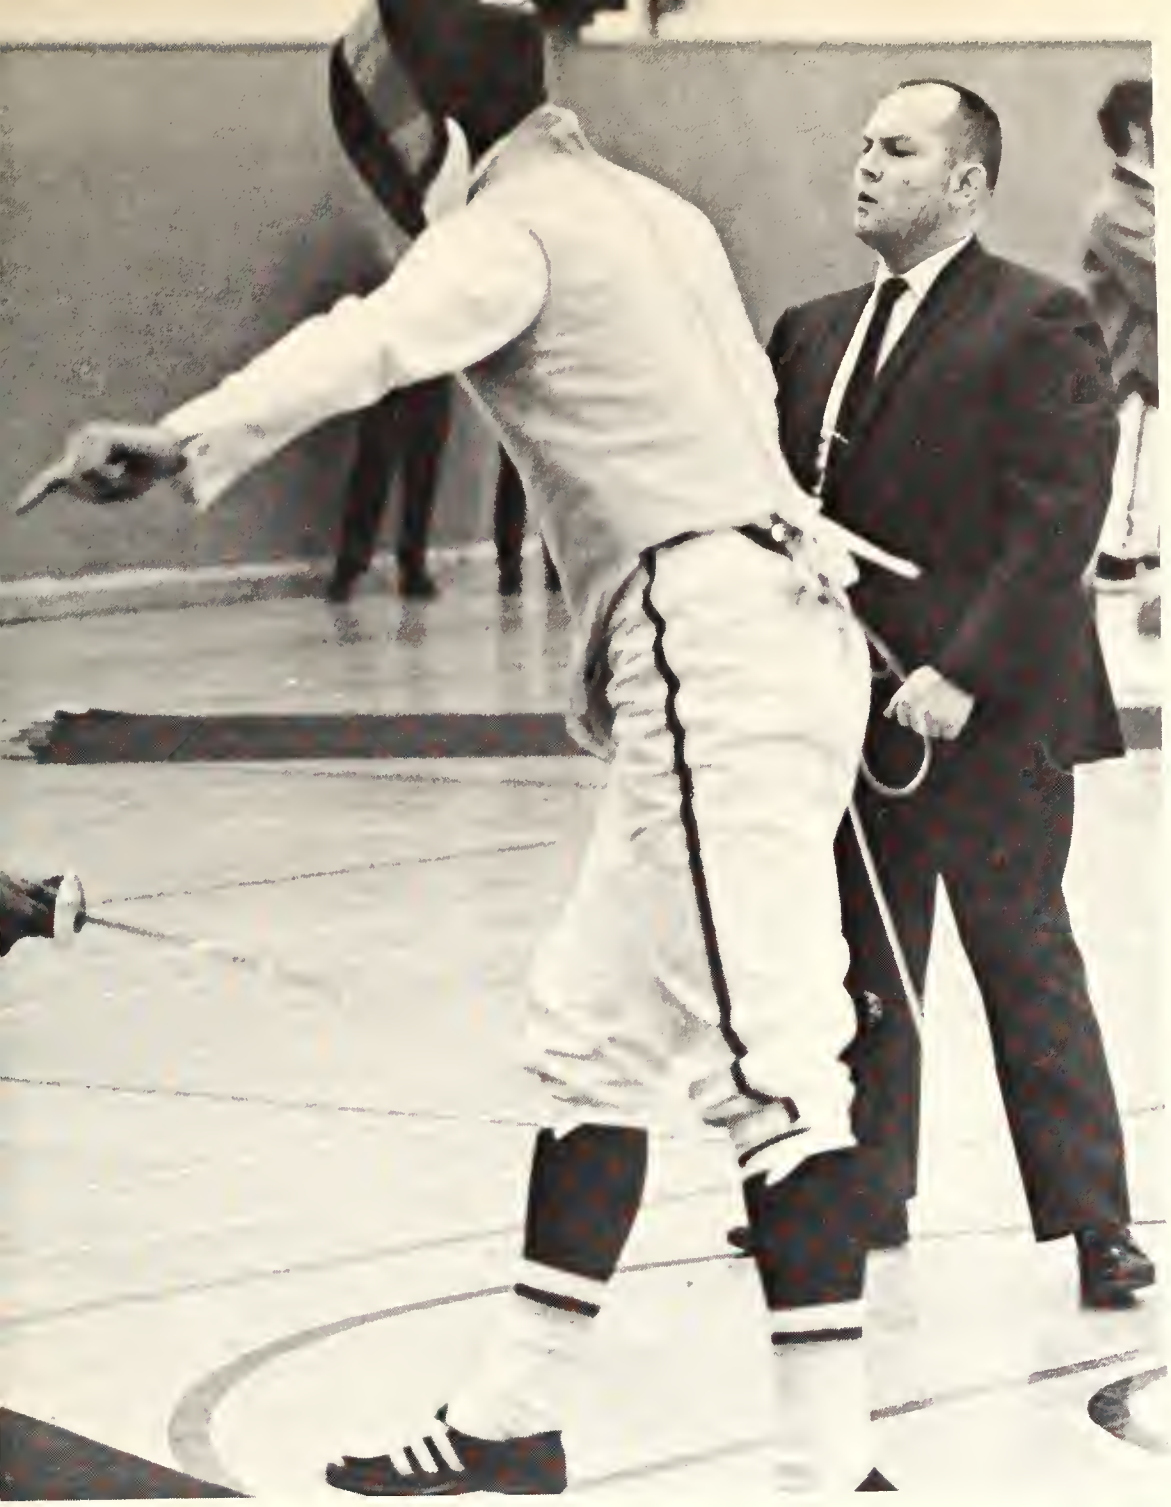
Fencing at Michigan State is a sport almost reserved for those who enjoy athletics as an art form. Executed properly, a fencing match resembles a ballet, complete with the rules of composition and motion.

Fencing is an individual effort, physically and psychologically pitting opponents against one another. It is an obsession for its participants, a ritual hundreds of years old civilized by blunted blades and steel-mesh masks.

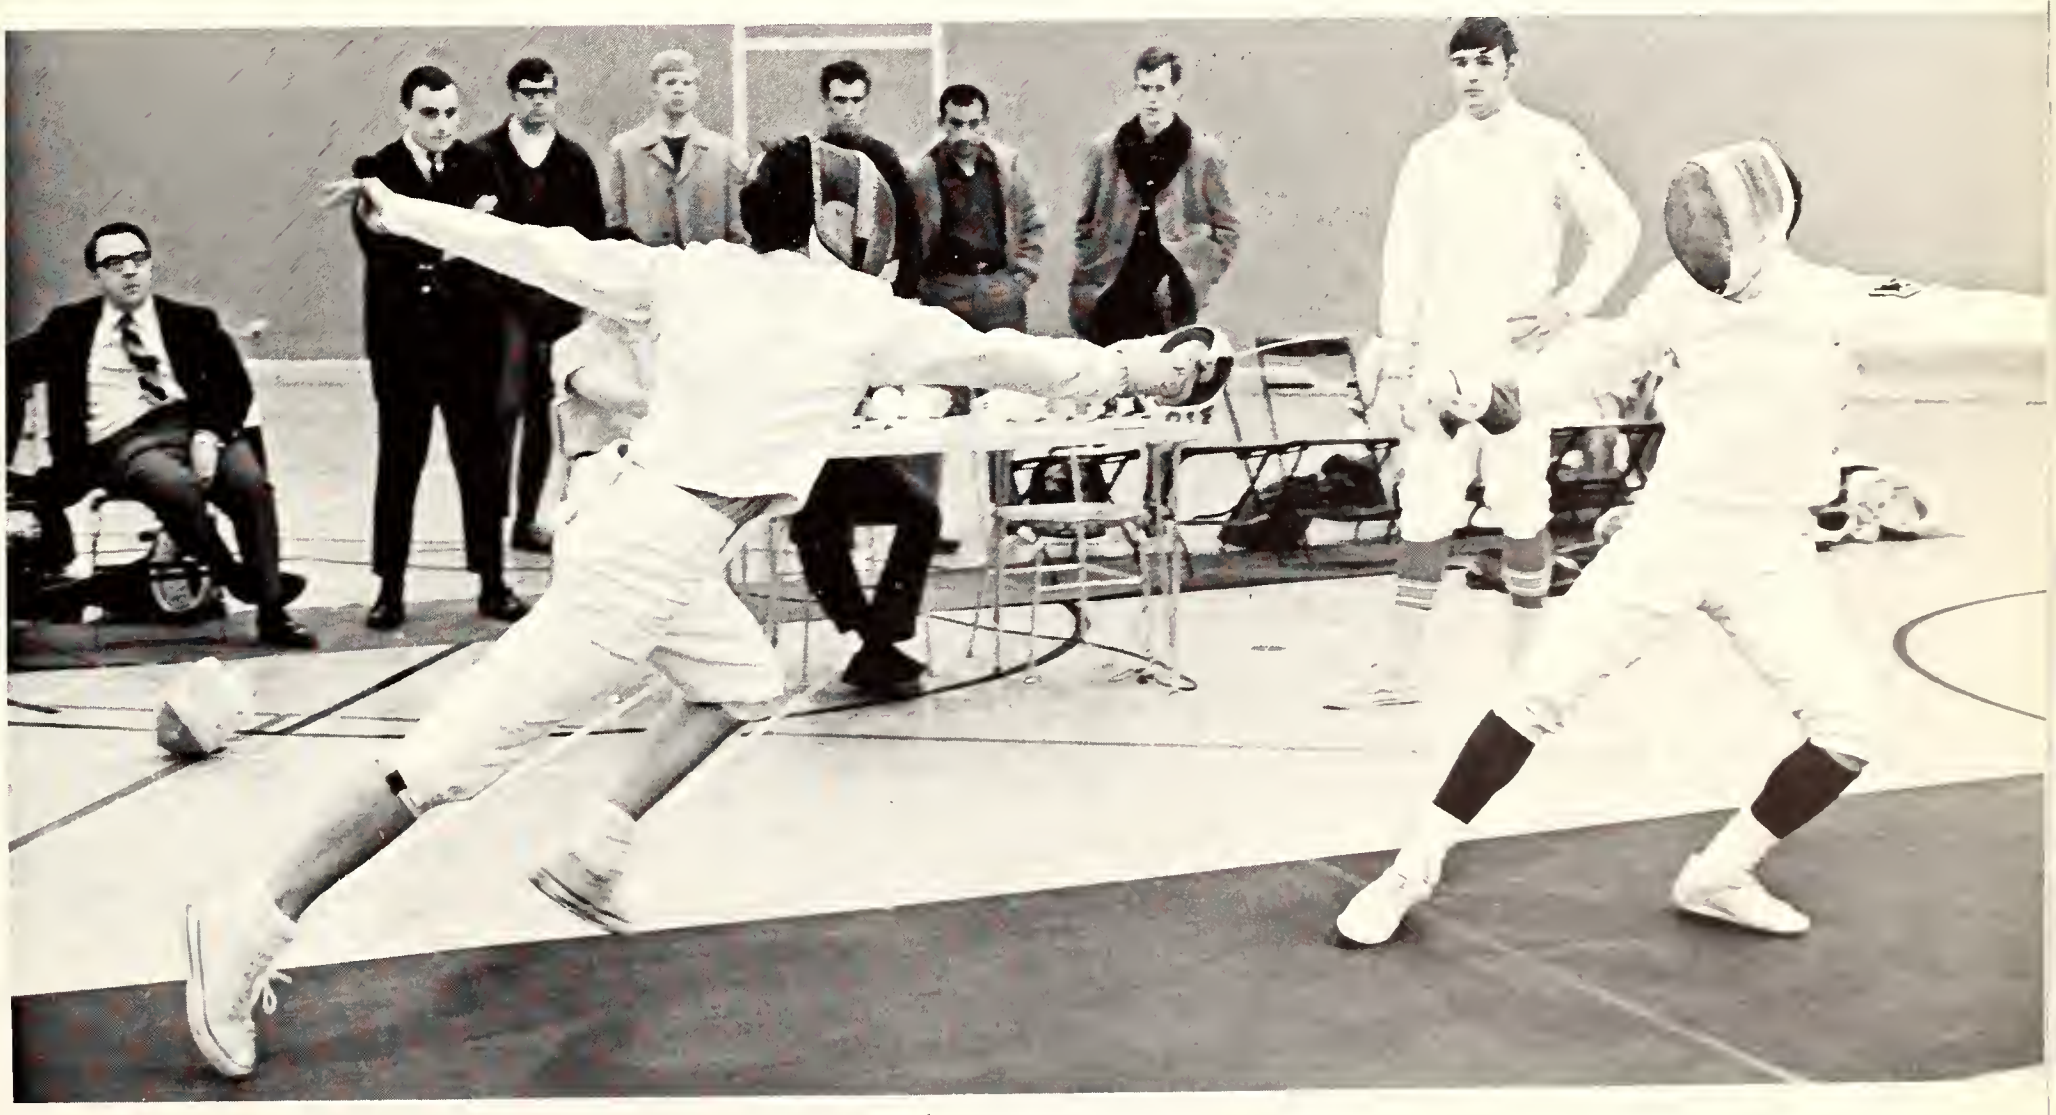
As a varsity sport, fencing draws a small but incredibly perceptive group of fans, whose knowledge of the sport rivals that of the fencers.

MSU finished the dual meet season with the same overall record as last year—6 wins, 8 losses.

Glenn Williams, a junior who had never fenced before his freshman year here, posted his finest record with 36 victories at foil, with only 5 defeats. Fine performances were also given by captain Don Satchell (foil) and Bobby Tyler (epee).



Spartan foilman Glenn Williams lunges for an opponent. Williams has developed into one of the most capable bladesman in MSU fencing history.



HOCKEY

Rick Duffet moves to intercept a Minnesota shot.

Coached by Amo Bessone, and led again by senior center Ken Anstey, the Spartan hockey effort for 1968-69 followed last year's roller-coaster precedent; the kewpie doll of sixth place. Ending up with an 11-15-1 regular season record, the skaters dropped their first (and therefore only) post-season playoff game to powerful Western Collegiate Hockey Association champions Michigan Tech.

For the second consecutive year Anstey led the team in scoring with over 30 points. Junior Bill Watt was second in total points. Senior Nelson DeBenedet was third.

One of the team's bright spots was goaltending, handled by juniors Bob Johnson and Rick Duffet. Duffet's 2.4 goals-against average led the WCHA, and he figures prominently in Bessone's rebound plans.

Highlights of the skaters season were an upset victory over Denver and a two-game sweep over the Maize and Blue. The Denver game marked the second time that team had been defeated on its home ice in three years. The victories over UM at mid-season were sweet revenge for the Spartans, who had previously dropped two to the Wolverines.

The performance of the freshman squad (3-0) is an encouraging note for harried Amo Bessone. Two of the most outstanding performers of the season, Ken Anstey and defenseman Bob DeMarco, will be graduating, and the loss could seriously impair '69-70 rebuilding. New blood á la the freshman squad will be welcome relief.

Why isn't this man smiling?

SWIMMING

Swimming — is a race against other athletes, against time, against yourself.

Swimming — is endless sprints, 72-lap workouts and aching lungs.

Swimming — is one of those sports where you've got to be excellent to be considered good. And to be excellent, you've got to be a phenomenon.

For the fourth season in a row, MSU finished third in the Big Ten, behind (who else) Indiana and Michigan. And the Spartans posted a dual meet record of 12-2, losing to (who else) Indiana and Michigan. Still, 12-2 is 12-2; not a bad showing in the Big Ten — where else would a 12-2 record net you third place?

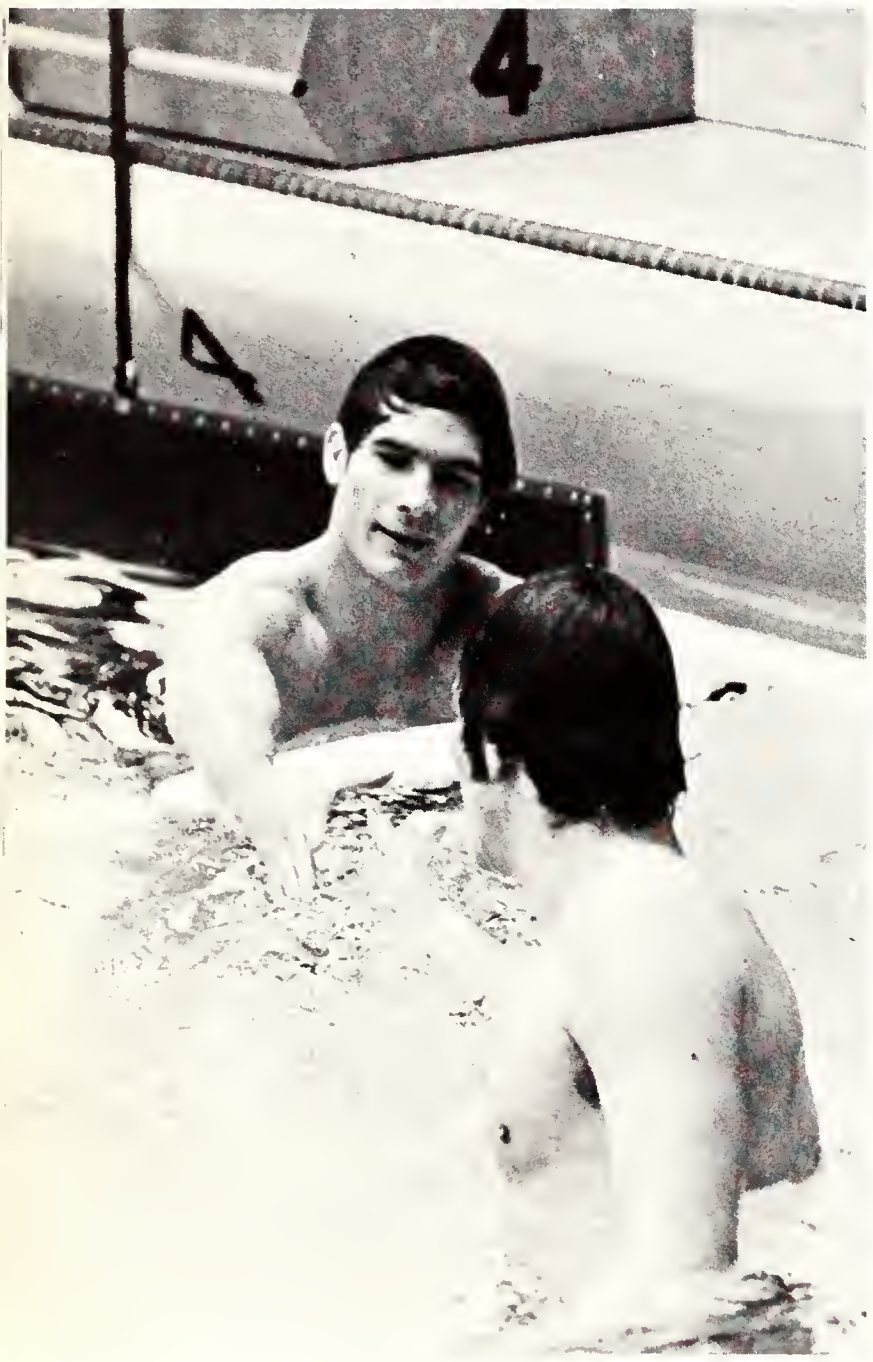
Excellent performances by veteran talent, plus a few welcome surprises from newcomers sparked the swimmer's efforts. Senior Don Rauch continued his expected leadership in the sprints, and as anchor man on the 400 freestyle relay nailed the conference championship with his surging four laps in 46.2.

Sophomore Van Rockefeller proved to be an invaluable addition as he moved up into varsity ranks. Competing in the butterfly, Rockefeller smashed the varsity record for the 200 with a time of 1:55.94. Junior Bruce Richards scored an upset victory in the 400 individual medly and posted his best time for the distance: 4:16.09, in the conference meet at Wisconsin.

Although the MSU diving attack mysteriously faded during the conference meet, diving was a real strength during most of the season. Led by senior Duane Green and junior Jim Henderson, the Spartan divers performed outstandingly well, most notably against Ohio State, when the divers' triumph gave the Spartans a team victory.

Next year, again, three words may well sum up Big Ten swimming—Ohio State and Indiana. Both had fantastic freshman teams, and both teams— along with Michigan, are perennial powerhouses, not just in the conference, but nationally.

In view of this, MSU coach Charles McCaffree is adopting a wait-and-see attitude. "There is just no way to evaluate the effect of freshman eligibility yet," says McCaffree, "we'll just have to wait for the season to begin and go from there."



Swim Coach Charles McCaffree keeps an eye on the score sheet as well as his stopwatch as the swimmers care first who won or lost the race (above).

BASEBALL

May 25, 1968; a dusty, dirty day for the Spartans. A double loss to Minnesota smashes all the dreams for a Big Ten baseball title. And the Spartans, keyed for a victory celebration, tumble from the glory of a first place finish to the anonymity of second.

Minnesota, with a day's rest, methodically picks away at the Spartan defense. Second place.

What can be said of a team that batted .300 and finished second? A team that hit 31 home runs to the opposition's 13, whacked out three times as many triples and scored over twice as many times as anybody they played. But finished second.

First Baseman Tom Binkowski holds a UM player close

Mel Behney finishes his delivery

Coach Danny Litwhiler said it all as he slowly walked off the Minnesota playing field: "that's the finest all-around team I've ever coached".

It's difficult to disagree with him. Players like Harry "Spud" Kendrick, (56 hits, .392 batting average) Steve Garvey (nine home runs in 43 games) and Mel Behney (struck out 107, earned run average: a fantastic 1.78) amazed Spartan baseball fans throughout the baseball season.

For '69 the team should shape up stronger on the defensive side, a bit weaker offensively. A fine springboard is provided by the pitching staff, led this year by senior Mickey Knight. Pitching, combined with the effectiveness of a ball-hawking infield, are the basis for MSU's rebound aspirations.

TRACK

"Runners to your marks. . . . . .set. . . . . ."

The gun sounds, breaking a library-silence, and the months of rigorous practice, vegetable laden diets and hamstring muscle rubs are culminated as Spartan cindermen leap, push, or run to gain team points.

"Running" track involves considerably more than lacing on a pair of spikes or "buttering" an ailing leg with "red-hot" Analgesic balm.

Track is more than a sport. It is an individual challenge the runner must psychologically prepare himself for each time he competes. And if he wins, the vomit that trickles down his cheek may be the only indication of victory.

MSU posted one of the poorest records of recent years last season, finishing seventh in the conference and showing a frustrating 1-2 dual meet record.

Roger Merchant grabbed a first place in the Big Ten meet, winning the 1000 yard run. Senior Roland Carter set a new Big Ten and MSU record in the pole vault with a leap of 16 feet, 3 inches.

TENNIS

He's got you, 40-30. You feel the heat as the sun blisters the back of your neck, and the asphalt is so warm your sneakers stick as you race around the court.

"Service"! The ball tears in, but your return is past him, in the corner and the point belongs to you. Now, be calm. Set your feet, your mind for his next shot.

This is Tennis. It takes agility, speed and guts, and at MSU you'll find all three elements hammered into a team.

Gray, Good, Bufy, Vollwieter, Ichesco, Raines and Mitchell. All new men this year: a rebuilding season in the classic sense of the word. Coach Drobac lost four "of the best I've ever had" last year in Mickey Szilagyi, Rich Monan, Chuck Brainard and Bob Pritula. The Spartans finished second in the conference, largely because of the efforts of these men. Monan, '68 captain, captured the Big Ten's number two singles championship while teammate Steve Schafer picked off the honors in the number five singles division.

This years prospects look anything but rosy with a squad built around so much youth. The Big Ten has perhaps the nations' most powerful tennis squads this year.

GOLF

The 1968 Spartan golf team moved up a slot last year on the conference scale, placing second in the Big Ten. Nationally, the team was ranked ninth.

An excellent nucleus of young players returns to Forest Akers this spring. Captain Larry Murphy leads the way by virtue of his fine fall tournament performance. The team is further strengthened by the return of Lynn Janson, 1968 Michigan Amateur champion and sparkplug of the team.

Other veterans for the Spartans are Lee Edmundson, Dennis Hankey, Steve Leighan and Tom Steenken.

Coach Bruce Fossum is optimistic when he talks about the season, and with good reason. If the MSU linksmen can stay loose this year they stand a good chance to carry off the marbles in the conference.

CLUB SPORTS

Baseball, football, hockey and golf are likely to exist forever, and their popularity will increase as long as man himself exists. However, there are those who wish to participate in a sport but do not find any of these popular sports adequate. Due to this endless search for new ways of recreation, club sports has been born on the Michigan State campus.

There are twenty-one club sports here at Michigan State. They run the gamut between sky-diving and rugby. The participants in these sports are not the ordinary sports enthusiasts. They are searching for that extra something, that extra thrill, that extra excitement, that extra satisfaction which cannot be found within what may be regarded as the popular campus sports.

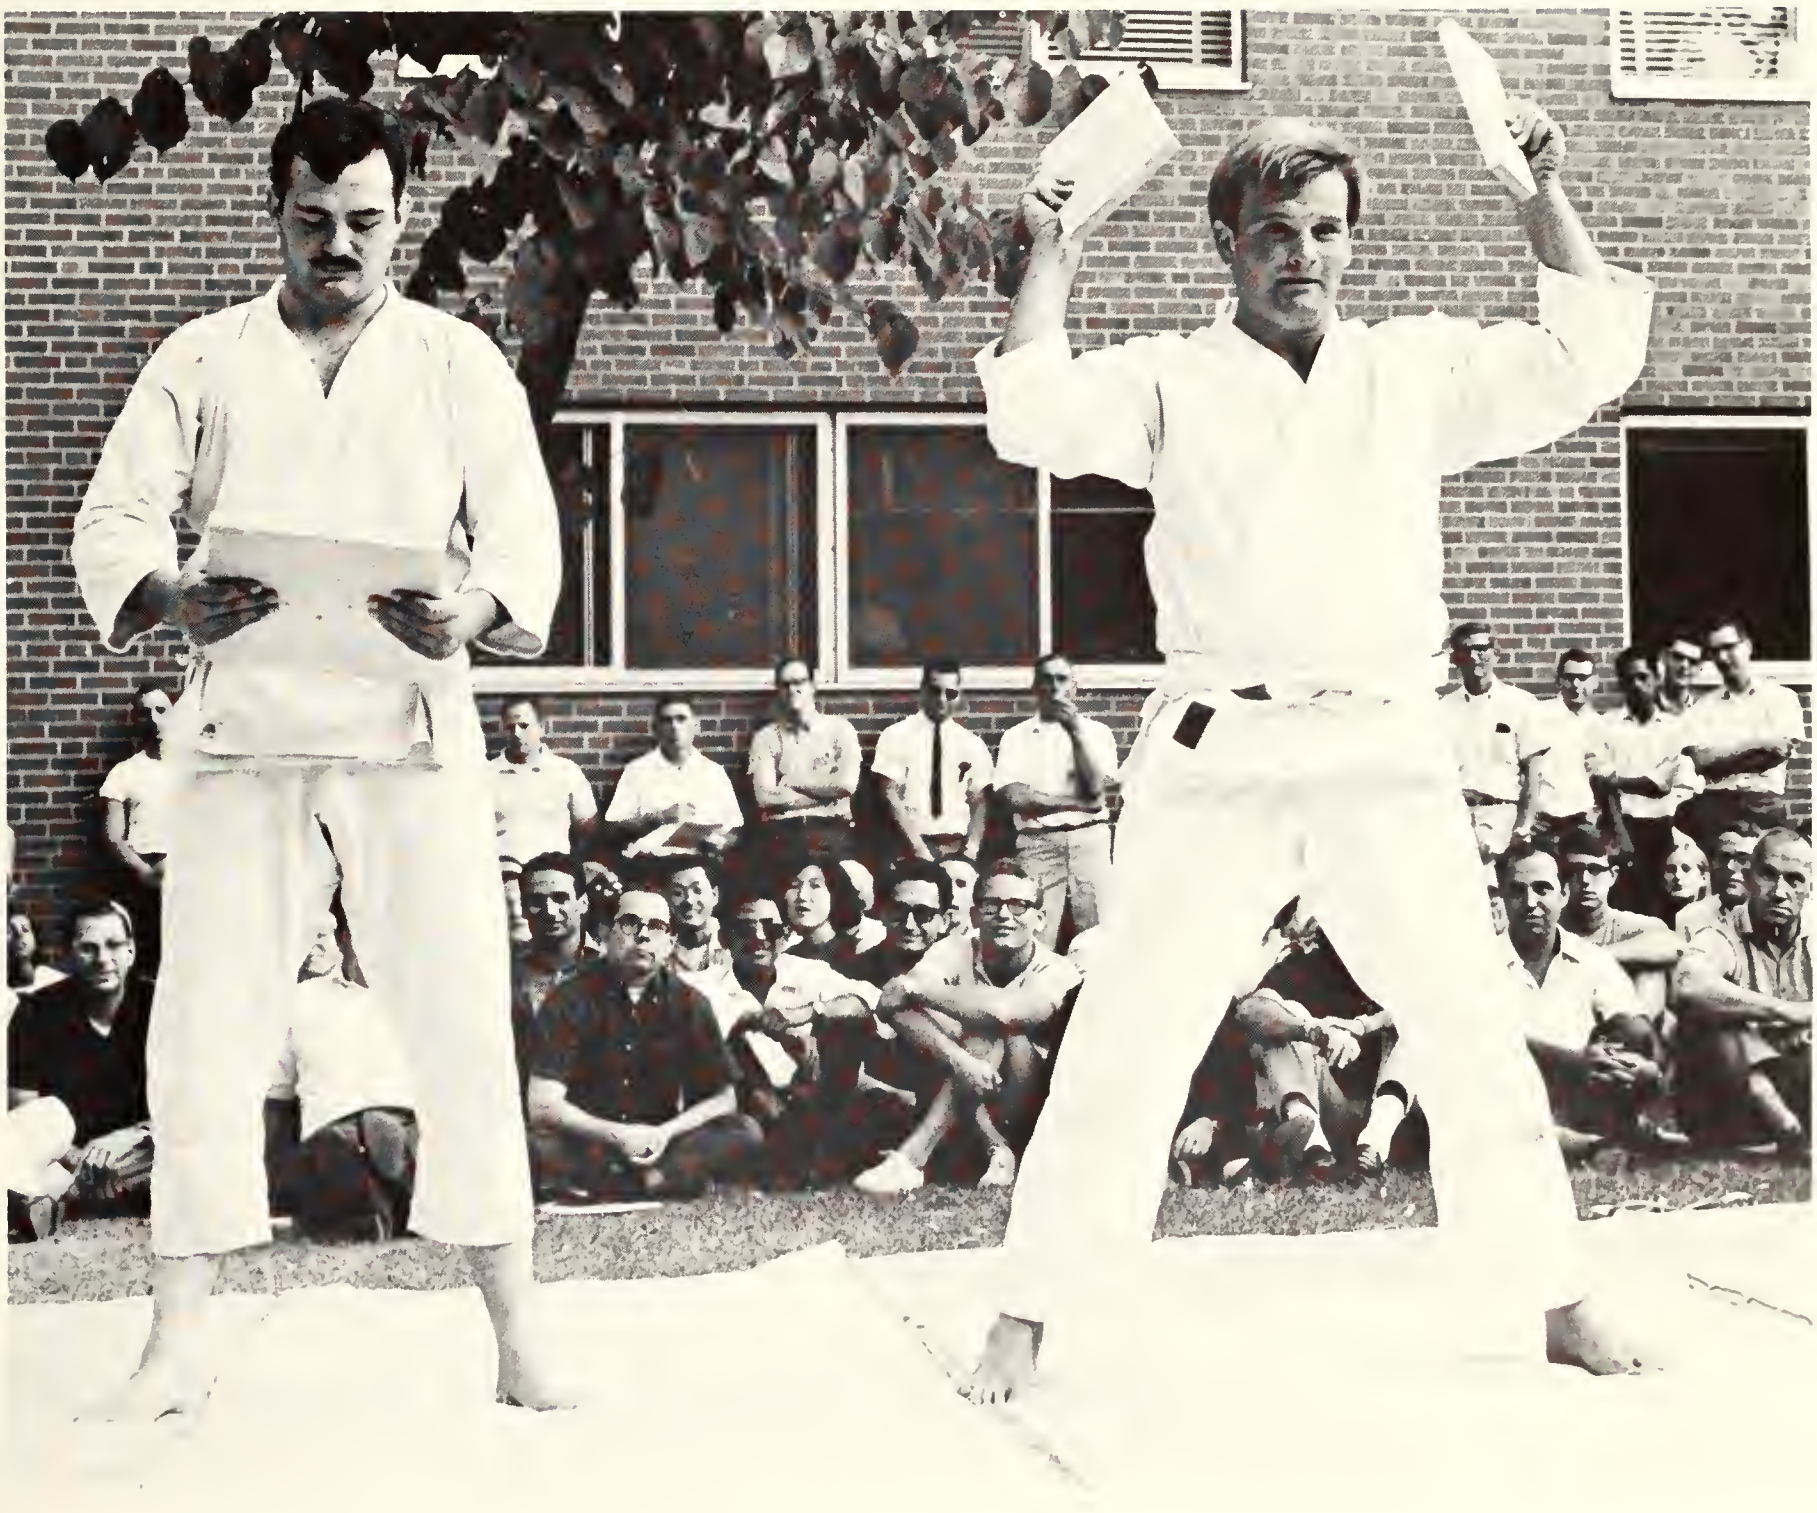
In a complex multi-versity, such as Michigan State, there is a need for a variety of different club sports, to satisfy the extraordinary sports enthusiasts. Club sports provide outlets for students with similar interests to relieve the pent up hostilities and frustrations caused by an average school day.

Even though square dancing may not be considered by the majority of students as one of the more exciting club sports, the MSU Promenaders gear their functions to those that do. The Promenaders have a tendency to dance off their final examination blues. The Promenaders belong to what may be referred to as the Club sports which require "minimum" body contact. Other club sports in this group are the Sky Diving Club, the Sailing Club, and the Cycling Club.



For the active members of the Karate Club, board breaking becomes affectionately referred to as honerable Excedrin headache number 784.

Members of the La Crosse club use their sticks (or is it cudgel sticks?) to fend off the opposition.

Jean Claude Jablonski, an MSU Ski Club member, demonstrates near-perfect symmetry as he attempts the difficult jump turn.

At the other extreme of the "minimum" body contact club sports are the "maximum" body contact club sports. The Rugby Club, La Crosse Club, Judo Club and Karate Club fall into this category of club sports. Members of these clubs enjoy action. They enjoy the smash in the mouth, the broken legs and the crushed bones. For these sports enthusiasts pain is synonomous with participation, and agony is a measure of ecstasy.

Whether you favor "minimum" or "maximum" body contact sports, there is a club sport at Michigan State to give the individual that extra something which cannot be found in the so-called "popular sports."

Men's Intramurals: Everyone Wins

When classwork is finished, or temporarily set aside for another time, (and the latter seems to occur more often than the former) students at MSU often find a need to escape from the pressing competition of the books.

For men, a form of extra-curricular activity is needed to relieve these feelings brought on by academic doldrums. Men need another form of competition; the competition of physical exercise and the feelings of satisfaction that can go with it.

The satisfaction that comes from smacking a paddle-ball; from running hard until it aches, or from a long hot shower when it's all over: all of these are enjoyed every day by hundreds of men in the Intramural building.

One of the highlights of the Intramural calendar is the annual Turkey Trot, an endurance race that takes place each fall term. The participants run a race through an obstacle course as they vie for the coveted first prize: a large live turkey. This year 167 males gasped, wheezed and trotted in this unusual event. Fall quarter also features Intramural football. In 1968, 4,305 students on 287 teams in four leagues participated in Intramural touch football. No other IM sport has so many participants actively competing for first place than this pigskin pastime.

Nighttime action on the IM fields: 4,305 men participated in intramural football last year.

These turkey trotters seem to be discovering new positions for the limbo as they vie for the big bird.

Phillip Okere, of Nigeria, watches IM basketball with interest.

The store room in the Men's Intramurals building is probably one of the busiest University-sponsored services on Campus. In one month's time the store room issues more than 7,000 transit lockers; on the average, over 4,000 paddle balls are issued and over 3,000 basketballs per month. If you'll excuse the pun, male students really keep those store room attendents on the ball.

The Men's Intramural facilities are open to students and faculty eighty-eight hours each week. The building is used continuously for Physical Education, Intramurals, Club Sports and Varsity participants. According to Harris F. Beeman, Director of Intramurals, each year the building's hours are extended, "and we are still unable to handle everyone who wishes to use our facilities".

In winter, all sports move indoors, and the IM building's facilities are put to maximum use. The physically fit student can find everything at his finger tips within the Intramural Building. There are 12 handball courts, three gymnasiums, a steam room, a weight lifting room, indoor and outdoor pools, a fitness room, and a room for wrestling. In addition, there is space available for badminton, paddle ball, volleyball, basketball, archery, and baseball practice. If there is a sport you want to participate in, there are facilities for you in the Men's IM building.

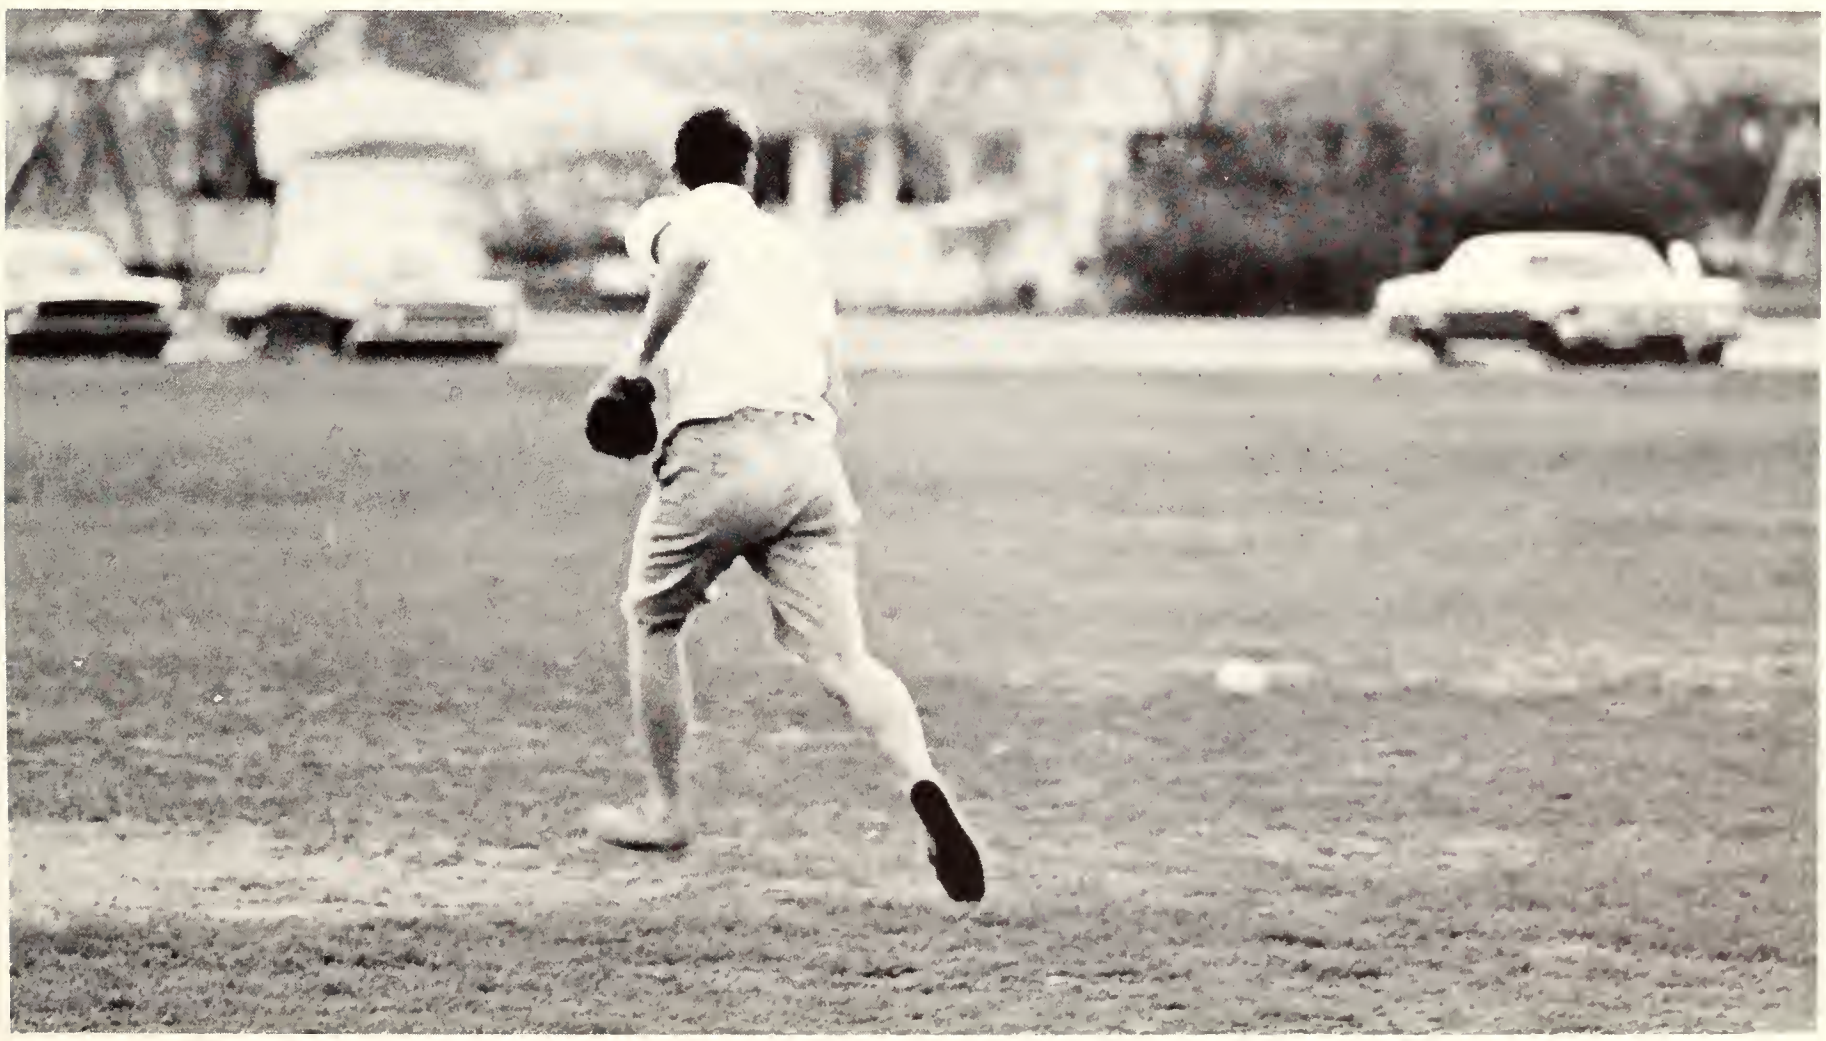
Spring Sports Close Out Intramural Competition For 1969

In the spring, softball becomes the number one activity on the Intramural sports agenda, followed closely by track and tennis. These three sports are played extraordinarily hard, for they offer the last chance for the team to gain points toward the coveted all-sports trophy.

The all-sports trophy, is awarded to the fraternity, the residence hall, and the independent team which has accumulated the most points in Intramural competition. The trophy symbolizes the team's efforts throughout the academic year. It is the physical recognition of the team's accomplishments in football, bowling, paddleball, badminton, handball, table tennis, swimming, volleyball, softball, tennis, golf, and track. It is no wonder that the all-sports trophy becomes the most sought after, and most highly regarded team award.



What men work at to win, women play at to have fun. That statement approximately sums up the difference between the programs of the men's and women's intramural programs. Where the men are focused on the areas in which they may compete, the women tend to center their activities around the facilities available in one building located opposite "Convent Corner". They seem to have a little less concern about who wins and who loses and are slightly critical of the competitor and slightly in favor of the "good loser". That's the Women's IM program — "Sports for all", without a winner.

WOMEN'S INTRAMURALS

The activities of Women's Intramurals center, logically, in the Women's Intramural building. For seven days and seven nights coeds from all parts of campus make full use of the facilities, trying to forget the intellectual barbecue of the books.

For many people, the Women's IM building is a campus landmark but little else. For those who take advantage of the program, however, it immediately becomes much more. It can mean the surging heat of the steam bath or the numbing comfort of the cold shower afterwards. It can mean a relaxing swim or a frantic workout.

It's all there; but competition is de-emphasized in favor of a more rewarding program of fun and friendship.

The nature of athletics calls for some form of competition — It seems that as soon as athletic skill develops beyond the novice stage you're a self-proclaimed "expert", ready to take on anybody.

Women's Intramurals is no exception, and to this end "combatants" are cordoned off into three leagues of sorority, independent and residence hall, and let go.

The results are sometimes physically taxing, but never emotionally. Gleeful enjoyment and a spirit of fun pervades at the Women's Intramural building; everybody wins.

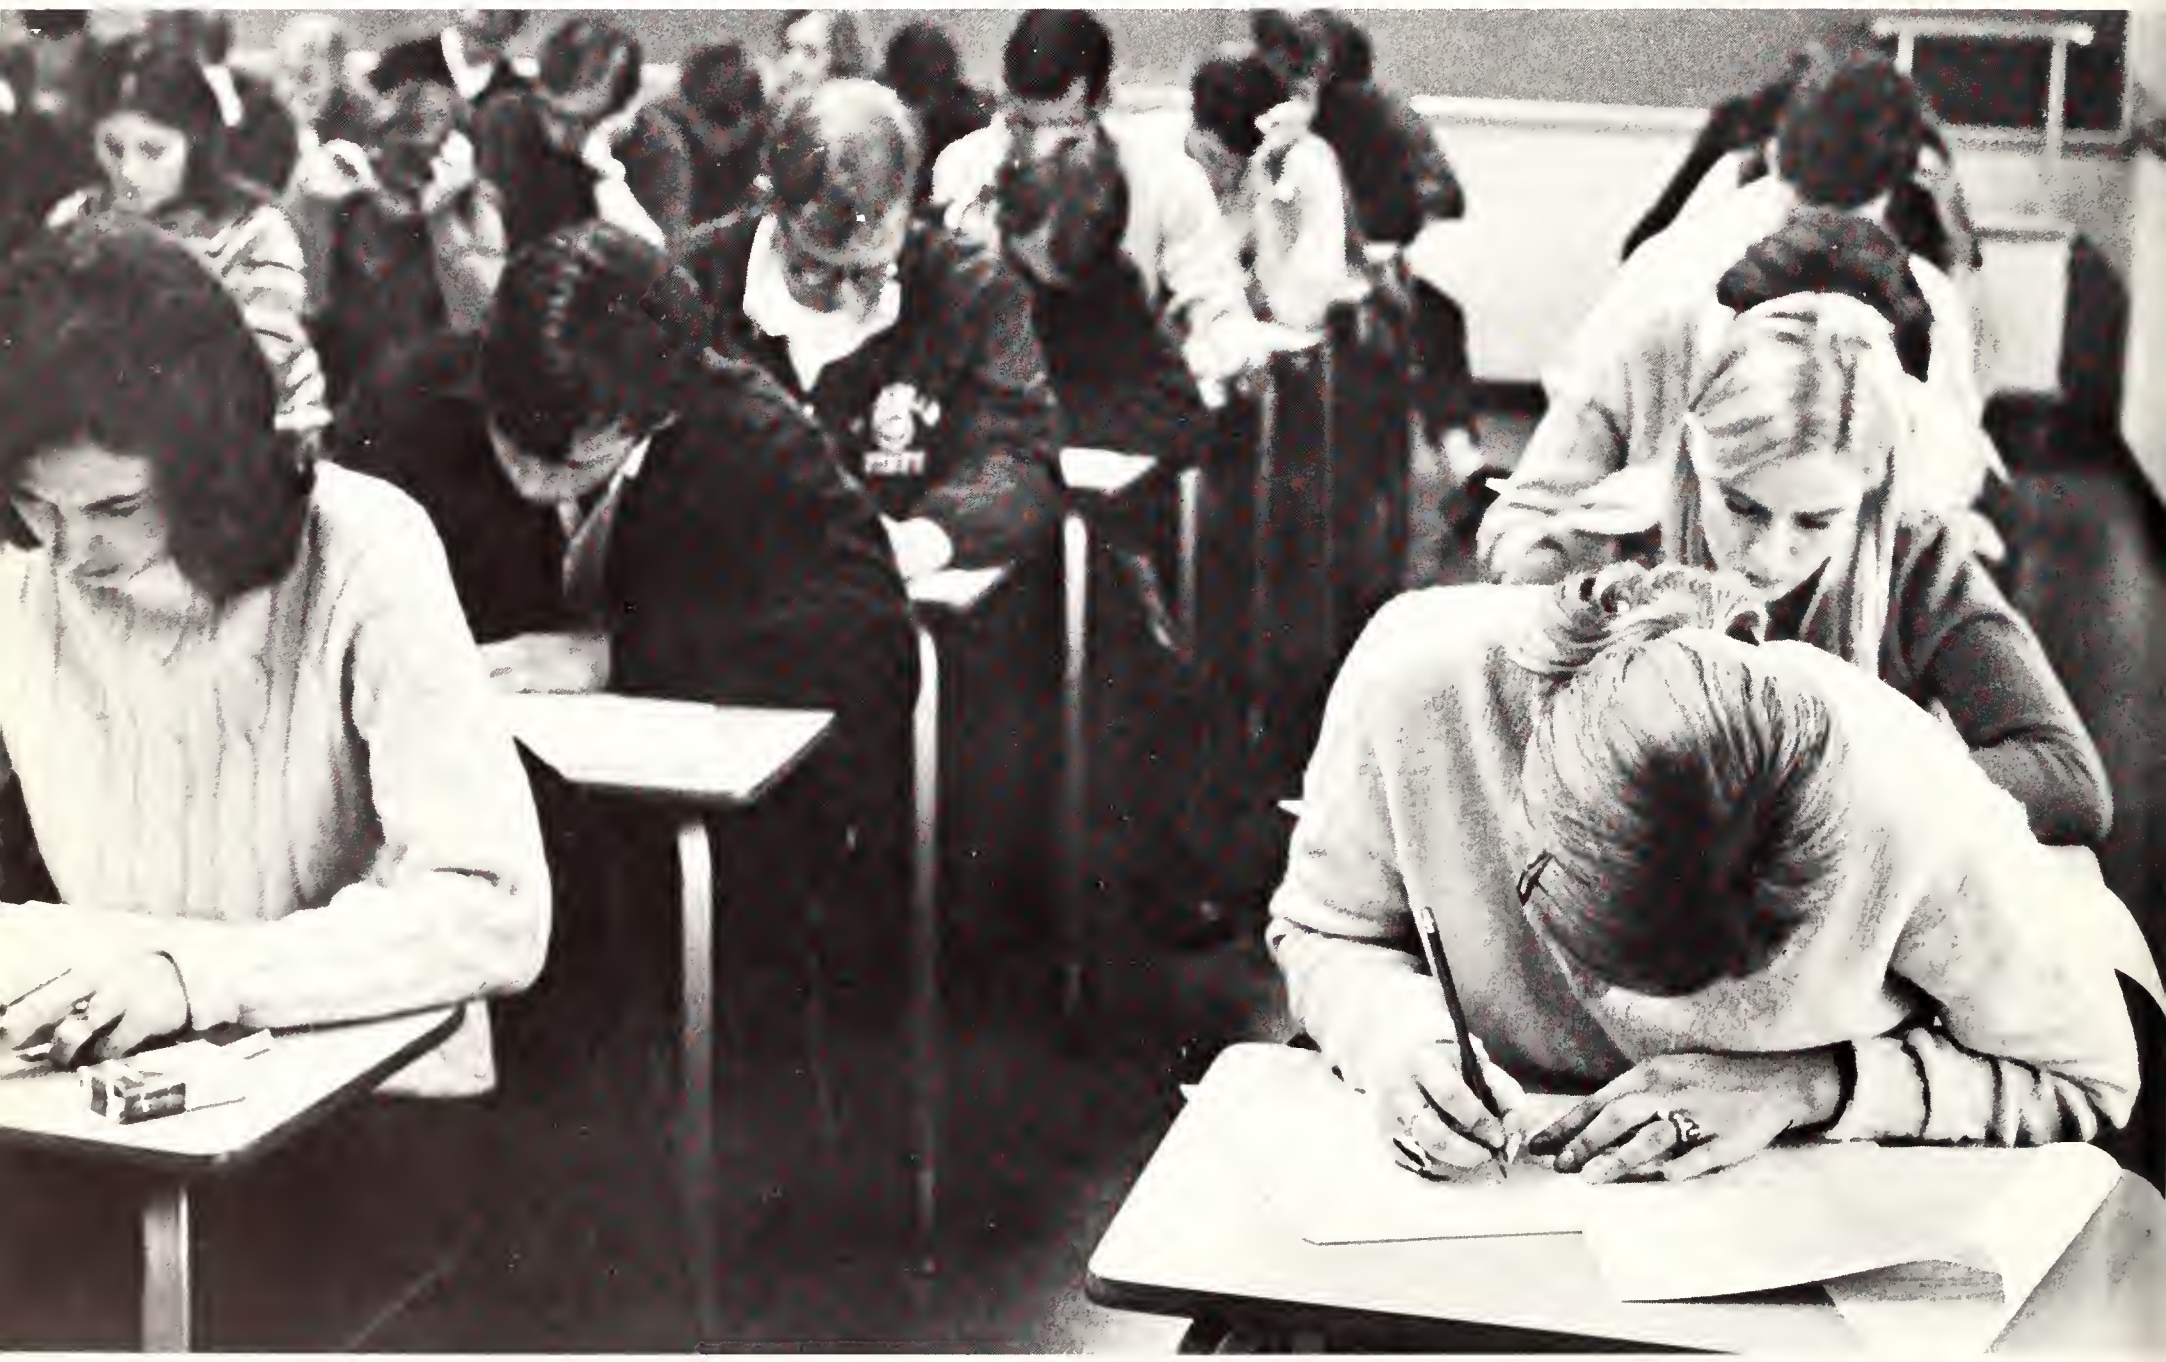
ACADEMICS

Changing your major is a wonderful thing; for three glorious years or more you can say "Today I'll be a cowboy, tomorrow I'll be a doctor" and really mean it.

I'm not arguing against the concept of a liberal education. I just don't see how all those vestigal wings on fruit flies are going to help me be a better poet.

Exam week is the only time when most Michigan State students can tell the difference between the university's academics and its services.

Actually I don't think Michigan State really believes that a working knowledge of gross national product and Russian history is going to make you a better person. It is just that after mastering them you realize that nothing is impossible.



All the freshmen were at one end of the dorm and there was always a paper due in ATL. I never learned so much from a course but I always thought we should have signed our papers "Incorporated."

It is an awesome and terrible thing when you can prove Thomas Paine was a Deist and opposed rule by the people but you still cannot spell "language" without a dictionary.

My girlfriend is the only freshman in the history of MSU to dissect a frog without touching it once with her hand.

We sent our Nat. Sci. professor a valentine. "You are the Monadnock in the Peneplain of Natural Science." That's what you call applying your learning.

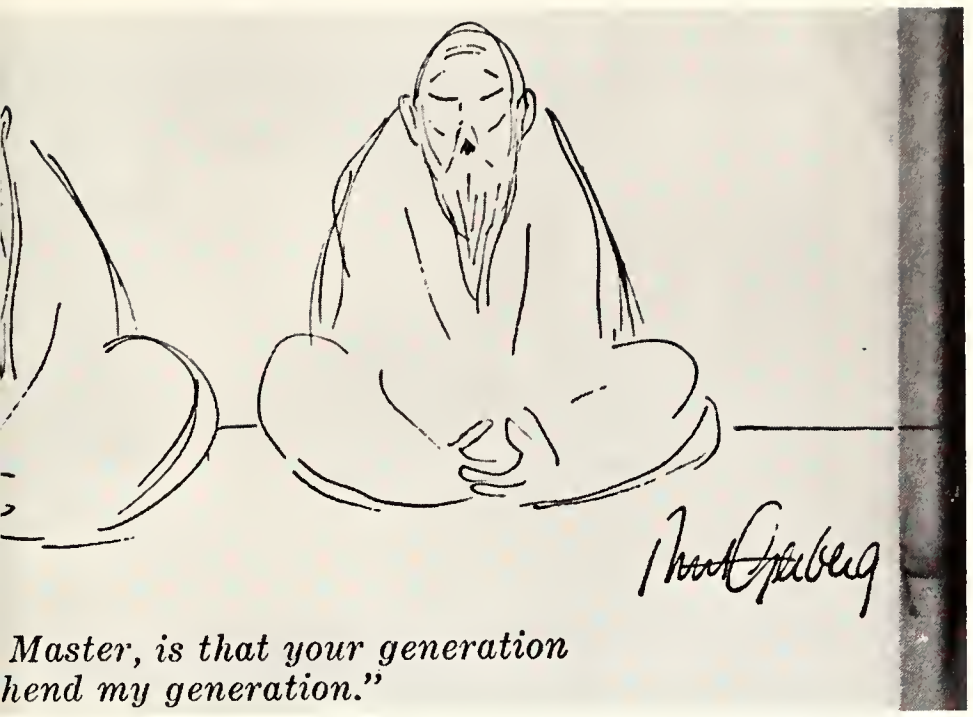
I went to Europe the summer after third term humanities and spent more time in the National Gallery than I did on Carnaby Street.

There are two kinds of people in this world, those who cried at the end of "Phaedra" and those who didn't even finish it.

You can sell the books, burn the notes, and celebrate but there is always something left — The Monet print on the notice board or the hardbound edition of "Candide" or the boy who liked "Faust" too.



Master, is that your generation
hend my generation."

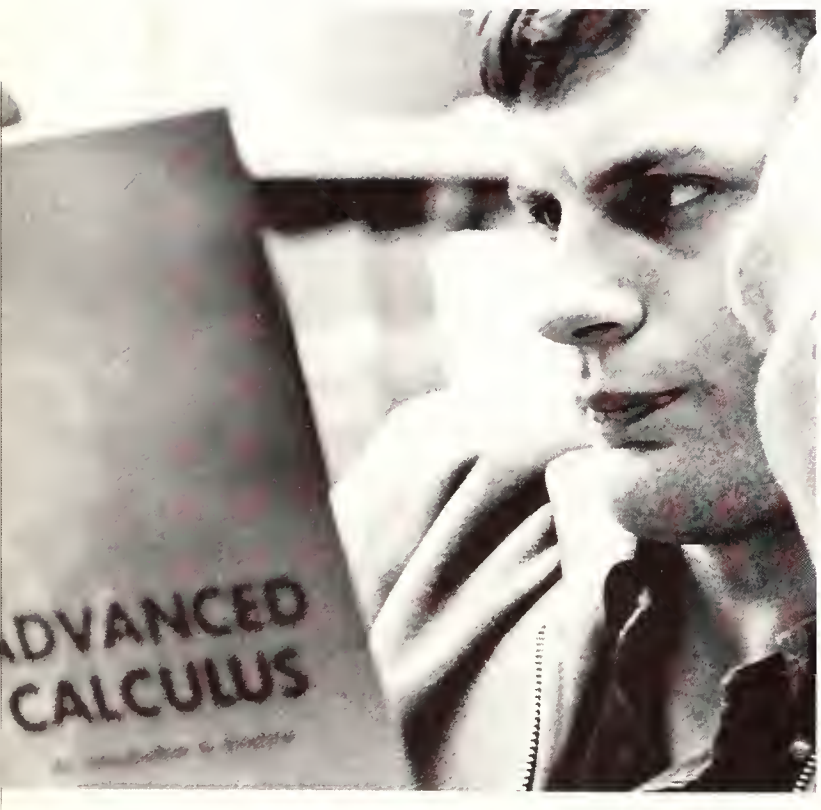
Social Science is like psychiatry—it knows so much and does so little.

All the social sciences are supposed to make you aware of the world around you—but it's November 5 and your are at the Coral Gables that night. The conversation centers on the elections but haven't all the political science courses made you a cynic about the electoral process?

Fall term of your Junior year and suddenly all your grades start "counting."

Upper College and suddenly that canary-eating grin and the blissful title of "no-pref" have to go. Is it pigeon-holing or finally finding yourself when experience in your field and the expression of your talent, teaching or sketching, become the focus of your life.

Being in upper college is like starting all over again. All the doors are open to you: the Placement Bureau, (with greater frequency), the advisor (now that it looks like you're actually going to make it, he has no qualms about letting you do the twelve credits of independent study), and the 400's appear more and more on your section reservation card, and it comes to you that it is almost over.



There is a legend in Morrill Hall about the freshman who managed to do a bit of rewiring and got the music department on his language lab instead of German verbs.

Foreign languages have done their work — I've decided to become a professional Spaniard.

Without picking up a pencil or making a gesture my hands could tell you the story of the term's work—clay under my fingernails and that calloused bump covered with charcoal from the life drawing class. Senior year and I don't know whether to identify with Leonardo Da Vinci or Pigpen.

Until I had 207, I thought that my eighth grade teacher had told me everything I'd ever need to know about Hamlet.

You'd never stayed up all night until you had a paper due at 9:00 Monday after Homecoming. It's a good idea to remember that feeling when you start teaching on your own.

Student teaching is what it's all about. If you want to teach subjects, take high school but if you want to teach people, choose a junior high school.

When you are a Political Science major, it is your library. But during exams the rest of them invade, milling around and scraping chairs just like it was their library too.

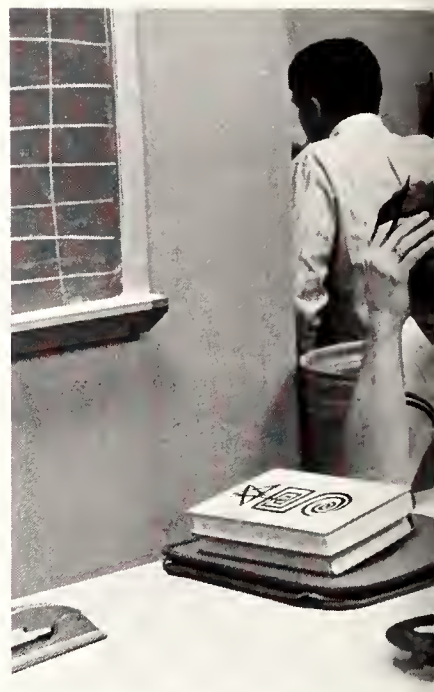
For weeks the professors have been talking about the elections, be it a Poly. Sci. class, Social Science class, or even Psych. 151. Listening to them helps clarify issues and puts the elections in perspective, until you sit up until 4:00 AM on November 6 — then you wonder . . .

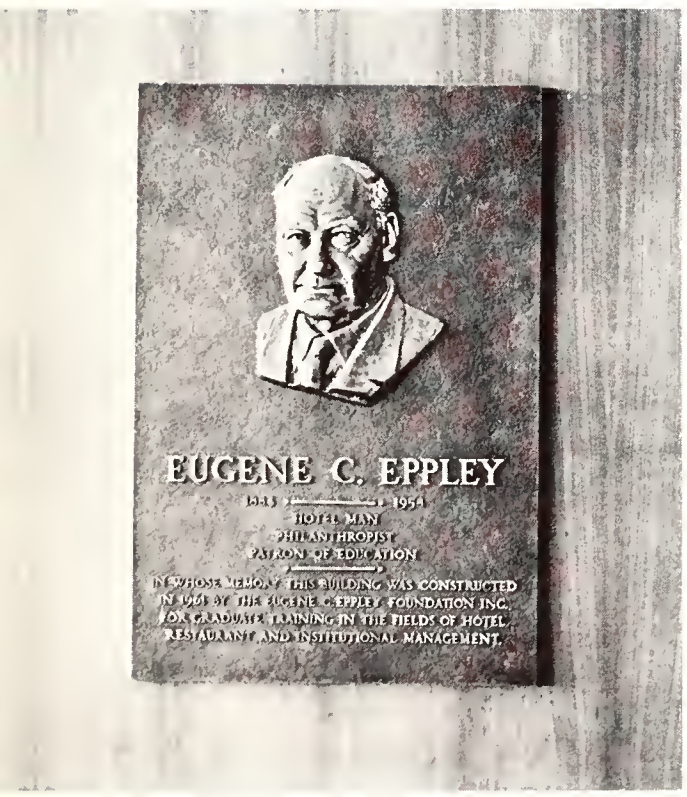
Speech is a wonderful class — I have gotten rid of my stutter and now have clammy hands and a general mistrust for my fellow man when seen across a podium at 8:00 A.M.

Final exams are beginning to get to me. I haven't talked to myself so much since I took Group Discussion.

Radio and Television is a wonderful course. It's so great to write home about the problems and successes of "doing a show for MSU."

After Journalism 200 you give up the idea of taking over MSU and decide to take over The State News instead.



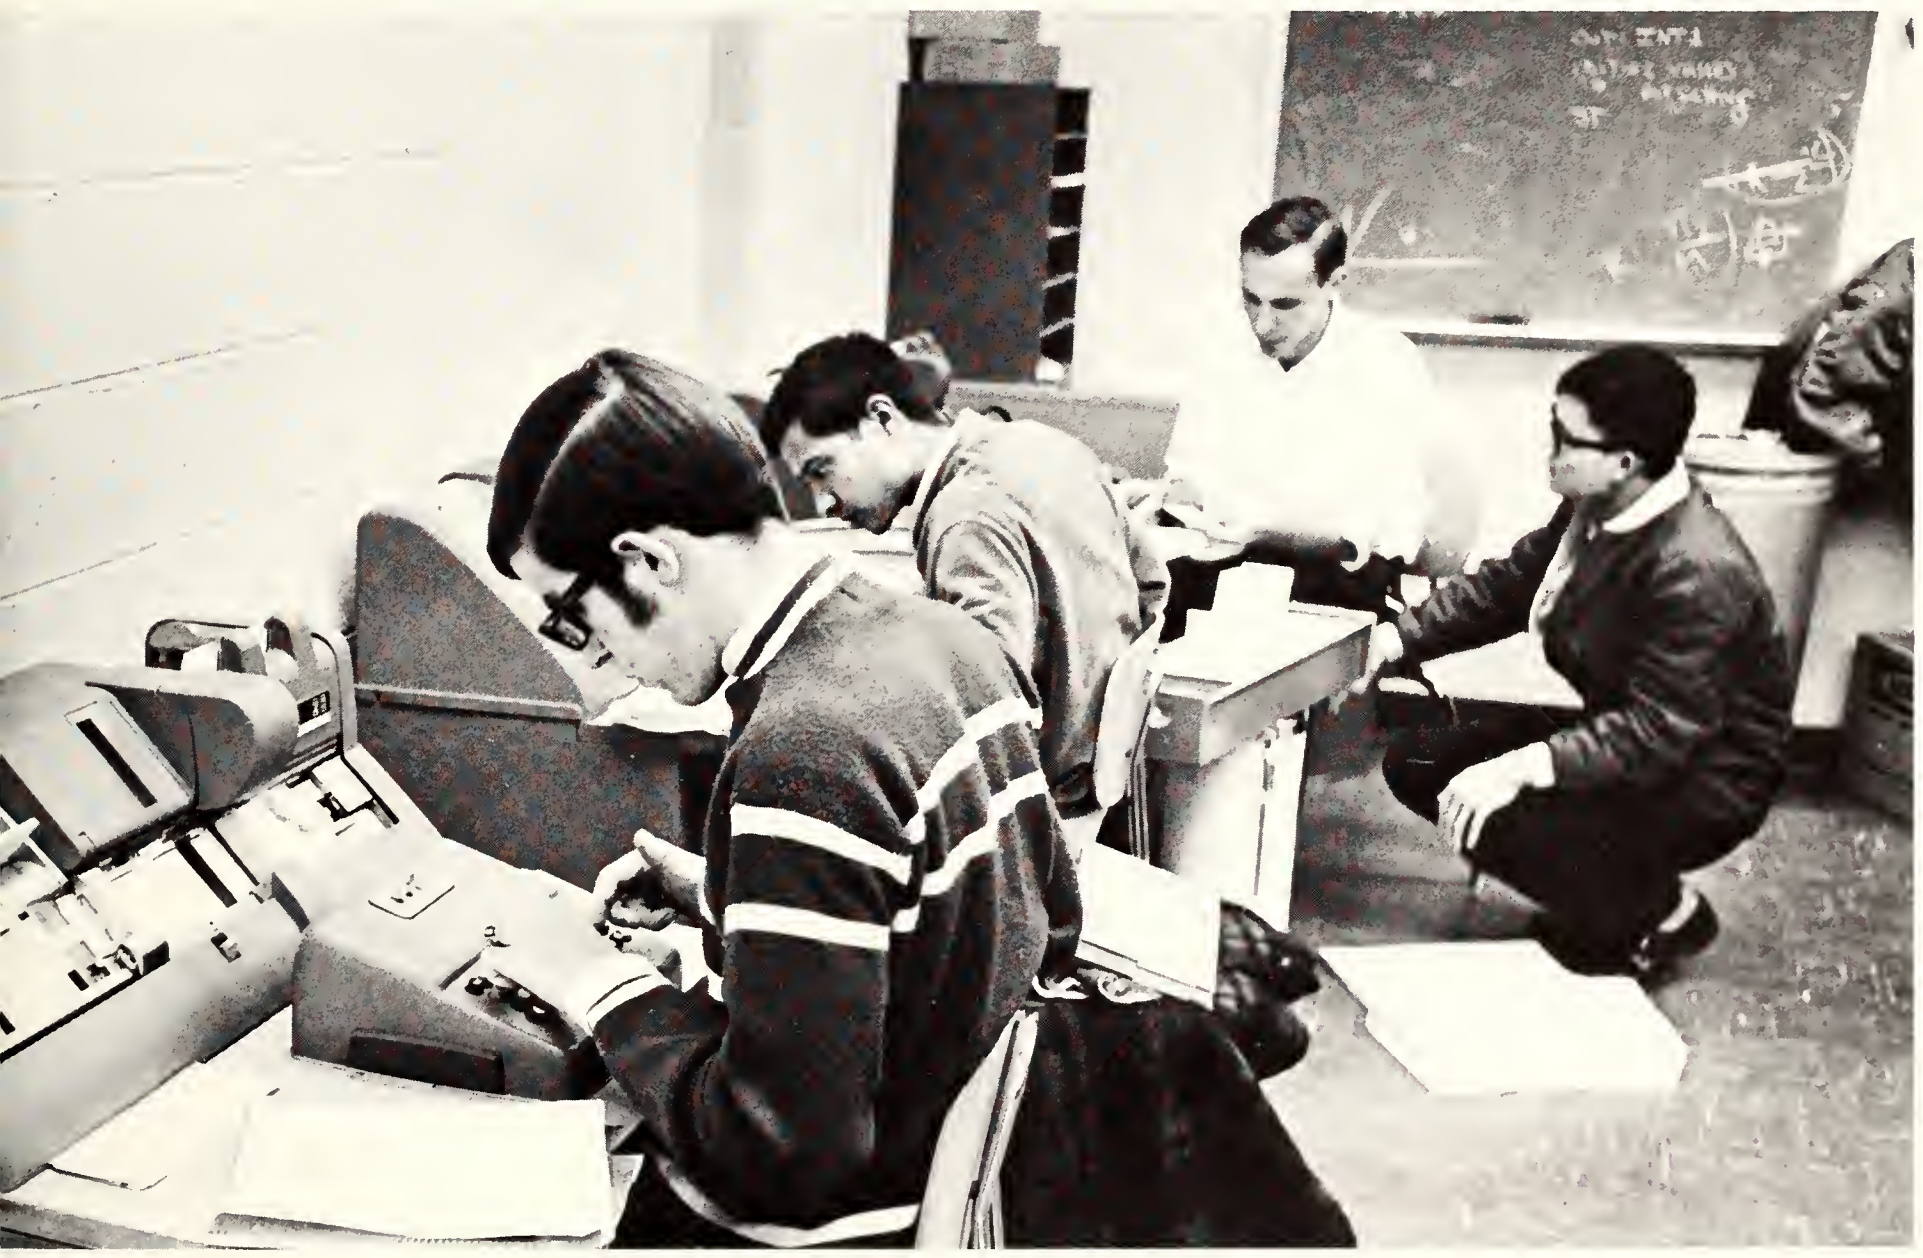


I couldn't even sell Girl Scout cookies and suddenly my junior year in college finds me analyzing the problems of marketing 500 frozen chickens.

Typing, stenography, shorthand; it's good to have classes that make your hands work as well as your mind.

The difference between a shorthand typist and an executive secretary is Dr. Allan Mandelstamm.

It's great taking classes from professionals as well as professors. These men have been out in it.



The hardest lesson to learn in the College of Home Economics is that pink and red do not always clash.

Oregano makes everything smell so professional. I put it on everything—even hotdogs.

My first clothing construction project had three sleeves—one coming out of the spine. She said it was a very easy mistake to make but I'm beginning to have doubts about being MSU's answer to Christian Dior.

Even as you begin to be on familiar terms with femurs and tibias, it strikes you that there is so much to be, not just learned, but mastered and for one fleeting moment you want to chuck the idea of being a general practitioner and just become a finger nail specialist.

When I finally finish I am going to insist that even my parents call me doctor.

Test tubes, coils, beakers, microscopes, books and charts . . . I thought I'd never see an actual person. Then the first person I had to give a physical to turned out to be the girl who sat in front of me in every class since third grade.

I came here to be a horse doctor and I've been here two years without working on anything bigger than a molecule.

He's looking up at you and doesn't know you nearly failed physics and that he is your first case. He is in pain and the tile walls and antiseptic have always meant skill and care. You feel your hands doing the right thing and soon the hands, the mind, the terms of classes and theory are working together to analyze, to minister, and to bring comfort and relief.

The first thing you learn in Engineering is how, with a rubber band, to transform your sliderule into a crossbow for paper wads.

Finally you get to survey the campus and the fun is trying to convince the guys in Holmes Hall that you are going to put a super highway through the middle of Lyman Briggs College.

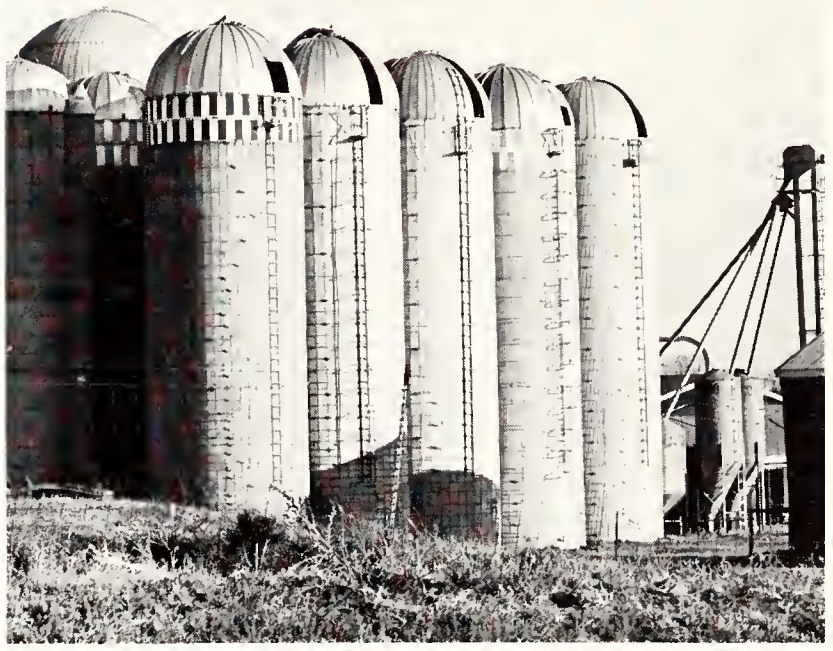
You wonder about your major when, at a Shaw mixer, you say that you are a civil engineer and she grins and says, "I should hope so."

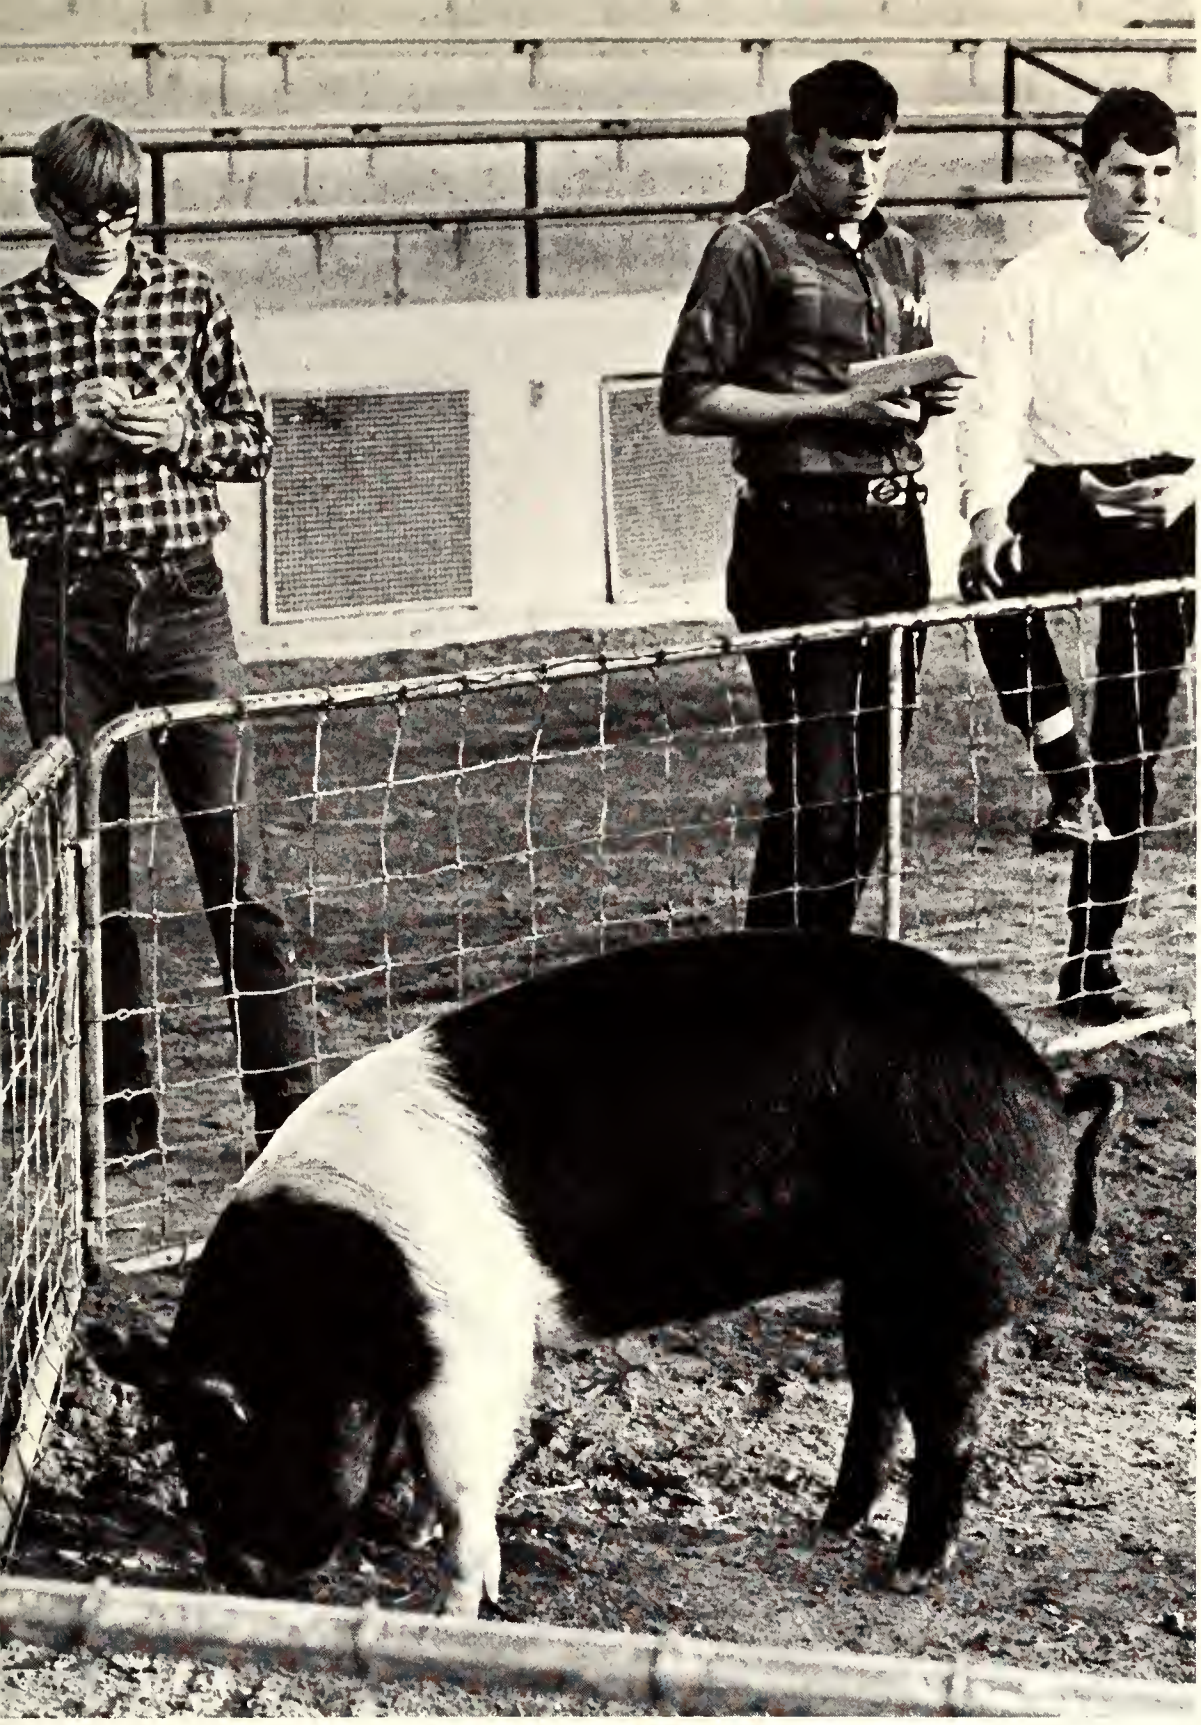
The College of Natural Science has class. Your roommate gets out his books after dinner and you bring out a cage of gerbils and a twelve foot boa constrictor.

I was doing quite well in Zoology until the professor substituted a navy bean for a pancreas on the final exam.

Mammoths, mastadons, elephants, you watch them change over millions of years and you want to live forever just to see how things are finally going to turn out.

I am a Refrigerator





All your life on a dairy farm and there isn't much they can tell you about judging animals. But your freshman year you are faced with four Quarter Horses and Arabians and are expected to defend number one's conformation over that of number two. The only real difference you can see is the length of their tails and the color of their eyes.

They should have a 100 course in shoveling.

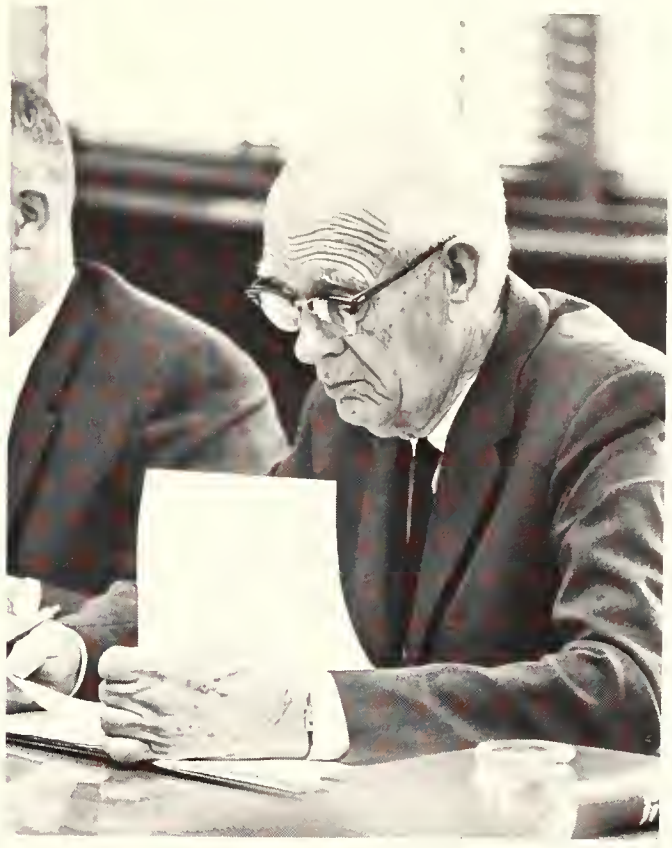
You cannot help but feel closer to a man who shows you how to raise a calf than one who shows you how to diagram a sentence.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES . . .

One spun the thread, one measured it out, and another cut it in two. To decide their fate and the course their lives would take, the ancient Greeks had three figures and Michigan State University has seven.

We amaze them with our impatience, we want our ideas heard yesterday and something done about them right now-fast! So they try to tell us that they may be our ideas and that those ideas are the product of the most liberal and comprehensive education yet. But those ideas may also be mistakes and the mistakes may be crucial.

Leadership is not a matter of inches as are football games. Academic people are expected to be right by a mile.



SERVICES

You'll always remember finally grasping GestalIt Theory or understanding Condorcet. But Berkey Hall in late May and the Plantarium Christmas Show are things you can come back to.

They dropped the language requirement and in its place, put two computor courses and I can see the day when sophomores will be taking economics in pill form . . . But there will always be seniors filling out the little yellow and pink forms in the Placement Bureau and juniors wondering what the inside of the Alumni Chapel looks like.

The services provided by Michigan State University—rather like the freshman who says he's going to the laundry room and ends up exchanging linen for the whole floor.

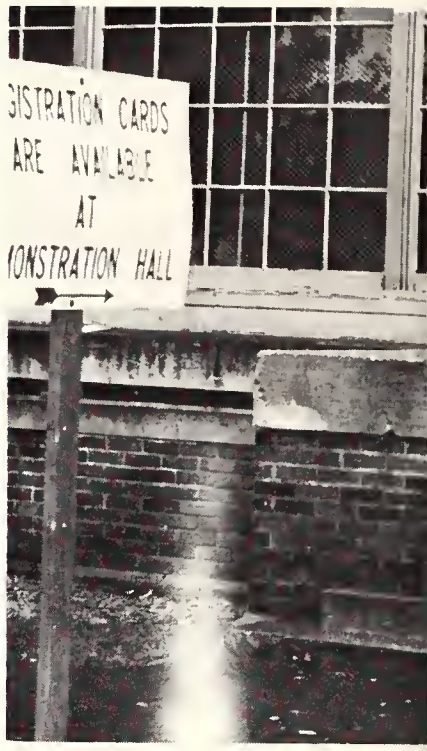
Services are the things MSU does for you that don't appear on a transcript.

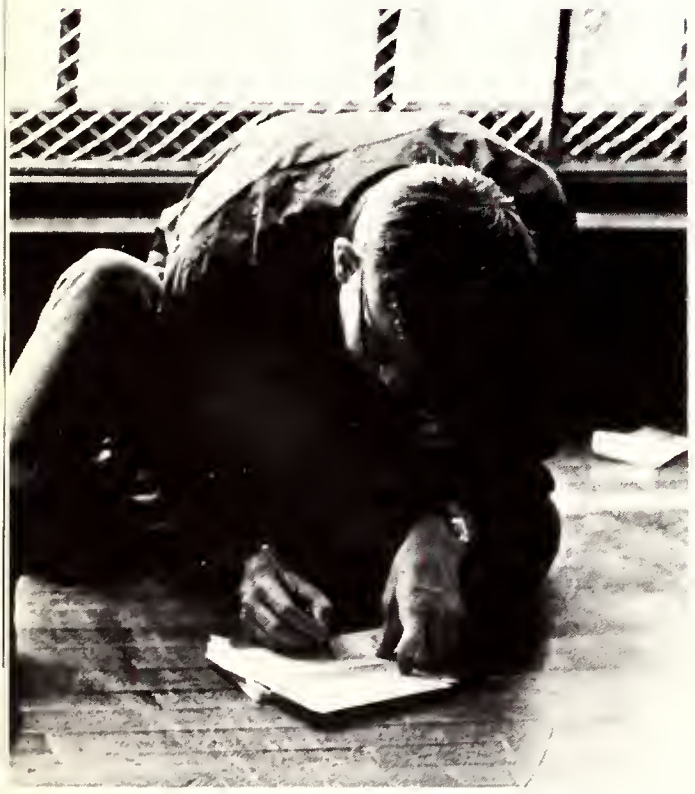
After bussing tables in Snyder Hall there isn't anything I wouldn't touch with my hand.

The 8x10 photograph of Bill's eye illegally taped to the ceiling above the bunk, the dried magic markers left in the bottom drawer, the tiny holes where you pinned the Union Jack to the venetian blinds, and every vestige of your presence is scoured and repaired. The next occupant must be allowed to make his mark on his environment without your influence.

When they give you the all-inclusive costs of attending MSU they never include the cherry sprites, bagels, blt's, and grilled cheese sandwiches so important to any Spartan worthy of the name.

My mailbox has a cobweb.





Once a term you face registration. You find out they've raised the tuition and pray your check doesn't bounce as you descend into the pit with your incomplete schedule. The heat is unbearable, the noise is deafening. You burst into tears when you realize you've just added Poultry Science 200 instead of Political Science 200.

This year I'll smile for my I.D. picture. And just as I open my mouth to explain that I see my eyes, they snap the picture.

Some of my warmest friendships have been made while filling out those million IBM cards. There is something about all you P–Z's in one room at 8:05 struggling for academic survival that binds you together.

Simply going through Registration should excuse you from HPR for the rest of the term.

They found me a bus pass and deposited me on a bus bound for the Union because you just don't spend four years at MSU without taking a bus at least once. Walking you can do alone but buses are built for crowds and couples.

By police ethics they mean whether you should give a ticket to your roommate on his way over to pick up your football ticket for Saturday's game.

Everytime I look out of my fifth floor window, I see they've picked up another. Maybe I know him—hope it was for speeding and not for carrying drugs.

There are three Viet Nam veterans in the front row. There is the man in the back of the room old enough to be your father. And there you are behind the podium, a fresh and dewey 22, explaining For Whom the Bell Tolls.

I like grad assistants. They aren't as sure of themselves as the full professors so they observe office hours, return your papers before the end of term, and let you out on time.

Actually I'm not sure about graduate assistants. It's unnerving to have your teacher from one class sitting next to you in another.

I just got here yesterday and I'm already behind.

The good breakfast, the clean shirt, and 200 pencils scratching the wisdom of the ages in a 5c bluebook.

By the end of the day it's all out of your hands. From now on someone else will weigh factors, philosophy and personality to arrive at an answer she hopes will be correct.

Time to sell the books and burn those 3x5's and vow to change your major or wish you could take that course again.

Mono - the black plague of the college student. Take a nap after dinner or yawn during a lecture and the entire suite is packing you off to Olin for a blood test and vitamins.

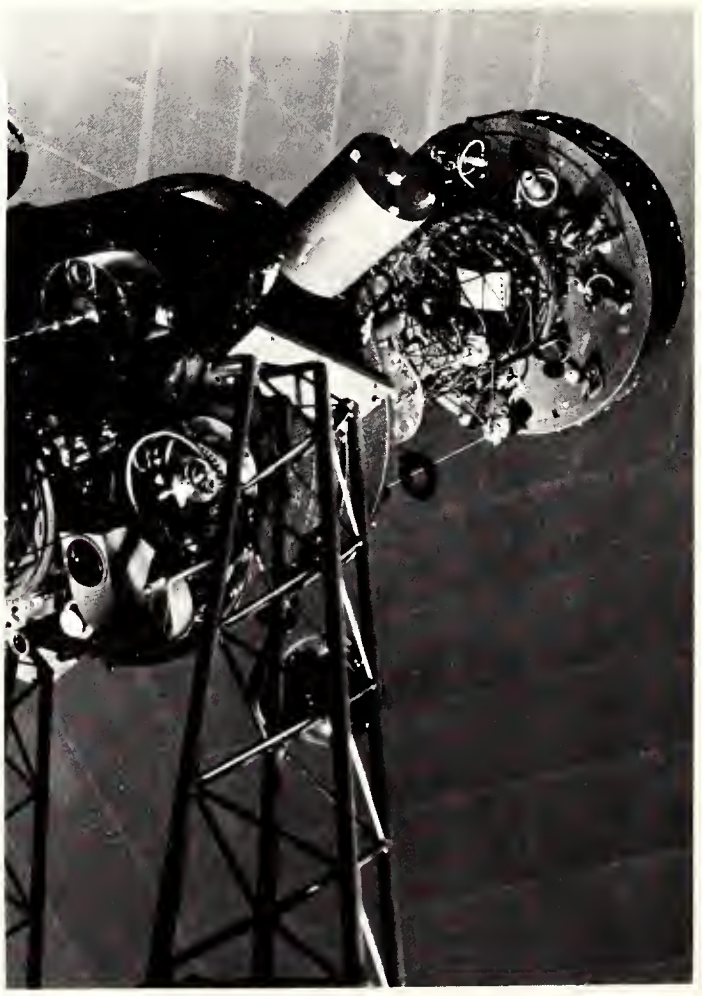
Standing at the end of the line at the Olin reception desk I cannot believe that so many people can be sick at 8:00 in the morning.

My health record at Olin must read like a novel.

How can you tell the sophomore who just made Varsity that he is out for the season or the last term senior that she must drop out with mono a week before finals? Olin doctors are a breed apart. They have to be.

I like the idea of a 50c X-ray.

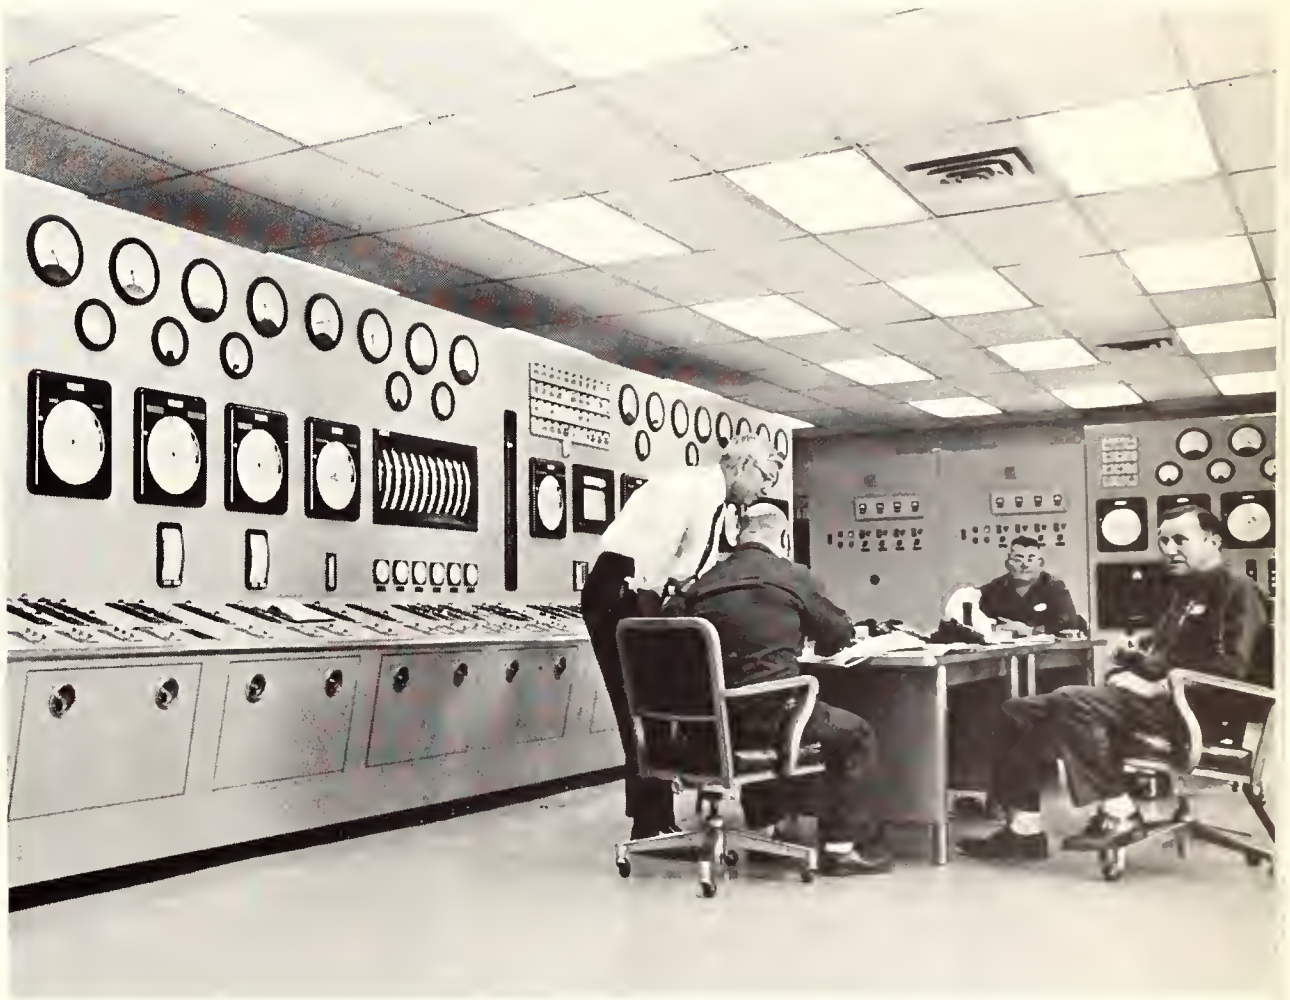
Natural Science with Mr. Gillis was the best thing about freshman year. He had us see "The Christmas Star" at the Planetarium even though we weren't studying astronomy until the next term.



Somewhere in the vast innards of the power plant is a tiny valve responsible for the sixty degree temperatures in my room when I go to sleep and the twenty-three degree ones when I wake up in the morning.

I settle back into the comfortable chair of the Planetarium and look up at what is soon to become the star-filled sky. Galileo, Copernicus, the North Star. The music is beautiful the night dark and warm. John and I hold hands as down the row, classmates drop off to sleep.

Until I saw the program at the Planetarium, I thought that Orion's Belt was a megaphone.



I wonder if there is any hard feeling among the men who spray the 15,000 trees on State's campus and those that have to rake up the leaves in fall.

At times I feel the hugeness of the university and its way of life closes down on me and I wonder who I am and where I am going.

Here creation of the past and present ages communicate knowledge and emotion outside the lecture or written text. I feel myself extend beyond myself, beyond MSU, beyond a student and for the moment I believe that I too will make it.

You don't have to go far from the dorm to experience some of the finer things in life. MSU's answer to the New York Waldorf-Astoria—fine food, luxurious rooms with baths and color television—is found at Kellogg Center, staffed by the students of Hotel, Restaurant, and Institutional Management.

Coronation Ball has to be at Kellogg. You can't have ROTC cadets and girls in long gowns swishing about the McDonel grill—no matter how many new planters they put in. Kellogg is a different world.

Someday before graduation I'm going to spend the night in Kellogg and ring for a sandwich at midnight instead of going down to the machines for a candy bar and leave my bed for someone else to make in the morning. I believe in a liberal education.

For an anthropology class we had to interview a foreign student so five of us walked over to the International Center to look for likely subjects. Foreign dress and many languages made us feel alone and out of place but we asked two Japanese students to help us and spent the next hour firing questions, drinking vast amounts of coffee, and feeling that somehow our lives had been restricted and shallow and short.

You can always tell the students who spent the summer in Europe. They all go to the crossroad cafeteria and look at the clocks and wonder what Nigel is doing if it is 9:45 in London.

I'm glad they have students working in the bookstore. It's nice to tell your roommate to go find you an HPR workbook and know that she can't tell you to go fly a kite.

During exam week, that's when they flock to the Union to talk and plan study schedules. Everyone carries a book and drinks coffee instead of coke. Coke is far too frivolous for exam week.

Amid the shower of handouts, supporting every side of every issue, I make out the number of the meeting room, then decide it is too late and get a coke and a bag of cheese whizzies.

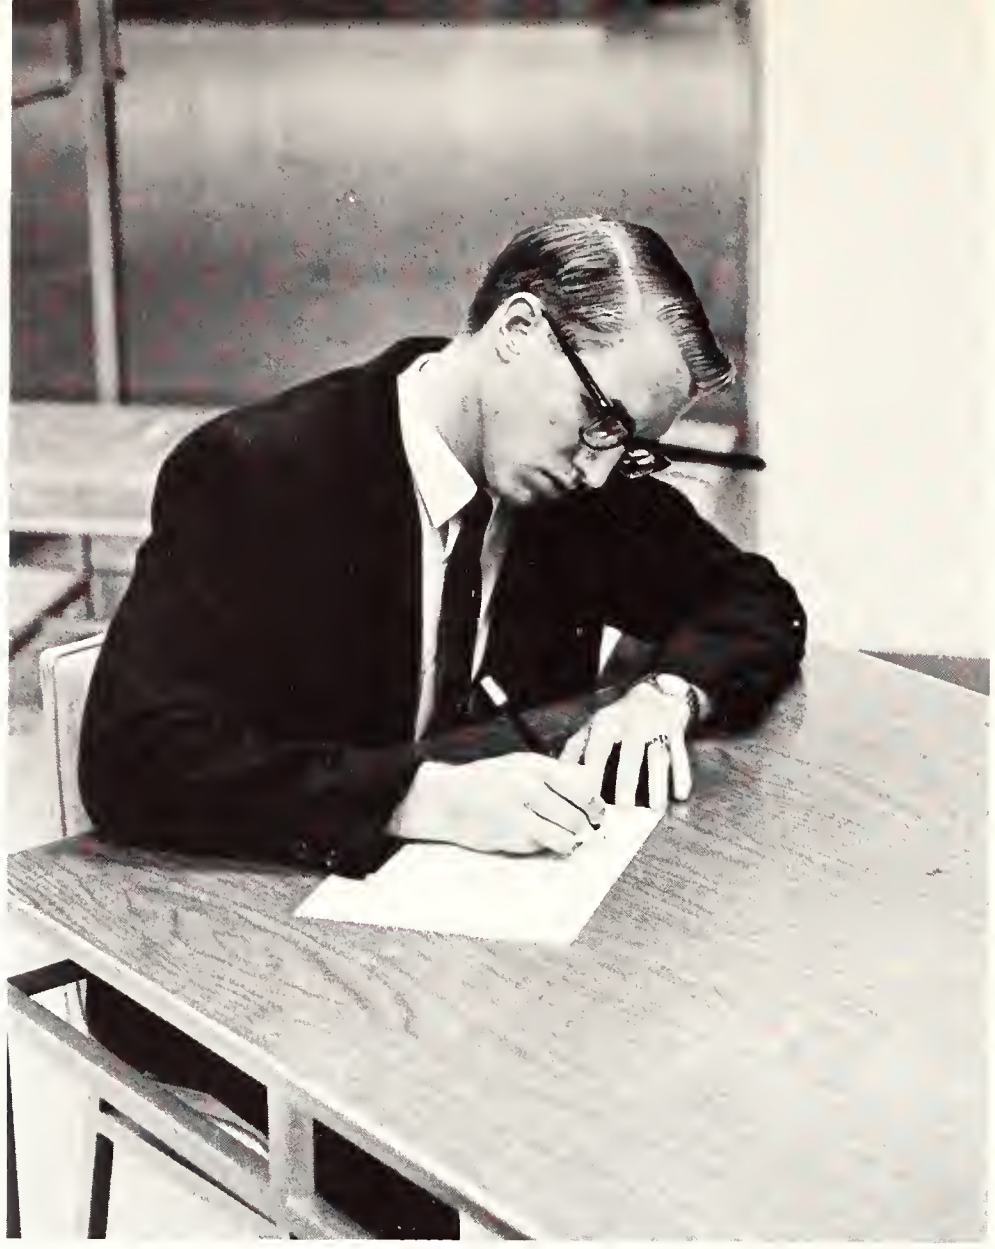
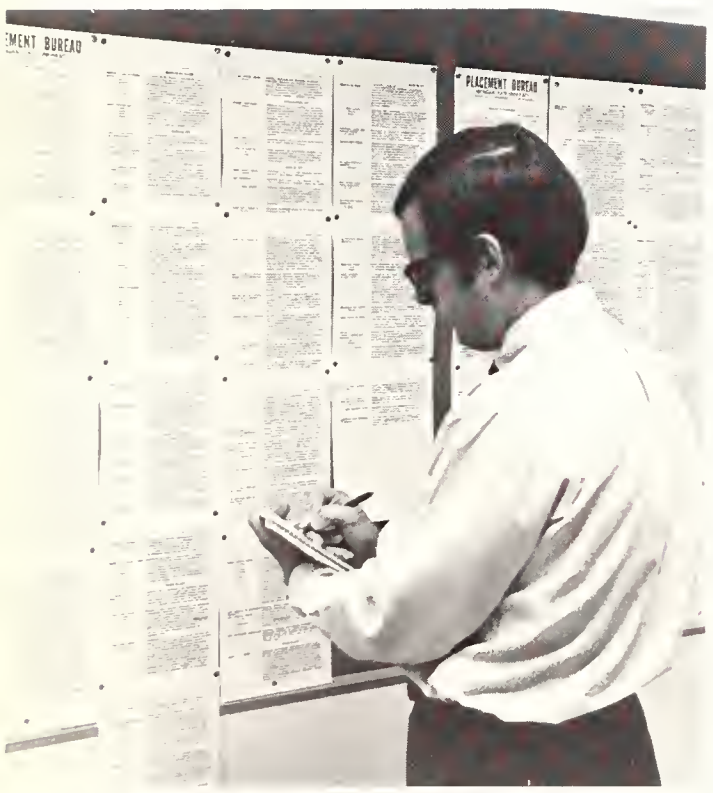
35¢ CIGARETTES 35¢

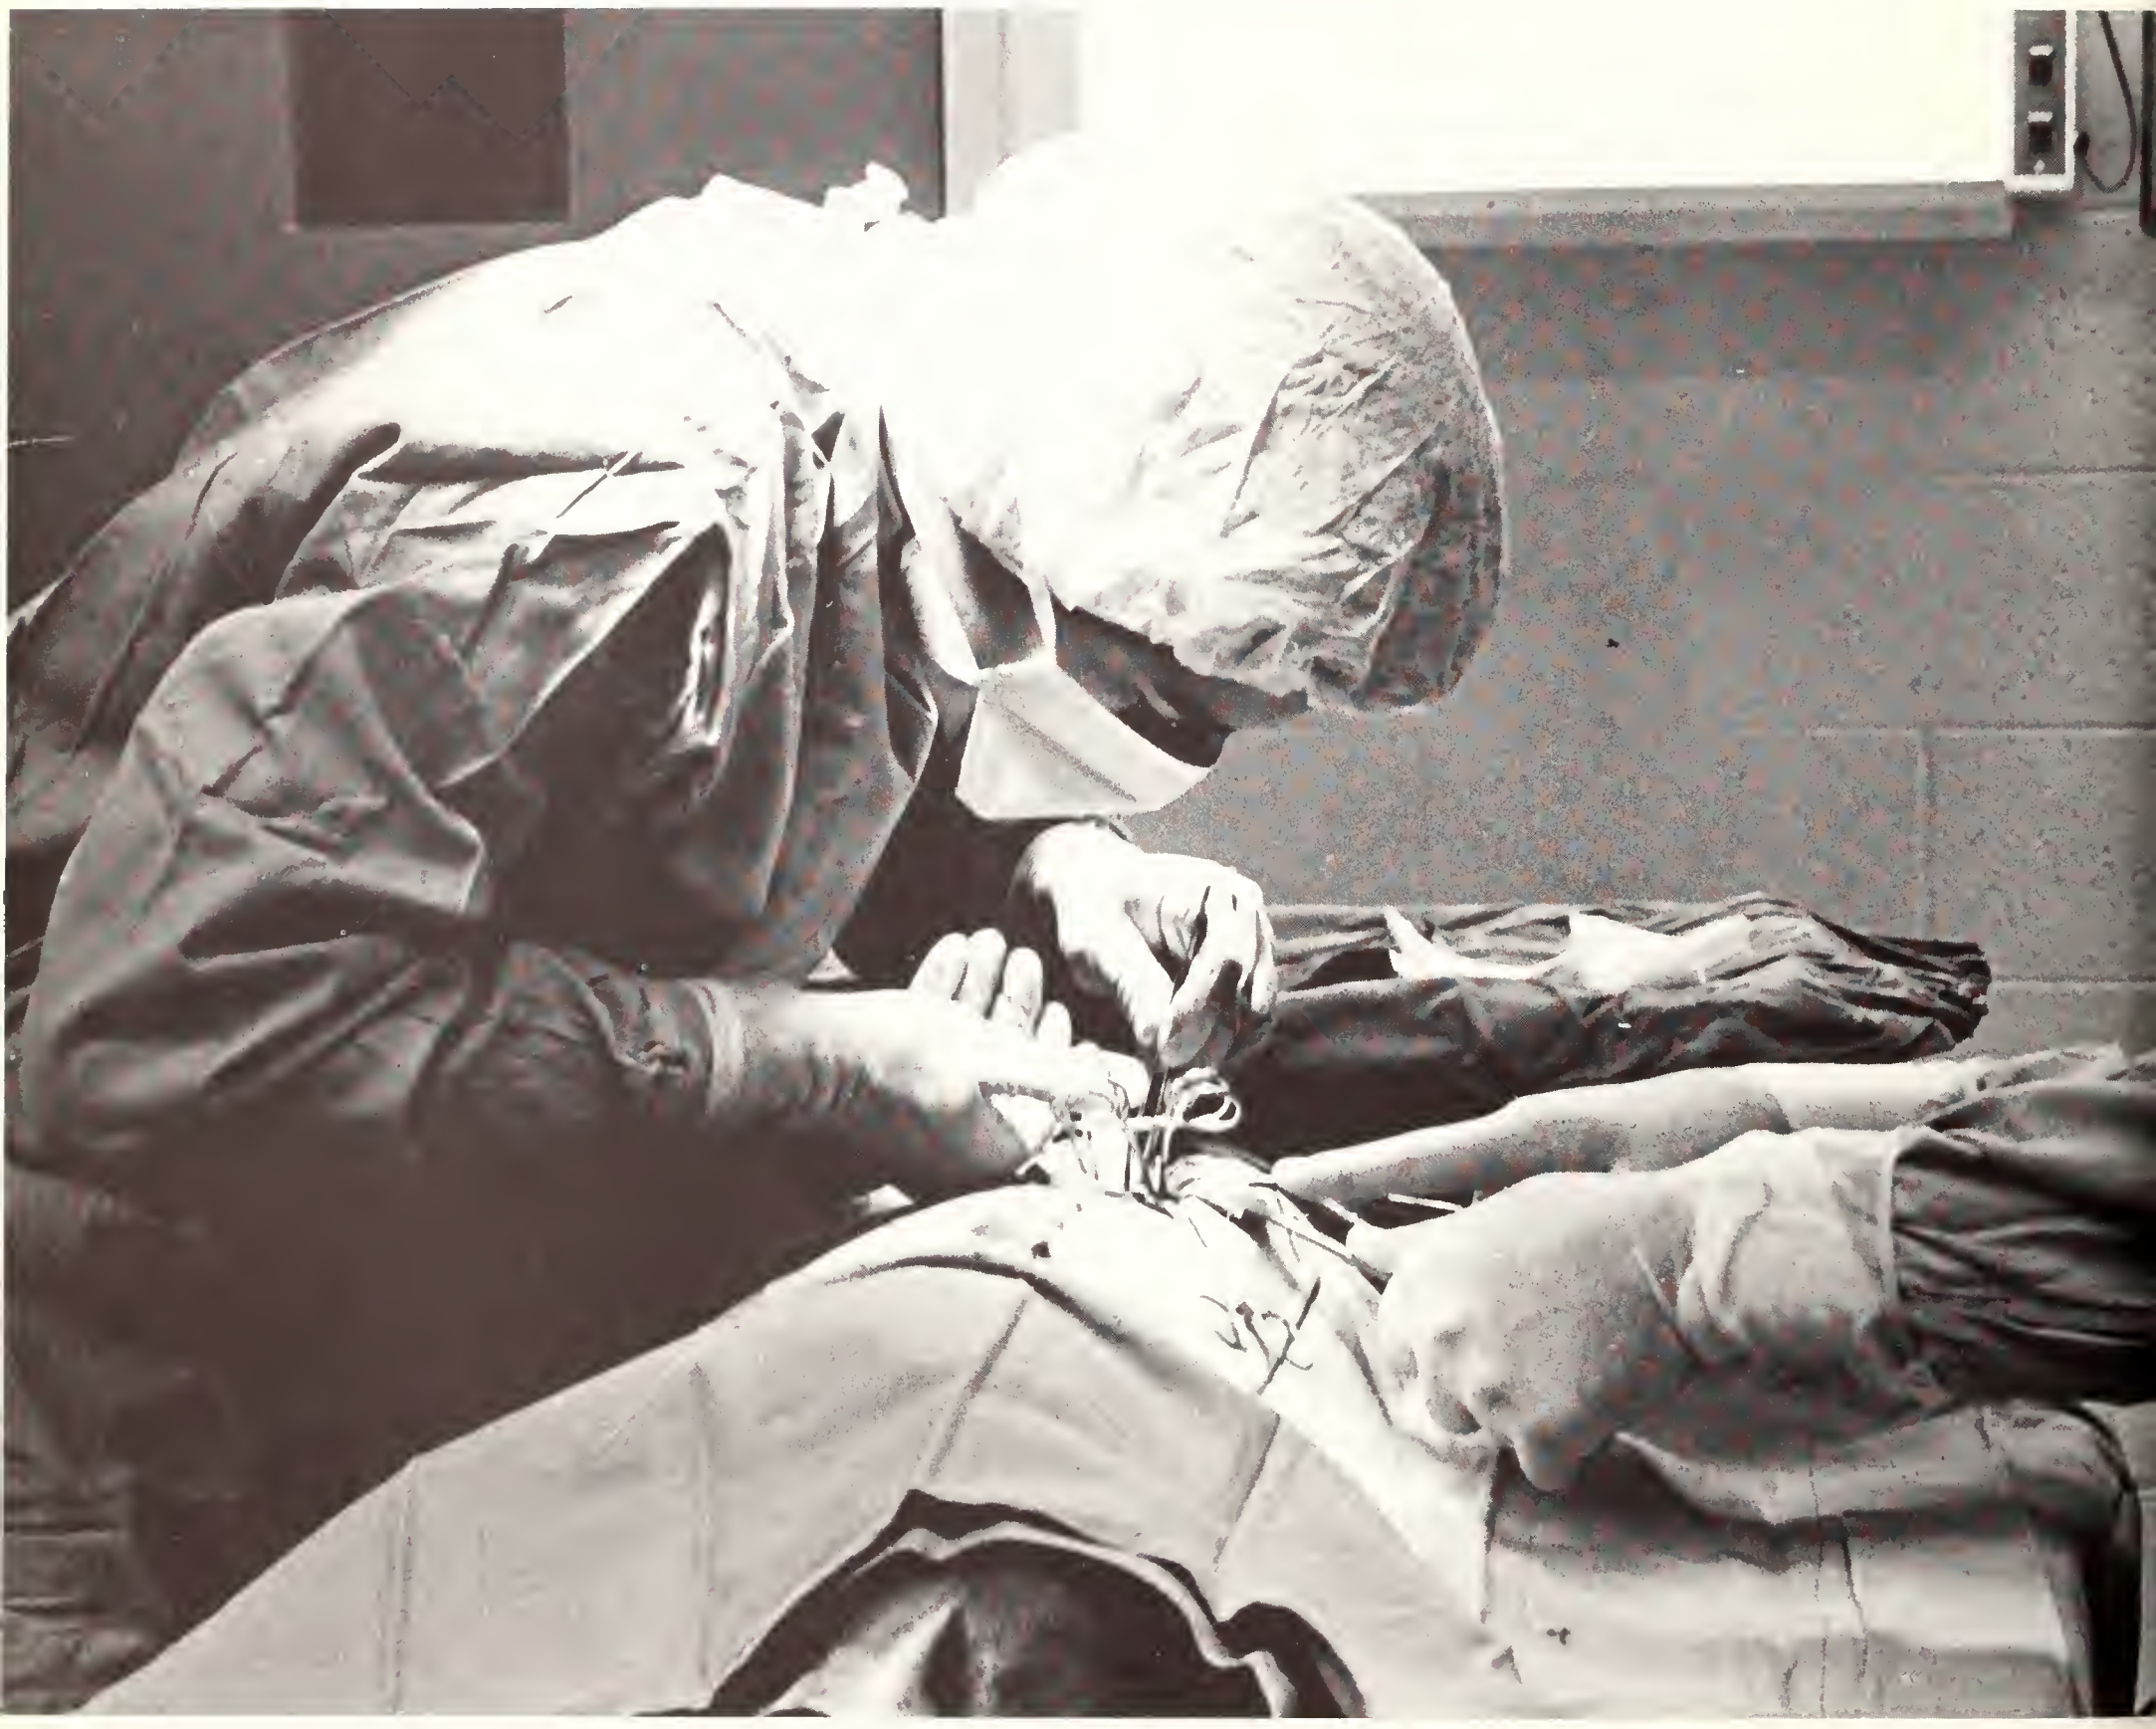




With three terms ahead of me, I decided to get a job to cover T.G.'s and pizzas. At the placement bureau I applied and was interviewed. I went home and waited and waited. I decided I really didn't need the money and joined the Student Education Corps.

My first job interview—and I wore my leather coat and heels. Two hours of roommates had put my hair into a truly vogue mass and it was all worth it because I got the job—teaching outdoor survival in a Girl Scout camp.

The summer job you didn't take, the volunteer request you never answered, senior year and it is over. Michigan State was what you made it.



It's the professional atmosphere with the time to do the job right. Even the little girl in the white coat who cleans your horse's stall and probably weighs less than her pitchfork will be Rebecca Cook, Doctor of Veterinary Medicine next June.

What can you say to an eight year old who brought you his guppy all the way from north Lansing on the back of his bicycle because he thinks it has a dry mouth?

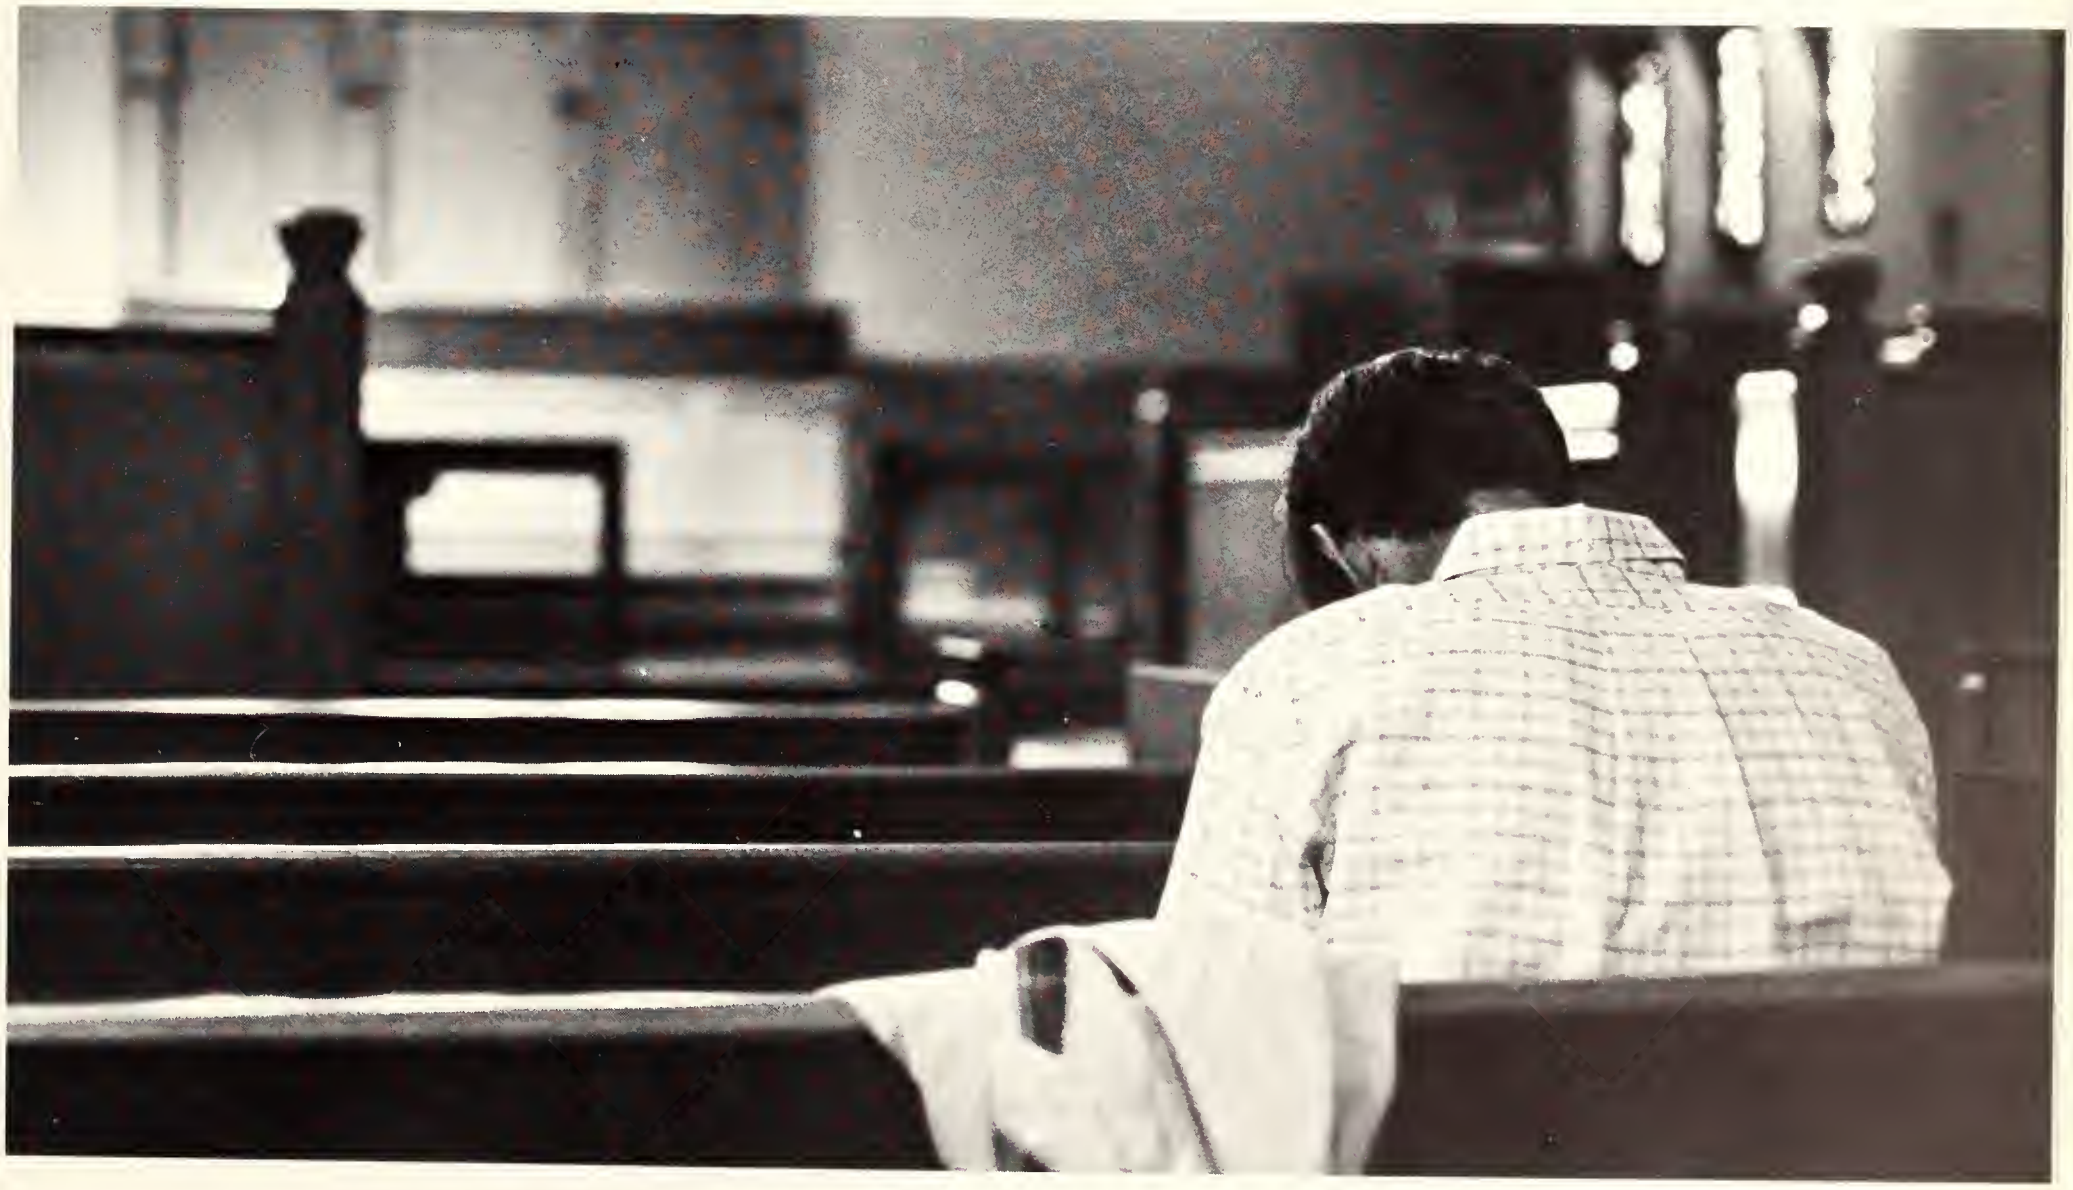
The U. of M. may have its heart transplants but we give pre-natal care to expectant weasels.

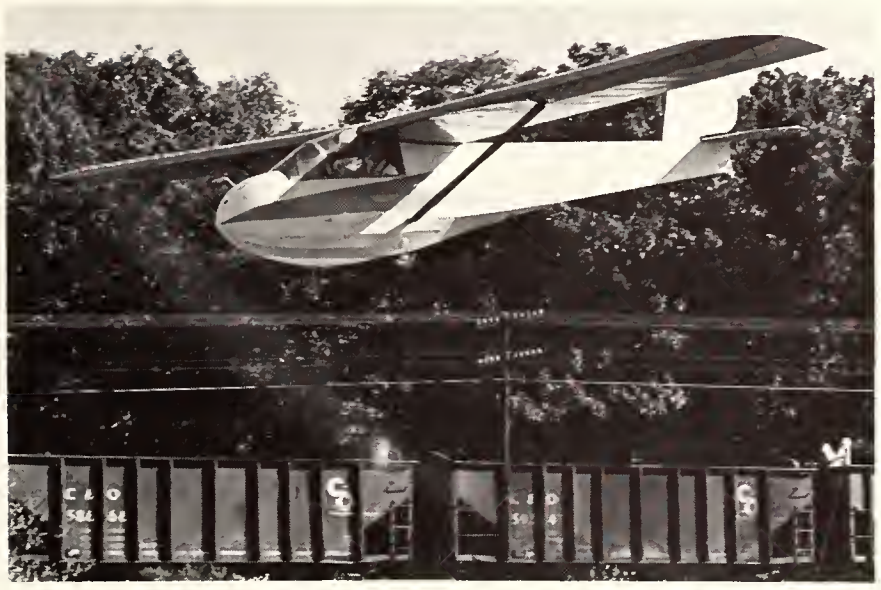
Veterinarians don't take a Hippocratic Oath but no one asks the tearful coed with the Wilson Hall telephone number where she keeps her two spotted hamsters.

While walking back from a 3:00 class, absently kicking leaves and thinking of the mid I had just taken, I looked up and saw a tree resplendent with golden leaves. I was in front of the chapel and people were entering by ones and twos. I lingered in the doorway as a few rays of sun filtered through the stained glass into the darkness. I knelt in the quiet.

I'm the only one in the world who knows there is a sundial in back of the chapel.

Nobody had better ever cut down that big tree in front of the chapel. That's mine.





ORGANIZATIONS

Most students at Michigan State live here twenty-four hours a day, and, despite the exhortations of instructors, do not spend all, or even a great deal, of this time studying. The sheer size of MSU's population provides enough activities to satisfy each individual's interests. In fact, there is enough going on somewhere on campus to pre-empt attendance of any classes or opening of any textbooks — providing one manages to avoid flunking out. MSU's many organizations are a channel for developing a skill, establishing an identity, or maybe just postponing those calculus problems another hour. Whatever the purpose, these activities are an essential component of the educational process.

Government on both hall and university levels provides a source of involvement and change.

Diversity Characterizes Activities at MSU

For each existing major at MSU there's a group, meeting somewhere in the labyrinth of Giltner Hall or just forming in Olin's waiting room. A student in communications can work for one of the dorm radio stations; a theater major can try out for the Performing Arts Company; an econ student can join the Karate Club. Your choice of organization need never be justified as everyone else there shares a similar interest. You may be in agriculture and your roommate is an English major, but if you both play the guitar you can at least see each other at the "Joint" on weekends. And if you think you don't have a skill, how about the Monopoly Club?

Mike Johnson, the original Brody Artist, displays his talent at the Union Board Thieve's Market.

"Well, now that we're up here what do we do?"

Self-Identity Is the Goal of Participation

No matter what anybody says, you just cannot find yourself in a multiversity the size of Michigan State — at least, not as a student. The most you can do is memorize your student number. From there you have to develop and enrich your unique personality, to set yourself apart somehow. Identity results from perfecting a skill, from mastering a sport, from discovering that you are a scientist instead of just a science major. It comes from finding others who share your ideals or fears or frustrations. And finally, it comes with the confidence to be able just once to forget your student number without feeling lost.

The '69 Wolverine: Frustrations . . .

Jack Burns, production assistant to the advisor.

If it's really true that all geniuses are just a little bit insane, the staff of the 1969 Wolverine possessed more than its share of genius. The frustrations of creating a yearbook are many — freezing at a sales booth outside registration, learning that you have sixty pages due this deadline instead of thirty, trying to match 3,300 Senior pictures with the right names. If the pictures are great the copy is never just right. The state of the budget is a perpetual catastrophe, and if you only flunk one mid-term because of the book you consider yourself very fortunate.

. . . and Satisfactions.

Of course, there's another angle. Finding the perfect picture to open your section, finally contacting all those elusive Greeks, selling a copy of the book to your roommate — these are the moments that make you forget the stale coffee grounds and the wrinkled carbon paper and the term paper due last week. Somewhere among the frustrations and the personality conflicts, the missed deadlines and the ruined GPA's, a bunch of students put more than a little bit of themselves into the '69 Wolverine. And somehow all the effort seems worthwhile.

Delivering the State News is a lonely, oft-forgotten job.

The primary raison d'etre of the State News is to unite the campus. Each of the five departments—editorial, photographic, advertising, circulation, and business—works its own way to provide information, while editor-in-chief Ed Brill coordinates the activities of the various departments. Temporarily impeding progress last fall was a controversy over autonomy of the press. The State News printed an article reporting an obscenity issue at the University of Wisconsin. Louis Berman, advisor to the State News, reacted by withholding the editors' pay. The Student-Faculty Judiciary upheld the paper's position and ruled that withholding salaries was a violation of the Academic Freedom Report.

What could all these people be thinking about so intently?

State News Focuses on Creativity and Community Service.

The State News serves in other ways also. Creative people demand an outlet for their material and Collage, a bi-weekly literary magazine, is that outlet. It is "the written evidence of the creative process going on within the minds of MSU students and faculty, . . . a forum of ideas and feelings." Community service is an important facet of the State News, with executive editor Trinka Cline teaching journalism classes and helping to set up a much needed community paper on the west side of Lansing.

UNION BOARD

A holiday spirit pervades campus as sounds of the Mad Hatter's Midway drift across MSU. A spring term event, the carnival typifies the activities sponsored by Union Board. Catering to all areas of college life, services include the information bureau, away-game trips during football season, and bridge lessons. Affording a place for animated huckstering, the Thieves' Market displays a collage of student art work. Other affairs on the Board's crowded agenda include the Activities Carnival, All-Campus Talent Show, and Miss MSU pageant. A major endeavor this year was the publication of a magazine geared to be a forum for student opinion, and a stage for collegian contributions. Future plans include expansion of the magazine to four issues per year. Union Board's kaleidoscope of activities provides a wide range of services and recreational opportunities for the University community.

The Thieves' Market art show attracts student talent.

WIC

As the major governing group for the women residents on campus, the Women's Inter-residence Council serves as the agent between the halls and the University. Composed of the women's residence hall presidents, members of WIC share a common goal of progressive government for the University coeds. Its functions include the initiation of studies and formulation of policies appurtenant to women residents. Of major concern this year was the attempt to gain acceptance of the selective hours policy for freshman coeds. The struggle terminated with the institution of a compromise proposal abolishing hours for all women students except fall term freshmen.

Maintaining a communication link between the residence halls and administration as well as providing legislative channels is a prime task of the Men's Halls Association. The group this year moved to enact legislation liberalizing visitation policies in residences. the initial proposal met with many obstacles, and was referred to committee for re-examination. After long debates, a revised proposal, which provides that the individual residence halls set visitation regulations, was accepted. In addition to the responsibilities of guidance and government, MHA coordinated many academic and social functions associated with dorm life, by sponsoring mixers, movies, and a blood drive in conjunction with WIC.

EXCALIBUR

Traditionally a symbol of excellence, Excalibur is a fitting epithet for this group of campus leaders. With interests in sundry areas of university life, members converge at regular dinner-meetings to discuss current projects and events. Animated conversation in such a relaxed atmosphere also provides an arena for free discussion of contemporary issues. Besides this primary function, Excalibur also meets occasionally with representatives of the University community. Informal dialogue with administrators at unstructured sessions helps bring about a homo-geneity of aims and puts them in perspective. Each spring, the thirteen members of this senior men's honorary select thirteen pledges whose charge it is to perpetuate Excalibur's ideals of service.

SENIOR COUNCIL

Instead of trying to unify a class of thousands, this year's Senior Council concentrated on seeking out the senior and serving his individual needs. Forums, projects and events centered around those areas which specifically relate to him, such as employment, politics, and the ever-present draft. The council also organized those traditional events which are important parts of the senior year: receptions at President Hannah's, Senior Swing-Out and commencement activities. Outstanding students are selected by the council to be honored as seniors of the week or members of the "Sixty-Nine Club," an honorary which includes only those seniors who have made important contributions to MSU.

AWS

Associated Women Students is the activities programming organization for all Michigan State coeds. Its fourteen member General Council is open to all women students through open petitioning. Fall term AWS conducts the Who's Who and What's What program to inform women students of activities and organizations open to them, while during the school year they send career information to Juniors and Seniors. Spring term events include Women's Week and Lantern Night, co-sponsored by Mortar Board, held to honor fifty outstanding Senior women. Activities this year included a drug symposium fall term, with speakers such as a lawyer, a member of the campus police force, and Dr. Garskof, former assistant professor of psychology. AWS also originated the selective hours proposal and was part of the steering committee for the winter term Sexuality Symposium.

GREEN SPLASH

Almost fifty years old at Michigan State, Green Splash is a group formed for the enjoyment and study of synchronized swimming. An honorary organization, Green Splash chooses its pledges through tryouts each fall. This year the swimmers had a crowded activities schedule. The Annual Synchronized Water show, open to the public, is a major event where various forms of water ballet are demonstrated. Local high schools receive invitations to the winter term clinic, at which Green Splash members teach synchronized swimming and show movies of expert swimmers in this field. The Intercollegiate Competition, an annual event held in March this year at Central Michigan University, draws similar clubs from universities all over the midwest. This meet has competition in solo, duet, trio, and group swimming.

JEAN PIAGET SOCIETY

Carson C. Hamilton, faculty advisor.

Education is the building material of a strong tomorrow. In keeping with this spirit, the Jean Piaget Society emphasizes keeping apace of current trends and developments in the world of academics. Membership is open to students and faculty, but the society's members form a small nucleus. The Society itself recently became an associate member of the World Confederation of Organizations of the Teaching Profession. A major priority was encouraging undergraduates to write and publish educational research. The organization has urged students to request more independent study. Numerous specific recommendations to student advisory committees were made. Efforts to formulate such recommendations and individual's independent research in a more professional tone were also made. As progress catapults technology into tomorrow, the Jean Piaget Society strives to keep education in the forefront of advancement.

JUDO CLUB

Grace and simplicity of style characterize Japanese life and the sport of judo is no exception. "The gentle way" is what the Japanese call it. Midst the hard falls and seemingly lethal holds there is evident the easy grace of movement and skill of precise timing that makes this refined form of jujitsu so popular within the university. The Judo Club sponsors an annual invitational meet for the midwestern area in which its own six man team competes and has previously won honors. Long hours of diligent practice are required to attain the honored sable-colored belt that denotes expert skill in this ancient sport. Tradition and etiquette accent this art of self-defense with an Oriental flavor.

PAN-HEL

Uniting and coordinating all twenty-two sororities is the primary aim of Pan-Hel. This governing body, composed of two members from each sorority, regulates such aspects of Greek life as rush and the key systems initiated this past summer. Now, in some houses, each girl has her own key. If the university approves, the sororities will have freshmen rush next fall. Pan-Hel is also involved in running a community center for SCOPE. Student Community Organization through Panhellenic Effort is the philanthropic project through which Pan-Hel contributes to the community.

IFC

As one of MSU's major governing bodies, IFC governs social regulations for fraternities and seeks to promote brotherhood among them. It also serves the university's fraternities by coordinating and promoting rush-week activities. A new rush policy instituted this year permitted first term freshmen to rush, thereby changing the major fraternity rush from winter to fall term. This spring, along with Panhellenic Council, IFC had the honor of hosting delegates from the Big Ten Universities at the annual Panhellenic-Interfraternity Council Conference.

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

Scholarship is the key to leadership in today's highly technical society. Alpha Lambda Delta has endeavored to encourage this quality among freshmen women. By sponsoring scholastic and cultural events in the dorms, this women's honorary attempted to create an atmosphere conducive to intellectual stimulation and growth. Tutoring foreign students provided opportunities for establishing meaningful friendships as well as providing mutual learning experiences. Other services the group offered to the campus community included assisting at J-Day and holding an annual party for orphaned children.

BETA BETA BETA

Beta Beta Beta opens its membership to those students of life sciences who have done superior work in their major field. Bi-weekly meetings accent such diverse areas of interest as wildlife, microbiology, and zoology. Being a biological sciences honorary, the club focuses its activities on guest speakers and programs which explore topics of current interest in the sciences. At the annual banquet, which is primarily an initiation ceremony, students who have had a provisional membership are admitted into the honorary.

BLUE KEY

For the first time Blue Key has made it possible for MSU students to be recognized in "Whos' Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges", a list of top honor students. A committee of students and faculty members nominated thirty-seven students on the basis of scholastic, athletic and leadership qualities. These will be sent to the publisher for approval. Blue Key is also trying to institute a program for faculty-student lunches enabling any student to take an instructor to lunch free in a resident hall. Blue Key members are chosen from petitions and nominations each Spring to honor service to MSU and the community.

CIRCLE HONORARY

The purpose of Circle Honorary is to recognize leadership among women living in residence halls. A relatively new institution, founded here in 1959, Circle Honorary presently has 80 members. Membership is limited to one percent of the number of women in residence halls. Women are chosen from nominations received from head resident advisors and hall presidents. Annual activities include the Head Advisors' Tea during winter term and tapping and initiation Spring term. This spring Circle Honorary plans to establish a chapter at Western Michigan University, just as the MSU chapter was established by the members at the University of Michigan.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Delta Phi Epsilon is a professional fraternity for men interested in the field of international relations, including foreign trade and foreign service. Weekly meetings are held with speakers discussing matters such as international trade, Canadian-American relations, student unrest, poverty in the slums and the war in Vietnam. Winter term, Delta Phi Epsilon sponsored a Canadian-American Conference where students met to discuss common issues and problems. Last year Senator Muskie from Maine was the keynote speaker.

DELTA PSI KAPPA

Delta Psi Kappa, the national physical education honorary, promotes fellowship among those girls who have maintained a high scholastic record in this field. Meetings center around the physical education professions and each year the club holds a retreat on Lake Michigan to initiate new members and to formulate future plans. As a service to the physical education department, this honorary maintains a record and book library and also sponsors a fall tea open to all physical education majors and faculty.

KAPPA DELTA PI

The Epsilon Delta chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national teachers' honorary, is a well-established organization at MSU. The approximately eighty members, juniors and seniors in the College of Education, are in the upper fifth of their class. To maintain high professional and intellectual standards, Kappa Delta Pi sponsors programs featuring speakers from educational fields. This year Dr. Kelly of the Honors College spoke of graduate school opportunities for education majors. The Placement Bureau also presented a program on their services in relation to education.

MORTAR BOARD

Mortar Board, a national senior women's honorary, recognizes those women who have exhibited outstanding performance in scholarship, leadership and service to the university. With the funds received from the sale of their annual Mortar Board Calendar, the members provide scholarship donations for deserving MSU students, thereby promoting scholastic excellence and leadership. In linking its quest of intellectual interest to that of the university, the honorary this year donated to MSU's sexuality symposium.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA

The MSU chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honorary, was established here in 1961. Junior and senior men with a 3.0 GPA are eligible for membership, and conspicuous attainment in the areas of scholarship, arts, publications, athletics or student activities is also required. Omicron Delta Kappa members do not engage in activities or special projects; rather, the organization serves in a consulting capacity. Meetings consist of a dialogue on current affairs and important issues. Dr. John Hannah and several local political figures were guests this year.

PI KAPPA GAMMA

One of the purposes of Pi Kappa Gamma is to give recognition to outstanding students in the packaging department. Juniors and above who have attained a 2.8 grade average in both packaging and all-university courses are eligible for membership. The society formed a definite program this year which included evaluation of packaging courses to give the faculty an idea of what students want in a course. The members also worked with the Packaging Society to publish an informative brochure to promote the field of packaging to students interested in the department.

SIGMA LAMBDA CHI

Sigma Lambda Chi at MSU, the original chapter of an honorary society for students of wood technology and building construction, now includes eleven member chapters across the country. Operating the largest independent loan fund on campus, the group promotes its field by making loans to students in the housing and wood technology programs. Recognition is also given by the society to an outstanding student in the department at Sigma Lambda Chi's annual awards banquet, held every spring since 1949.

TAU BETA PI

Tau Beta Pi is the only honorary that represents all branches of engineering. Membership requirements stress the well-rounded person with outside activities in addition to a primary interest in engineering. Initiates must also be in the top percentage of their class. Fulfilling a primary aim of fostering fellowship and academic stimulation, the society's most recent project involved efforts to coordinate the many engineering honoraries in order to create a program to extend aid to freshmen engineering students.

TOWER GUARD

Spring breezes mingle with soft voices and a shaft of sunlight falls about a solemn assemblage. In this quiet setting Tower Guard observes its May Morning Sing, where new members are being tapped. Devoted to promoting conscientious leadership, members donate their time to such services as reading to the blind, assisting at registration and ushering at commencement. In recognition of their achievements and high standards, this sophomore womens' honorary is the only campus society authorized to use Beaumont Tower as its meeting place.

AG COUNCIL

The Agriculture and Natural Resources Council has the difficult job of coordinating the activities of all the clubs affiliated with the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, such as the Block and Bridle Club, the Packaging Society, and the Parks and Recreation Club. Small Animals Day, held spring term, delighted some eight thousand Lansing area tots. Ag Council requested that University farms put out their baby animals and several fraternities transported carloads of underprivileged children, many of whom had never seen a baby wallaby, or even something as mundane as a calf or a foal.

ALL-CAMPUS RADIO

The purpose of the All-Campus Radio Board, a member of the Inter-Collegiate Broadcasting System, is to provide MSU students with the experience of operating their own station. Students with an interest in broadcasting apply for positions on the network staff, and after working at the various stations on campus, many have been placed on stations across the nation. Through news broadcasts and announcements of special campus events, All-Campus Radio strives to create a personalized radio station with the student audience as their primary concern.

AICHE

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers, a student branch of the professional society, introduces its members to the practical side of the life of a chemical engineer. Every year the group tours several plants and combines one of them with a ski trip winter term. This year Stroh's Brewery in Detroit and DuPont near Muskegon were on the itinerary. The group also hears speakers from several chemical companies such as Standard Oil Company and Dow Chemical Corporation. In November the members manned chemical laboratory equipment for the Engineering Exposition, an annual open house for all engineers.

ASMT

Assisting the Veterinary College in staging their annual Veta-Visit is one of the functions of the MSU student chapter of the American Society of Medical Technologists. Each spring the members and veterinary students demonstrate various techniques to high school students from all over Michigan. Some of these procedures are giving blood tests, injecting serum into protesting cattle, and running the Auto-analyser, an important time-saver for medical technologists, who are the mainstays of hospital laboratories. The chapter also familiarizes the students with the concerns of the professional society which is now lobbying for a bill to require a license for all medical technologists.

BLOCK & BRIDLE

With a membership open to all MSU students, the Block and Bridle Club promotes knowledge of livestock and interest in judging and showing animals. Many animal husbandry, vet medicine and agriculture majors find the club a valuable experience for working with and judging animals. Little International, the club's winter activity, gives Block and Bridle members and MSU students an opportunity to display talent in showing a horse, beef animal, sheep or hog. This spring, the club held its 21st Annual Horse Show. The proceeds from this event support the inter-collegiate judging team, which travels throughout the United States.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

As Christian Science Organization members strive to incorporate precepts of their faith into their everyday lives, they experience true friendship and fraternity. Services and meetings provide opportunities for students to discuss application of their beliefs and to strengthen Christian fellowship. To promote understanding of Christian Science on campus, the society has made their publications available to all students. This year, the organization sponsored lectures and seminars to provide meaningful associations.

FILIPINO CLUB

The Filipino Club provides moral support for new students from the Philippines by helping them adjust to university life. To promote knowledge of the culture of their native land, members are available for lectures and civic groups. Participation in the International Festival, where members sponsored a booth representing the Philippines, climaxed the club's activities. They also participated in the International Festival Talent Contest, an event which has netted them a trophy all twelve years of the club's existence.

HPER CLUB

Dedicated to promoting professional interest in the field of physical culture and health, the HPER Club organized a collage of programs throughout the year. This being the year of the Olympics, the organization arranged for participants in various events to speak on the importance of physical and mental well-being. Essentially a service organization, the society maintained a cheerleading clinic for prospective candidates and sponsored a dance demonstration by students from a Detroit inner-city school.

PACKAGING SOCIETY

In its role as the student chapter of the Society of Packaging and Handling Engineers, MSU's Packaging Society acts as a service organization to the packaging student. Field trips and guest speakers at meetings enable members to become better acquainted with their future careers. At its annual banquet, the society honors members who have made outstanding contributions to the industry. This year the society donated funds to Lansing's St. Vincent de Paul Society to buy Christmas presents for underprivileged children.

RESIDENCES

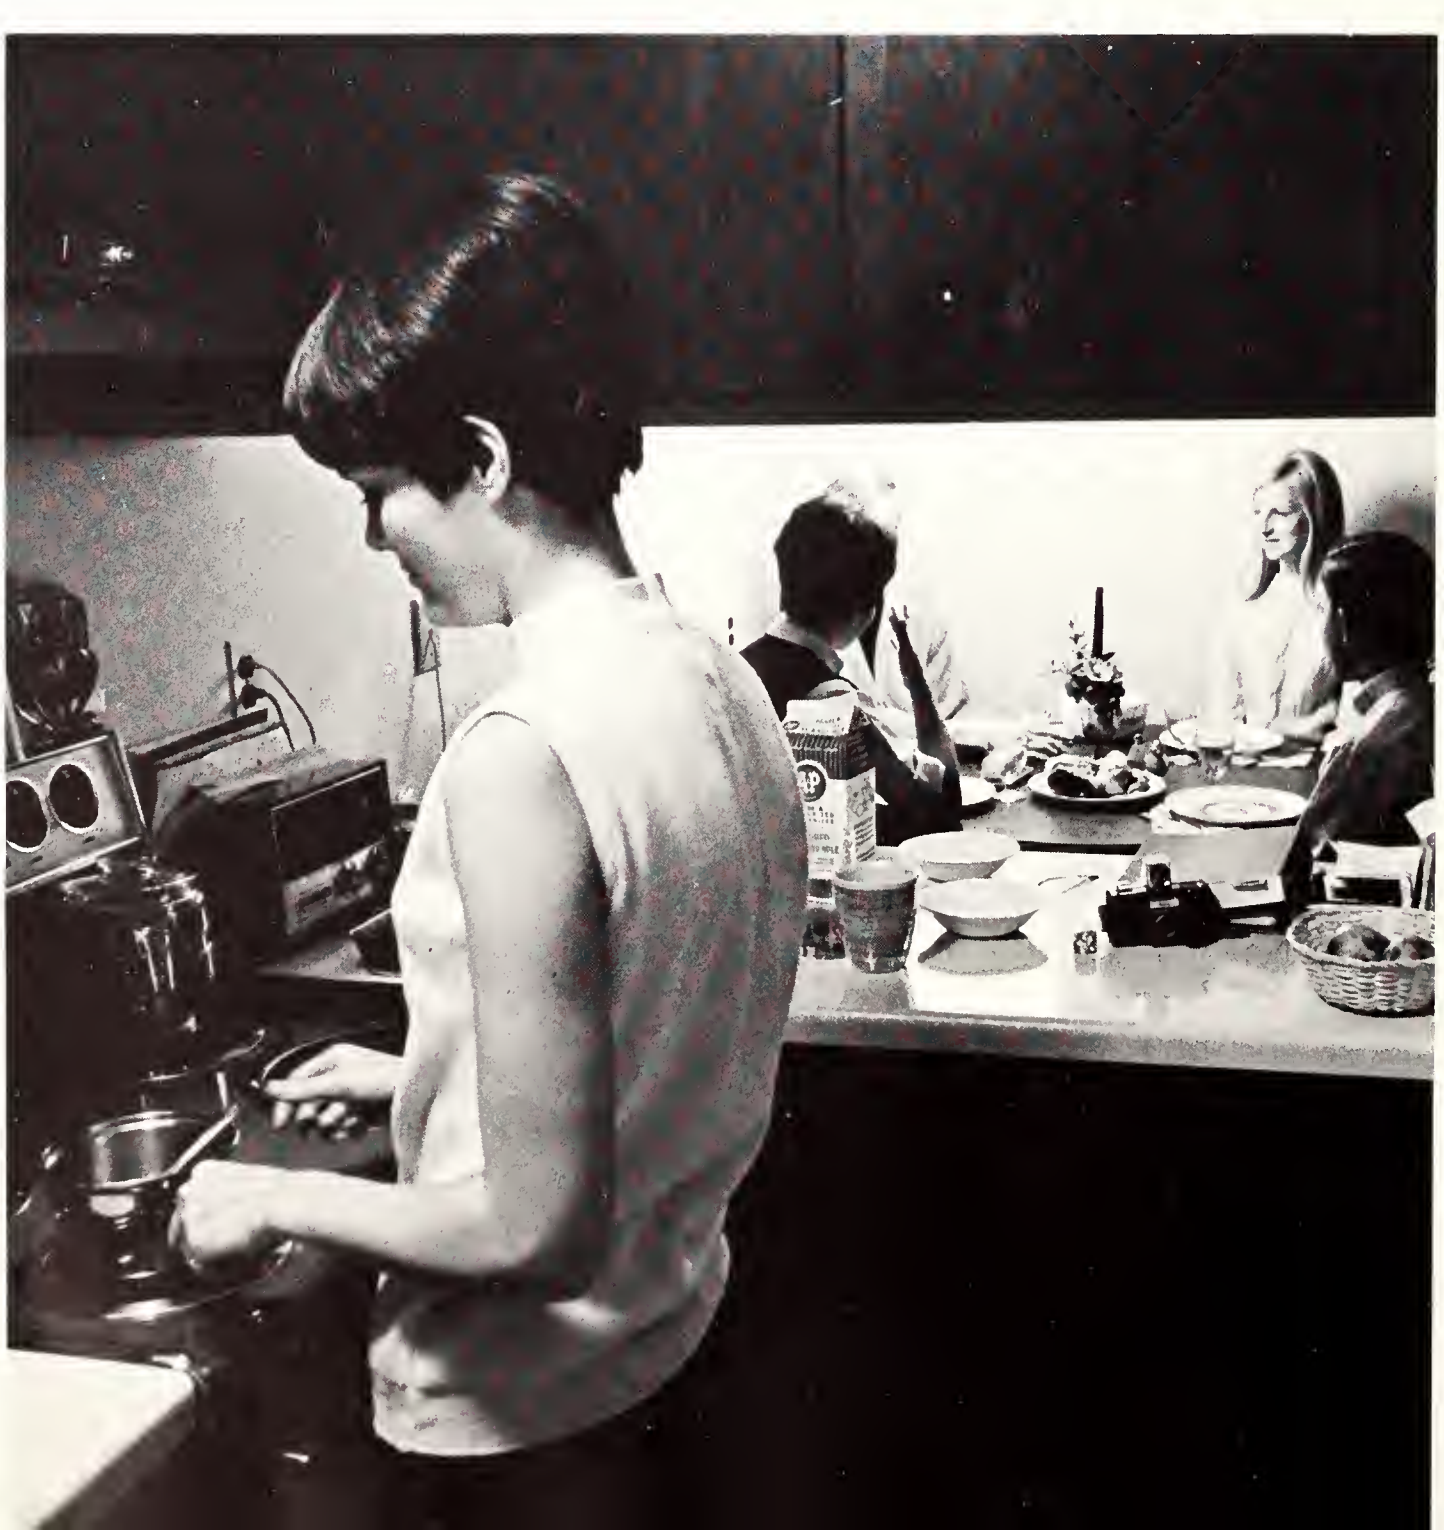
When a student arrives at college for the first time, he receives the status of freshman and is placed in a sparsely furnished room of some MSU residence hall. Gradually, though, the room begins to take shape, as personal items and a little ingenuity turn it into a place to call home. Strange people become valuable friends and the dorm life pushes him into campus involvement and a collage of activities. Of the many activities and organizations available, the freshman can always find his special interest, either in or outside the dorm. At first, he may feel alone and afraid, but as the weeks progress he becomes acquainted with the college, academically and socially. MSU and college life then become a real home.

Friendships are formed quickly in an apartment atmosphere on Sunday afternoon; friendships which lead to dinner dates

Residences Provide Learning Experience

Once the student has passed the critical stage in his college career known as "freshman frenzy", he becomes more suave and self-assured upon reaching his sophomore year. New habits and friends are formed and, perhaps, the advantages of a sorority will be considered by the girls or the freedom connected with off-campus living will attract the guys. So they move out of the residence hall and into Greek homes, co-ops, apartments or married housing. No matter where he lives, however, the student receives an education—maybe not the kind of knowledge gained in the classroom but the experience of getting along with various types of people and of facing up to the many challenges which MSU residences offer to each individual student.

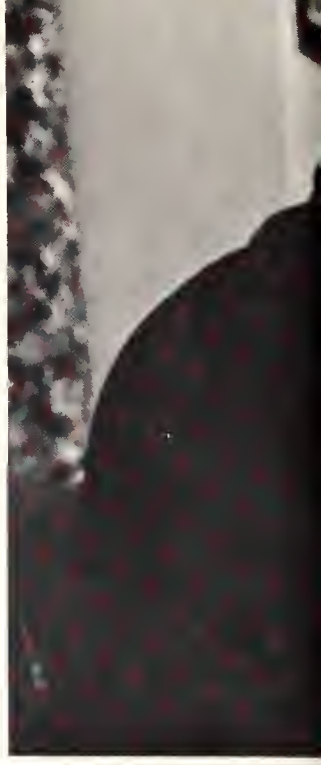


The three Greeks above look pretty "tired" while these pre-Spartans are ready to ride

Getting up in the morning for breakfast and cleaning the apartment are the student's responsibilities while living off campus.

Let's see, does a roast take two or three hours to cook . . . Are real potatoes cheaper than the boxed variety . . . Don't forget to pay the electric bill this month . . . Garbage really piles up around here . . . Who's turn is it to vacuum the carpet . . . Where did all these beer cans come from . . . Oh, no, the lights just went out! Weren't you supposed to pay that bill? Learning from mistakes is a big part of off-campus living, no matter if one lives in an apartment, a house or just a rented room. Where else could one get a complete education in home management? The carefree days of the dorm are gone. Now there are other responsibilities which force a student to budget his time and money carefully. Hungry roommates will verify the fact that it isn't that easy to forget about making dinner just because there is a test the next day.

OFF-CAMPUS LIVING; PERFECT FOR INDEPENDENTS



Enjoying "Laugh-In" during a study break; playing cards around the kitchen table on a dull "do nothing" night; celebrating the Notre Dame victory with an impromptu party; raiding the refrigerator for a midnight snack; serving Sunday dinner to that special man in your life; studying with your feet propped up on the coffee table; being alone in your bedroom for a few moments of welcomed relaxation are all a part of the "Sweet Life"—off-campus living.

Cosy surroundings and a cheery atmosphere usually prevail in Greek residences.

A rich comfortable atmosphere to come home to, a close feeling of shared experiences and good times with a houseful of other girls or guys, and a sharing of the organization's ideals are all a part of Greek living. Greek life offers a student the opportunity to establish an identity beyond that of being "just a number." It provides the warmness of a home where each individual is in some manner responsible for its functioning. Close, lasting friendships are established, perhaps more as a result of the variety of people living there, than personal similarities among its individual members. In one house alone, there may be merit scholars, beauty finalists, government leaders and top athletes. Or there are those from the big cities and the small rural towns. It may be said that it is this diversity in personalities that enhances the learning experiences of Greek life at MSU.

CLOSE FRIENDSHIPS MARK GREEK COMMUNITY

GREEKS STRIVE TO EMPHASIZE INDIVIDUALITY

"Best sorority at Michigan State!"
"The oldest professional business fraternity!"
"The number One sorority!"
"MSU's First Fraternity!"
"The brotherhood of the non-secret fraternity!"
Such boasts are common among Greeks for although all share a general identity, rivalries exist as each house strives to emphasize its own assets and attributes. Whether it be fraternity or sorority sports competition, float-building for homecoming and Water Carnival, or individual Greek events, the goal is the same — to obtain glory for the individual house. This eager participation in Greek activities also extends into sincere involvement in campus organizations and community projects.

Michigan State's first "Bunny" makes her debut at Sigma Chi's Derby Day.

The effort expended by these Greeks is surpassed only by their enthusiasm for their house which makes it all worthwhile.

ALWAYS A PLACE TO CALL HOME IN GREEK LIVING

The Daytona 500 revisited?

Brotherhood is recognizing who's snoring by his snore.
Sisterhood is 30 girls sharing 2 phones on Homecoming weekend.
Brotherhood is finding the new Playboy with the center foldout still there.
Sisterhood is working all night on a float.
Brotherhood is not worrying about the soup you spilled on the tie you borrowed.
Sisterhood is sharing secrets and keeping the secret.
Brotherhood is showing up for a football game against a team that outweights you by 30 pounds a man.
Sisterhood is pulling off a successful pledge raid.
Brotherhood is going out to paint the fraternity letters on the U-M Diag.
Sisterhood and Brotherhood exemplify Greek living at MSU.

Brotherhood is the sharing of good times together whether it be serenading your sister sorority or cheating at your favorite card game.

Greeks Big in Campus Events

Besides sponsoring their own functions like the Junior 500, fraternities and sororities work actively in university-sponsored events like Homecoming.

Pledging, Greek Week, Junior 500, Derby Day; all of these activities are a part of going Greek.

The women of Alpha Chi Omega passed a milestone this year, as their years of work with a boy stricken with cerebral palsy were rewarded when he was at last able to graduate from high school. He was honored at a special dinner party for what was for him a difficult achievement, and inducted into "Knights of the Red Carnation", a group of honorary sorority members comprised mainly of Dads. Alpha Chi Omega also played a part in MSU's annual Jazz Festival, as they held a Jazz Band Dinner for the members in return for entertainment by the band.

The fraternities and sororities residing on Harrison Road were welcomed back by the Alpha Delta Pi's this fall, as the girls delivered breakfast donuts to each house. The ADPi's showed their affection toward faculty members as well, hosting a dinner for favorite professors and their spouses. Besides being good hostesses, the ADPi's are serious workers, boasting more officers in student government than any other sorority. The women are especially proud of the fact that the only MSU coed on the Lansing Human Relations Board hails from Alpha Delta Pi.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

MSU students have a chance to display and perhaps sell the results of their artistic endeavors at the annual spring Art Show, Alpha Epsilon Phi's contribution to Greek Week. Judges from the Art Department are treated to dinner at the house, and all work is later displayed on Grand River with ribbons identifying the winners. Another unique facet of the AEPhi's is their Big Sister—Little Sister program. The names of each of the AEPhi's and their little sisters are placed in a box, and the new pledge class draws names. The last girl's name left wins a weekend in New York with her big or little sister.

ALPHA GAMMA DELTA

The road runner won again as Alpha Gamma Delta's float took first place in the homecoming competition. The enthusiasm that the AGD's display for homecoming was also seen at Water Carnival, Greek week, Derby Day and in their service projects. Every year the Alpha Gams sponsor a Halloween Party for cerebral palsied children in Lansing, and during spring term they sponsored an altruistic car wash as part of their philanthropy. Last Christmas their busboys were given a party in their honor. As the senior women served the meal, the busboys were the target for water balloons. Tradition, also a part of Alpha Gamma Delta, is shown at the May Morning Breakfast where the sisters honor the graduating seniors.

ALPHA KAPPA ALPHA

Established on campus in 1954, the Delta Zeta chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha is relatively new to the Greek community of Michigan State. The girls emphasize the scholastic and cultural aspects of college life. In each pledge class, scholastic achievement is rewarded by a diamond for the top pledge's pin. The AKA's annual Biafran Benefit is held in conjunction with their graduate chapter to welcome Biafran students on campus. The students provided the entertainment with some native African dances and a fashion show, all to raise money for the Biafran Fund. Purely social is their annual Pink Lady winter formal, when a sweetheart and court are chosen. Outstanding members of AKA are Ella Fitzgerald, and Mrs. Martin Luther King.

ALPHA OMICRON PI

Proud of their status as one of the smallest sororities on campus, Alpha Omicron Pi encourages individuality in each member in order to avoid the stereotyped personality. However, as a group, the girls work closely with Sparrow Hospital for the National Arthritis Foundation, annually sponsoring a Halloween party for the children there, and complementing their services with a magazine drive to benefit the Arthritis Fund. Highlight of the year is the Rose Ball held at the Jack Tar Hotel, when roses are presented to the outgoing president and all the new pledges. New this year is a hootenanny type rush party, held after formal rush winter term, to acquaint all interested freshmen with Greek life. Presently, AOP's are in the process of planning for a new house to be built on Grand River next fall term.

ALPHA PHI

A Halloween trick-or-treat party for heart patients was the Alpha Phi pledge class project this fall, as the girls entertained several Lansing-area children at local hospitals. Emphasizing philanthropy, the Alpha Phi's also donate time twice a week to work for project SCOPE, teaching or entertaining underprivileged children. One need not be poverty-stricken, though, to merit Alpha Phi's attention; this year, the women gave giant valentines to each of MSU's fraternities on Valentine's Day. The Alpha Phi's also opened their doors to the public this year as they held their first open house with Kappa Kappa Gamma.

ALPHA XI DELTA

The year 1968 had special meaning for the women of Alpha XI Delta because it marked the 75th National Diamond Jubilee, the 75th anniversary of the sorority. The event was celebrated at the National Convention in Sun Valley, Idaho. During the year special parties included a Christmas party with each girl acting as a Christmas spirit, the pledge picnic where the pledges fixed the dinner, and the inter-sorority breakfast with the Alpha Gamma Delta sisters. A banquet was held in the spring to honor the seniors, to give an award to the outstanding Alpha Xi, and to present a scholarship ring to the junior with the highest grades. During Greek Week, the sisters had a picnic for underprivileged children, and were in the finals for Greek Sing.

CHI OMEGA

The women of Chi Omega boast the largest national membership of any national sorority. They moved into their new house on Burcham Drive winter term, but due to the building strike and weather problems, the house wasn't completely finished. Since the landscape didn't permit use of the front door, a tunnel entrance created great interest. Two service projects were supporting an orphan from South America through the Child Care Program by writing letters and sending a check each month, and holding a Halloween party for underprivileged Lansing children with the Delta Upsilons. The Chi Omega's sponsored the philanthropic project, Christmas Kindness by collecting cans of food and taking them where they could be distributed to needy people. They placed second in sorority scholarship last year and won first place in the Sigma Chi Derby Day.

The women of Tri-Delta sorority place particular emphasis on participation in service to the community through SCOPE, aid to underprivileged children in the Lansing area. The philanthropic project is the awarding of scholarships to two outstanding girls, including non-Greeks. At the Founder's Day dinner on Thanksgiving the alumni were invited and chapter roll was called. On the annual Parent's Weekend, parents were treated to a football game and dinner. To highlight Halloween, the Tri-Delta sisters sang Peanut's Pumpkin Carols and gave pumpkins carved with Greek letters to various fraternities. The Pansy Breakfast was held in the spring to honor the graduating seniors.

The philanthropic project of the Delta Gamma women, aid to the blind, forms the basis for their service work. Each girl reads to blind students on campus for one hour a week throughout the year. The sorority sponsors a Christmas party for the children of the local school for the blind and has furnished equipment for the reading room for the blind in the MSU library. Fall is highlighted by the Powder Puff football game and friendly rivalry with the women of Gamma Phi Beta. The DG's have won this event for the past five years. The float for Water Carnival, built with the men of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, won first place for the second year. The DG's also won first place in Winter Weekend, when the pledges of the sororities compete in winter sports and group games.

DELTA ZETA

Much of the activity of the women of Delta Zeta centered around their national philanthropic project, speech and hearing. They organized a campus-wide drive to collect toys from dormitories and fraternities to be used in the new speech and hearing clinic on campus. Breaking tradition, instead of having a Homecoming float, money was contributed to buy a completely furnished doll house for the speech clinic. Dad's Day was held in the fall and Mother's Weekend in the spring when all the mothers were treated to dinner at Shakey's and slept in the dormers. Highlights of the year were the Triad Dance held in the Lansing Civic Center and sponsored by the pledge classes of Delta Zeta and two fraternities, and the Sweetheart Dinner on Valentines Day when every girl invited her sweetheart.

The chief "fun-raising" event of the school year for the Gamma Phi Betas, Powder Puff football, provides a chance for the sisters to take time off from their studies to become football heroes. Several fraternity men, however, have their chance to poke fun at the girls by staging a "Queen" contest during half time, doing their best to look sexy. While not overly stressed, scholarship is important to the Gamma Phi Beta girls, as demonstrated by the great number of sisters in Alpha Lambda Delta honorary. The Gamma Phi's showed off their creative talents this year by coming up with a second-place float for Homecoming.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Founded at DePaw University in 1870, Kappa Alpha Theta is the first Greek letter fraternity for women. The oldest is also the most active, co-sponsoring an all-campus welcome week mixer with the ATO's, a Christmas party for foreign children living in E. Lansing area with Phi Kappa Thetas and an annual Christmas tree trimming party with the Psi U's. Beauty titles seem to be natural for the sisters since both Kathy Hwass, Miss MSU, and Nancy Landis, 1968 Homecoming Queen, are Thetas. Home is where the heart is and fall term the house honored fathers in a weekend of football and partying at the Gables. Parents weekend is also special, as the girls take time out to honor their parents with a special dinner and challenge their fathers to a baseball game as the mothers cheer.

KAPPA DELTA

A Kappa Delta pledge need only look at this year's activities to sense the group's enthusiasm. The girls sang their way to second place in Greek Sing, and cheered their way to a Spirit trophy on Sigma Chi Derby Day. The Kappa Deltas have tentative plans to build an addition to their house which, when completed, would include a date library as well as more rooms. In the midst of all this activity, the Kappa Deltas found time to aid the Lansing community by reading to blind children at the Michigan School for the blind.

The Kappa cry of "Fire Up" aptly describes the eagerness of the girls to play an active part in MSU. Kappa Kappa Gamma boasted almost 100% participation as student aides in the Careers Carnival, and a number of sisters acted as group discussion leaders in the Human Sexuality program this year. Homecoming '68 offered MSU students a chance to let go and "Yell Like Hell" in a new contest sponsored by the Kappas. The sisters also took their turn to participate in a contest, ranking second in Greek Sing for their performance with Delta Chi.

PHI MU

The women of Phi Mu, who take pride in being original, planned an unusual Christmas party for several underprivileged girls this year. The Phi Mu's treated the girls to lunch at Capitol City Airport and arranged for Santa Claus to "fly in" for a special visit. The women have also begun a unique "dessert" program as an incentive to boost grades; a 2.5 or better merits a banana split, less than a 2.5 earns only a dish of jello. Phi Mu's "Pride Day" involved painting, refinishing, and weeding around the house and landscaping to show their pride in their sorority house. The women continued to support their national philanthropic project, the USS Hope.

The local chapter of Pi Beta Phi, the first national sorority, joins the national fraternity in supporting the Pi Beta Phi Settlement School in Gatlinburg, Tennessee. An annual event is the Monmouth Duo, a dance held with the women of Kappa Kappa Gamma to celebrate the founding of their national sororities at Monmouth College. The Pi Phi's join with the men of Delta Tau Delta, each Christmas, to promote Christmas spirit at the songfest and University Christmas Tree Lighting. During the past year, the Pi Phi sisters placed first in both the Junior 500 and Greek Sing.

SIGMA KAPPA

The women of Sigma Kappa were the runner-up for the Most Cooperative chapter in the nation in 1968. Traditional chapter events included the turn-about dinner for the bus boys, pledge slumber party, Big-Little Sister dinner, and the Junior-Senior picnic to honor the graduating seniors. Desserts with fraternities, exchange dinners with other sororities, and the Buddy Breakfast offered opportunities to meet other students. A scholarship dinner was held each term to recognize academic achievement. Faculty members were frequent dinner guests, also taking part in fireside discussions after dinner. The Sigma Kappa sisters did gerontology work at the Ingham County Rehabilitation Center. Parents were honored with a Father's football weekend and a Mother's Day Luncheon.

Zeta Tau Alpha has rightfully earned a place as one of the leading sororities at MSU this past year, ranking first in Greek Sing, first in the Sigma Alpha Mu Tricycle Race, and fifth in Sigma Chi Derby Day. The girls had to "lose", though, to win the Red Cross Blood Drive, with more girls donating blood than from any other sorority. The Zetas were very active within the Greek system, participating in the Little Sisters programs of several fraternities, and honoring parents at a Dad's Day fall term and a Mother's Day in the spring. The women continued to stress service to others as they filled food and clothing baskets for needy families at Christmas.

ALPHA EPSILON PI

The brothers of Alpha Epsilon Pi look on the fraternity as a place of living, learning, and service. Stressing this idea, AEPi participates in such campus activities as Water Carnival and Junior 500, but is also concerned with the larger community. In Lansing, the AEPi's support a Halloween candy-raising drive for children. The brothers also sponsor a child in India. At-home events are plentiful, with the Spring Formal highlighting the fraternity's social year. AEPi consistently ranks among the top fraternities scholastically and athletically, standing seventh in fraternity grade point average and eleventh in interfraternity sports.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI

As the largest professional business fraternity in the nation, Alpha Kappa Psi attempts to combine an even blend of business and pleasure in its activities. The AKPsi's hosted a number of guest speakers this year, as well as field trips to Chicago and New York. Scholastics are also stressed, with an annual scholarship presented to the brother with the highest grade point average. The AKPsi's emphasize their desire for a "whole man" image, with both professional and social qualities. The brothers are active in Homecoming, Water Carnival, and IFC. Their entry for Homecoming Queen '68 was selected to the queen's court. Finally, the fraternity culminates each school year with a formal dinner-dance in the spring.

A local merchant victimized by fire this year found what real friendship meant as the men of Alpha Tau Omega pitched in and did the necessary cleanup work, while their grateful friend wrote a letter to ATO national. The men continued to prove valuable friends both on campus and off, making showings in most Greek and university events. They were a finalist last year in the Junior 500, and also traditionally have been strong contenders for the Fraternity All-Sports trophy. The men of Alpha Tau Omega have always put forth a great amount of effort for the Muscular Distrophy and Easter Seal fund-raising campaigns. Last year they were nationally recognized with two merit citations for their work on these campaigns.

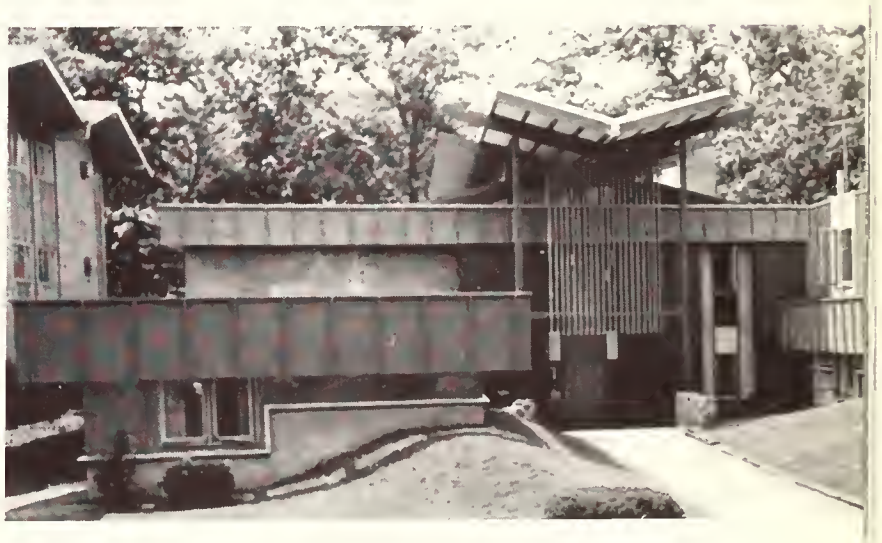
Imagine a fraternity house sliding slowly into the Red Cedar River, soon to become a Water Carnival Float; the "status gained by brother Dave Hayward upon being chosen the second ugliest Greek at MSU; outdoor activities during the Greek Winter Weekend; and you will begin to form an idea of the social life and brotherhood of Beta Theta Pi. As a social fraternity, the Betas' largest project this year was Greek Winter Weekend, co-sponsored with Delta Sigma Phi. This year, Beta Theta Pi and Delta Chi joined in petitioning for a traffic light near their houses on Grand River. The Betas, however, are concerned with more than social activities. The fraternity also commands respect for maintaining a high scholastic standard.



DELTA CHI

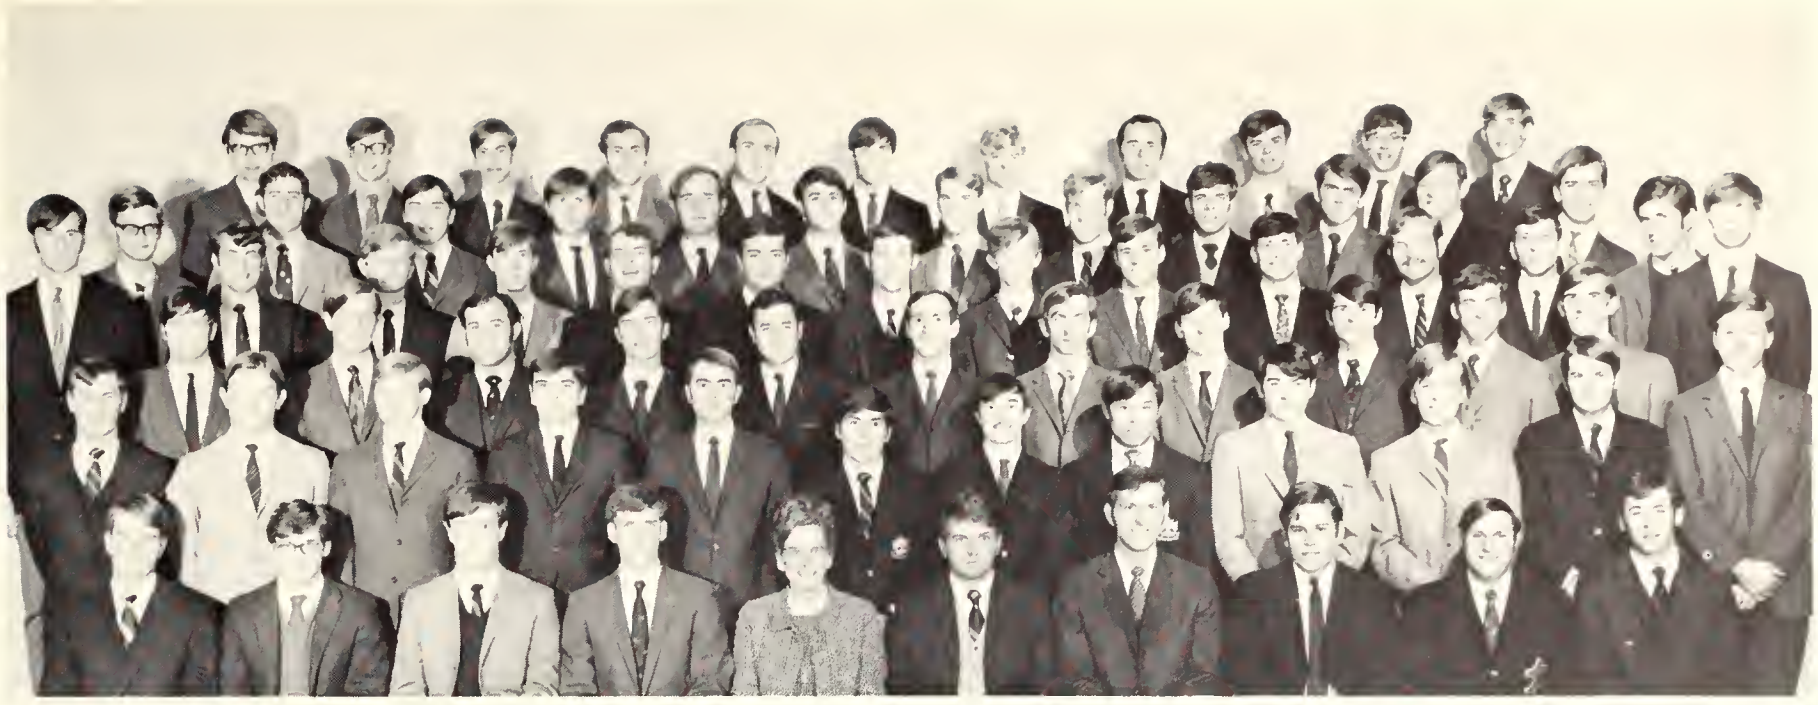
Both traditional and innovative ideas are welcome at Delta Chi, whose desire it is to combine both in shaping a diversified fraternity. A flair for the unusual inspired the Delta Chi's to hold their second annual House Cribbage Tournament, complete with managers, judges and prizes. The men also formed an honorary "Crash Club" to remind members to drive safely, but their range of interests runs to the more serious as well. A favorite pastime of Delta Chi is an evening of informal debates over elections or campus events. Another more traditional activity is the annual spring formal at the Lansing Country Club.



DELTA SIGMA PHI

Co-sponsorship of MSU's Greek Winter Weekend with Beta Theta Pi is typical of the active part the Delt Sigs play in a variety of campus activities. The men kicked off the year by sponsoring an all-university mixer, and later made showings in Homecoming and Water Carnival. The Delt Sig brotherhood is represented in such areas as varsity sports, intramural sports, and student government. The brothers lost their annual Tug-of-War with Phi Kappa Tau, but emerged instead as the official Pinball champions. Aided by their "Little Sisters of the Nile" chapter, formed only last year, the Delt Sigs reach beyond MSU to offer their services to Lansing-area orphanages.

The oldest fraternity on campus, Delta Tau Delta was established in 1872. The Delts placed second in the Junior 500 last year. For the past three years, they have placed either second or third in the IM sports competition, but they can't quite achieve first place. The men of Delta Tau Delta traditionally host the Queens Dinner, which is held in honor of the Homecoming Court. They have consistently ranked among the top ten in the fraternity grade competition. Also they have been chosen as one of the top ten chapters in the country, and have received the High Shields Award which represents the well-rounded fraternity.

DELTA UPSILON

Delta Upsilon's familiar victory bell, rung at Spartan home football games, suffered a temporary setback this fall as the bell broke down at a pre-season Spartan Spirit rally. After being towed across campus for "doctoring", however, the bell faithfully made its appearance at all of the home games. The brothers of DU, exhibiting an enthusiasm for being different, also sponsored the "Ugliest Greek" contest this year. The proceeds helped to defray the expense of Greek Week, and supported local charity. The men stress athletics and were active in all intramural sports. DU ranked in the top five fraternities, and placed first in Greek Week '68.

Farmhouse fraternity is finally succeeding in dispelling the image of "agricultural eggheads" often attached to it by unknowing students. The men of Farmhouse are striving for a "well-rounded image" and have shown their versatility by their achievements this year. The brothers are usually top contenders in Homecoming displays, and placed second in Homecoming '68. The popular activity of serenading provided good singing practice, as Farmhouse placed first among fraternities in Greek Sing. The fraternity again ranked first in grade point average, but the men attribute this to "a serious attitude about education", not to an emphasis on good grades.

1969 marks the 22nd annual running of the Junior 500, the largest single fraternity-sponsored event in the world, and the brain-child of Lambda Chi Alpha. Also the founders of MSU's Greek Week, the Lambda Chi's demonstrated all-around ability in almost every facet of campus life. With its membership comprising a whole spectrum of majors, Lambda Chi's grades have always been in the top 15, and they also tied for first in IM sports. Though carpenters they're not, the men spent many an energetic day remodeling their basement, reflecting Lambda Chi's pride in itself.

Phi Delta Theta's answer to the Junior 500, their annual Frisbee Tournament, is in its third year and still going strong. The brothers, who have been playing Frisbee for as long as they can remember, conceived of the idea as a way to become more well-known and to inspire rivalry among the fraternities. This year, the Phi Delts used their flair for originality and emerged as the 1968 Water Carnival Champs. Their float depicted the "true" story of Charles Lindbergh's flight to Paris and the fly that kept him awake during the trip. The brothers were also prominent in athletics, capturing third place honors in university football.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Remodeling and moving into the former Chi Omega sorority house presented some amusing problems for the men of Phi Gamma Delta, as they attempted to explain the feminine atmosphere to rushees. When the remodeling is completed, the new house will hold 40 members, as compared to 23 in the old house. The men feel that the change will give them a much closer fraternity. Several other new ideas were launched in 1969, and, for the first time, the Fijis were able to put out a calendar for their fraternity with the aid of local merchants. The brothers are also instrumental in organizing the All-Greek Talent Show at MSU.

PHI KAPPA PSI

"The Rock", a two-ton decorated stone, stands in front of and distinguishes the Phi Psi house. The landmark has come to represent the loyalty of the 36 brothers to their fraternity, whose emphasis on academics resulted in the contribution of four Phi Beta Kappas last year. The Phi Psi pledge class also placed first in scholarship among all fraternities. The brothers are active in nearly all Greek events, and have recently instituted a Little Sister organization to honor the girls most dear to Phi Kappa Psi—the "Sisters of the Golden Shield".

PHI KAPPA TAU

With an exciting array of majors, interests, personalities, attitudes, and abilities; Phi Kappa Taus have come together from all over the United States. The men live in the lively, yellow brick house over on Hagadorn Road; its apartment-style design is unique among fraternities here, and provides comfortable, more private accommodations. Though basically a social fraternity, with at least one party held every weekend, and spontaneous ones popping up every now and then, Phi Kappa Tau brotherhood extends far beyond the social life with members participating in almost every campus activity there is to participate in. Their own addition to these events is the exciting tug-o-war held over the Red Cedar River each October. Being on the ball academically, too, Phi Taus boast several brothers in the Honors College program. Anyway you look at it, living life is their "bag".

For the entire campus and especially for the Greek system, Greek Week is always a major activity of the year. The Sorority Tricycle Race sponsored by the Sammies is always a high-point of this week. To compliment their social life and social programs, the Sammies instituted a Little Sister program, last year. Now, one of the highlights of the year has become their annual pizza party designed to acquaint the sisters with the brothers and new pledges. The Sammies are also active participants in IM Sports and have consistently placed among the top ten. Scholastically they are at the top; placing first in the fraternity grade competition.

SIGMA NU

Well known for the balance existing among athletics, scholastics, and social life, Sigma Nu has been successful in achieving excellence in each area. Their recent athletic accomplishments include championships in golf, ping-pong, and football. Active in Greek Week, Homecoming, and Water Carnival, the brothers also sponsor Kiddie Day for the underpriviledged children of the area. Members of Sigma Nu are active in IFC, varsity sports, Varsity Club, and Phi Beta Kappa and Green Helmet Honoraries. The unifying bonds of brotherhood have maintained the Sigma Nu's while awaiting completion of their "Nu" house.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Although the Sig Eps took special precautions to guard "Sparty" after his theft by U of M last year, the campus mascot took another leave of absence last fall to "visit" the Sigma Phi Epsilon house at Western. He was safely recovered, however, and made his appearance at the remaining home games after Sig Ep posted a 24-hour guard. The men joined the Union Board this year in initiating "Mad Hatter's Midway", a carnival sideshow for the benefit of the Union Board Children's Fund. The Sig Eps also continued such service activities as the newly-organized "Kiddie Day" for inner-city youngsters.

THETA CHI

The energy of the Theta Chi's, demonstrated throughout the community this year, was exemplified by their Voters' Drive. This service involved providing transportation for people who are unable to reach the election polls, and also offering babysitting services. Advertising on television and in the newspaper helped to inform voters that Theta Chi was ready to assist. Theta Chi's concern for the Lansing community includes helping underprivileged children by entertaining them with games and lunch. Aside from community work, the men enjoy relaxing with such activities as their annual spring Water Balloon Fight with Alpha Tau Omega.

THETA DELTA CHI

Members of the Blue Key and Green Helmet Honoraries from Theta Delta Chi this year will represent the fraternity in the Big Ten Panhellenic Conference, to be held here at MSU this spring. The fraternity has also sponsored, last year, "Miss MSU for 1968", which last spring elected Miss Kathy Hwass to be "Miss MSU". Social activities for the Theta Delts include Greek Sing, Homecoming display, and Water Carnival, and during Greek Week last year they joined with Kappa Alpha Theta for "Kiddies' Day". "Sisters of the Shield" is their Little Sister program, while a parents' club, Founders' Day for alumni, and a regular speaker program set off community activities.

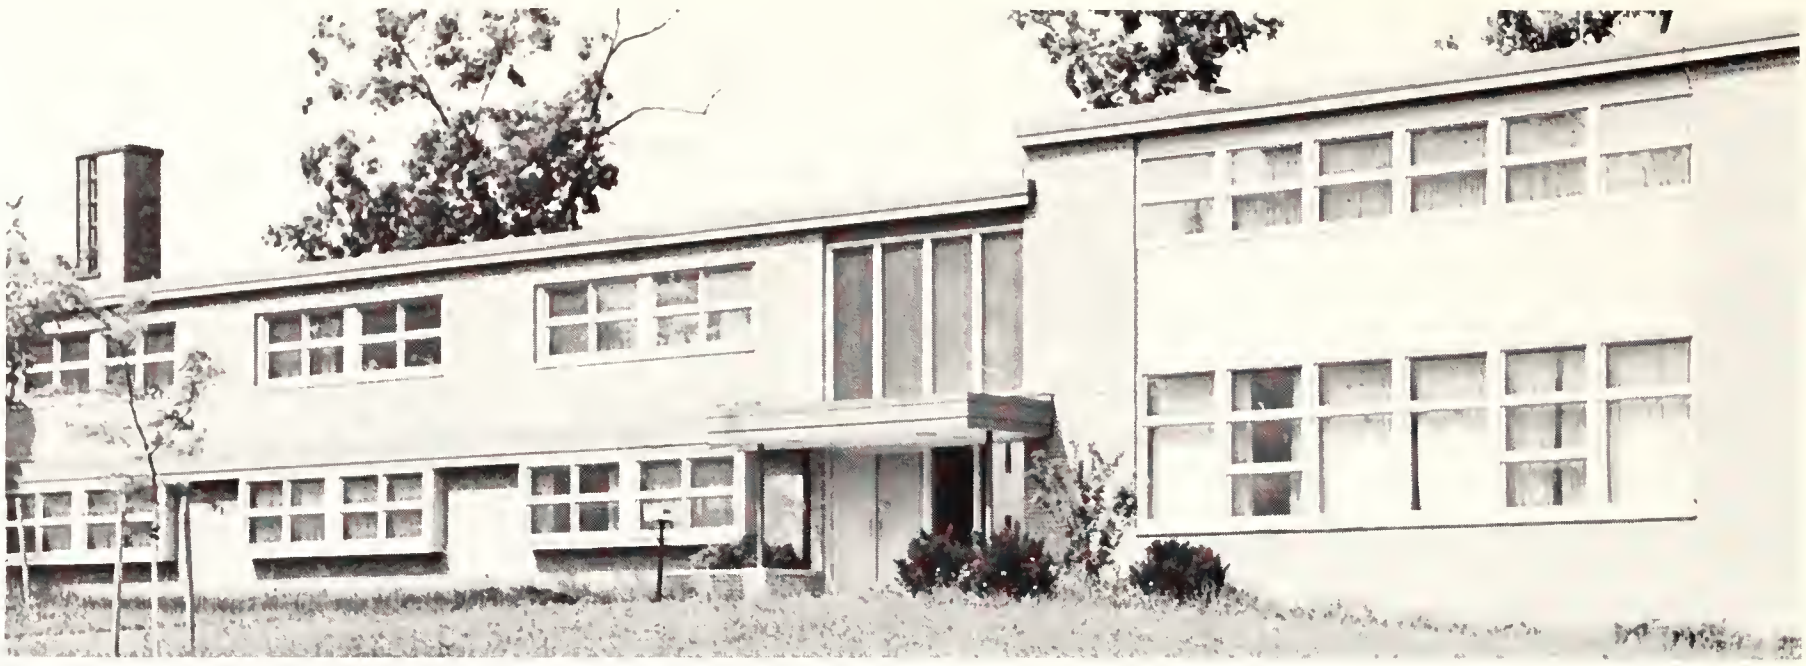
TRIANGLE

"Fraternity men are those men, who in a cooperative spirit, endeavor to develop and advance the precepts of their group by persistent effort and constant work." At MSU, one of every one thousand students belong to Triangle Fraternity. Though the number is not great, those few selected persons share in a community of men dedicated to brotherhood. Each brother realizes that fraternal life is giving and helping each other to gain the goal of self-determination. Teamwork, as exemplified by the chapter's grade point average and trophies in university competitions, is the password to success at Triangle.



ZETA BETA TAU

This year, the ZBT's joined Sigma Alpha Epsilon in initiating MSU's first charity football game. Each of Michigan State's 60 sororities and fraternities contributed to the $1,000 game, and the proceeds were donated to St. Jude's Leukemia Fund. Although the ZBT's were defeated, they bounced back into competition by ranking second in fraternity football and third in grade point average. The men followed the pattern of their winter term Florida party in beginning a similar New York party. The names of two brothers are drawn for all expense paid weekends in Florida or New York with their dates. The ZBT's also imported several hundred pounds of sand for a beach party in their house.

PHI GAMMA NU

As a growing business sorority, Phi Gamma Nu is earning a respected place among Greeks. The sisters toasted their brother fraternity of Delta Sigma Phi this fall at a joint professional meeting for future businessmen and women. Taking time out from their jobs as hostesses for College of Business activities, the Phi Gamma Nu's began their social calendar with a theatre party in the fall, and held a senior banquet in the spring. A concern for the underprivileged motivated the girls to sponsor an orphan in Korea, and to join Delta Sigma Phi in entertaining Lansing-area children at a Christmas party.

DELTA SIGMA THETA

Public service comes first in the life of a Delta Sigma Theta, and the sisters are proud of their projects this past year. These included reading to blind students, entertaining at the Delta Home for Girls in Detroit, and tutoring disadvantaged children in Lansing. The girls also participated in Jabberwock, a variety show sponsored by the Lansing Alumni Chapter, to raise funds for scholarships to be given to promising young women. The women sponsor the annual all-University Ice Breaker the first weekend of the fall term. The biggest event of the year is the Sweetheart's Ball, at which a "sweetheart" is chosen from each of the four Negro fraternities at MSU.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

The women of Sigma Delta Tau stress their views on the importance of parents by honoring them at Parents' Weekend each spring. Fathers received special treatment in the fall as their daughters gave a luncheon and treated them to the last home football game of the season. The sisters' tradition of service runs community-wide. Their major philanthropic project is offering their tutoring services every week at the Boys' Training School in Lansing. The SDT's also claim representation in Eidiphusicon drama honorary, and in Alpha Lambda Delta, composed of freshman women with a 3.5 grade point average or better.

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

Being the oldest fraternal organization on campus, Alpha Gamma Rho holds a tradition of dedication among its members. The men strive to promote acquaintances in their profession and a broader outlook on the field of agriculture. AGR works toward social, mental and moral development through fellowship within the fraternity. Their Guest-to-Dinner program promotes student acquaintances with men in their profession as they host speakers from such fields as education, government, commerce and agriculture. Placing high scholastically, among the top ten fraternities, does not draw from AGR's social life.

DELTA SIGMA PI

Delta Sigma Pi's annual tours to major companies resulted in an unexpected note of amusement this year as the brothers left one member behind at J.L. Hudson's in Detroit. This and similar visits to corporations are all a part of Delta Sigma Pi's dedication to making the business major's degree more complete through a program of tours, speakers and social activities. In athletics, the fraternity placed second in intramural track. This year's term party was a tribute to long-past high school days, as once again the brothers got out their white socks. Scholastically, Delta Sigma Pi ranks among the top five fraternities in grade point average, and has consistently exceeded the scholarship average for the College of Business as a whole.

KAPPA SIGMA

Kappa Sigma is a social fraternity with that "little extra" which makes it a real brotherhood. This year, the Kappa Sigs boasted a strong showing in intramural sports, bouncing their way to the basketball block championships for 1968. Expanding their activity agenda, the brothers reinstated the tradition of the Beer Baseball contest with their brother chapter at the University of Michigan for the stakes of a trophy and a keg. Kappa Sigma also began a service project for the North Side Community Center, providing rides to department and grocery stores for those who are unable to do so for themselves. The highlight of the year was their annual Jackson Day Dinner and meeting with alumni.

PHI KAPPA SIGMA

A recolonization of the fraternity with only eleven actives remaining in the house, and an accelerated rush with the goal of combating inactivity have set this year apart for the Skulls. Traditionally small with only 50 members, rush this year was designed to increase the quality of membership as well as the number of members, and complemented a $25,000 remodeling of the house. This year the MSU group was represented at the Phi Kappa Sigma National Leadership Conference held in Dallas, Texas. The Leadership Conference, a yearly event, includes the awarding of a Phi Kappa Sigma diploma to each graduating senior.

PHI SIGMA DELTA

Activity, a key word for the Phi Sigs, is evident by their participation in numerous projects. In the past two years they have received three trophies for their displays in Homecoming and Water Carnival. The men of Phi Sigma Delta collected over two thousand dollars for the Muscular Dystrophy Drive last year. In November, they hosted the Regional Convention for fourteen mid-western Phi Sigma Delta chapters. This diversity of activities has not detained the Phi Sigs academically, as they have placed second in the fraternity grade competition.

PI KAPPA PHI

A weather balloon floating over Spartan Stadium during the Baylor game complemented more traditional activities for the Pi Kaps; among them, Junior 500, Greek Week, an annual "Kiddie Day" picnic, and yearly participation in Water Carnival. Last year, one pledge raid featured a cannon and aerial bomb shooting cherrybombshells (which the pledges later recovered only by serenading.) Programs for this year also included a muscular dystrophy march led by the pledge officers late in the fall term. The Rose Ball, a formal dance featuring a champagne dinner and the presentation of the annual Rose Queen is the year's largest social event.

PSI UPSILON

Tradition is a key word which characterizes Psi Upsilon and provides an atmosphere of security for the brothers, as part of the second oldest surviving national fraternity. The Psi U's are most active in such familiar university functions as Homecoming and Greek Week. For the past few years, Psi U has always placed first or second in the float competitions. The brothers also emphasize the important part they play in Greek Feast. Scholastic achievement, as well as social, with six brothers in the Honors College, supports the Psi U Tradition of a versatile man.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The men of Sigma Alpha Epsilon attempt to promote campus leadership, along with their participation in MSU intramural sports. Activities include an annual Christmas party for orphans, which is presented in cooperation with East Lansing merchants. Sigma Alpha Epsilon takes much pride in the "Little Sisters of Minerva", which is a girls service organization chosen through a process of pledging. The "Little Sisters" are the working core for the fraternity projects, such as redecorating the house and planning fraternity socials.

SIGMA CHI

Last year, for the first time in MSU history the All Sports Trophy was retired. The honor was awarded to the Sigma Chi's who were all sports champs for the third consecutive year. In addition to this the Sigma Chi's were all university champs in football and basketball. Derby Day with its slap stick comedy proved to be another success, while the Sigma Chi's coached the sororities in the comical contests. After being branded with Greek letters the women competed in Musical Tubs, Butterfingers, Tire Race and Dec-a-Greek.

THETA XI

Theta Xi, a newcomer to the Greek community, is well represented on such campus organizations as IFC, Union Board, ASMSU, and the Executive Committee of Careers '68. Born three years ago as a small social club, Theta Xi has grown to be a colony of a national organization with seventy-six chapters, and is presently working hard to achieve fraternity and chapter status. The brothers are active in many community service projects. Foremost of these is the Michigan Action Corps, a political and social organization which works through the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Foundation. Activities differ from other fraternities, with skateboarding reigning as the favorite sport, while a ride now and then in the ambulance owned by one Theta Xi also provides excitement.

GAMMA DELTA IOTA

Going Greek is the goal of most of the upstanding dormitory residents. After becoming a Greek one obtains status, security, and social life. When much of Winshire House of Wilson Hall went Greek last year these men saw no reason why they could not join the exodus. They liked everyone, wanted better food, more freedom and more responsibility. They did not rush, were not pledged and did not become actives. They still wanted the extras of Greek life so they moved into their own house, the GDI's.

ASHER HOUSE

The streets of East Lansing shone with the lights and decorations of Christmas this year, thanks to the men and women of Asher House. In their efforts to spread Christmas spirit throughout the Lansing area, the members of Asher also held a Christmas party for underprivileged children. From its origin 22 years ago with eight men, Asher has expanded to a large religious co-op that has placed first in an unusual number of campus activities. The Asher men and women took top honors in the Canoe race, Homecoming, and Junior 500 this year. The Christian Science background of Asher members prompted them to support an orphan girl in India, and to sponsor picnics and programs for Christian Science preference students at MSU.

EVANS SCHOLARS

Evans Scholars showed the true spirit of brotherhood this year as they played Santa Claus to the advisor of their living unit. The men presented him and his family with a trip to Pittsburgh for Christmas in a surprise tribute. Evans Scholars, a scholarship living unit for men, combines fraternal living with a scholastic atmosphere. The organization offers a potential four-year scholarship to its members, and the Ames Award is presented annually to the most outstanding scholar. On the social side, Evans Scholars are active in Homecoming, Water Carnival, Junior 500, and intramural sports.

HEDRICK HOUSE

The goal of Hedrick House, the first co-op living unit on campus, is to provide a democratic living facility for university men. The men of Hedrick have been recipients of the Independent All-Sports trophy for competition in IM sports, and this year they had a perfect season in IM football; they lost every game. At the first football game, one member broke his collar bone; at the first basketball game, one member broke his leg; and at the time of this writing, the entire house was anxiously awaiting the first baseball game. Although their luck has run short in athletics, the men keep busy maintaining one of the highest G.P.A.'s on campus. Their social calendar has also been full, highlighted by their winter term party.

BETHEL MANOR

The alumni of Bethel Manor now have a way to keep in contact with house activities thanks to the newly-formed alumni association, which sends them monthly newsletters. Bethel Manor, an interdenominational living unit for Christian men, also serves as a center for Spartan Christian Fellowship. Its religious library is open to all MSU students, and each Bethel member traditionally contributes a book to the library upon his leaving. The men are not only proud of their library, but of the whole house, as they demonstrated by remodeling an entire floor this year.

CO-OPS COMBINE VARIOUS LIVING APPROACHES

Relaxation is being able to put your feet up on the coffee table.

Bridging the gap between the off-campus units and the on-campus residence halls are the co-ops. More economical than an apartment, co-operative living allows everyone to contribute a certain amount of time each week for the general upkeep of the house. Learning to cook for 30, group budgeting and division of chores are only a few responsibilities that must be taken on. A new approach to co-op living is Ulrey House, the first MSU co-op for women. Unlike the men, these girls have a grad adviser who counsels them. The house is run in a democratic fashion with weekly meetings such as in the residence hall. Although functioning separately from the university, all co-ops participate actively in events such as Homecoming and Water Carnival.

Sharing a companionship with guys of similar interests also necessitates cooking for this same gang.

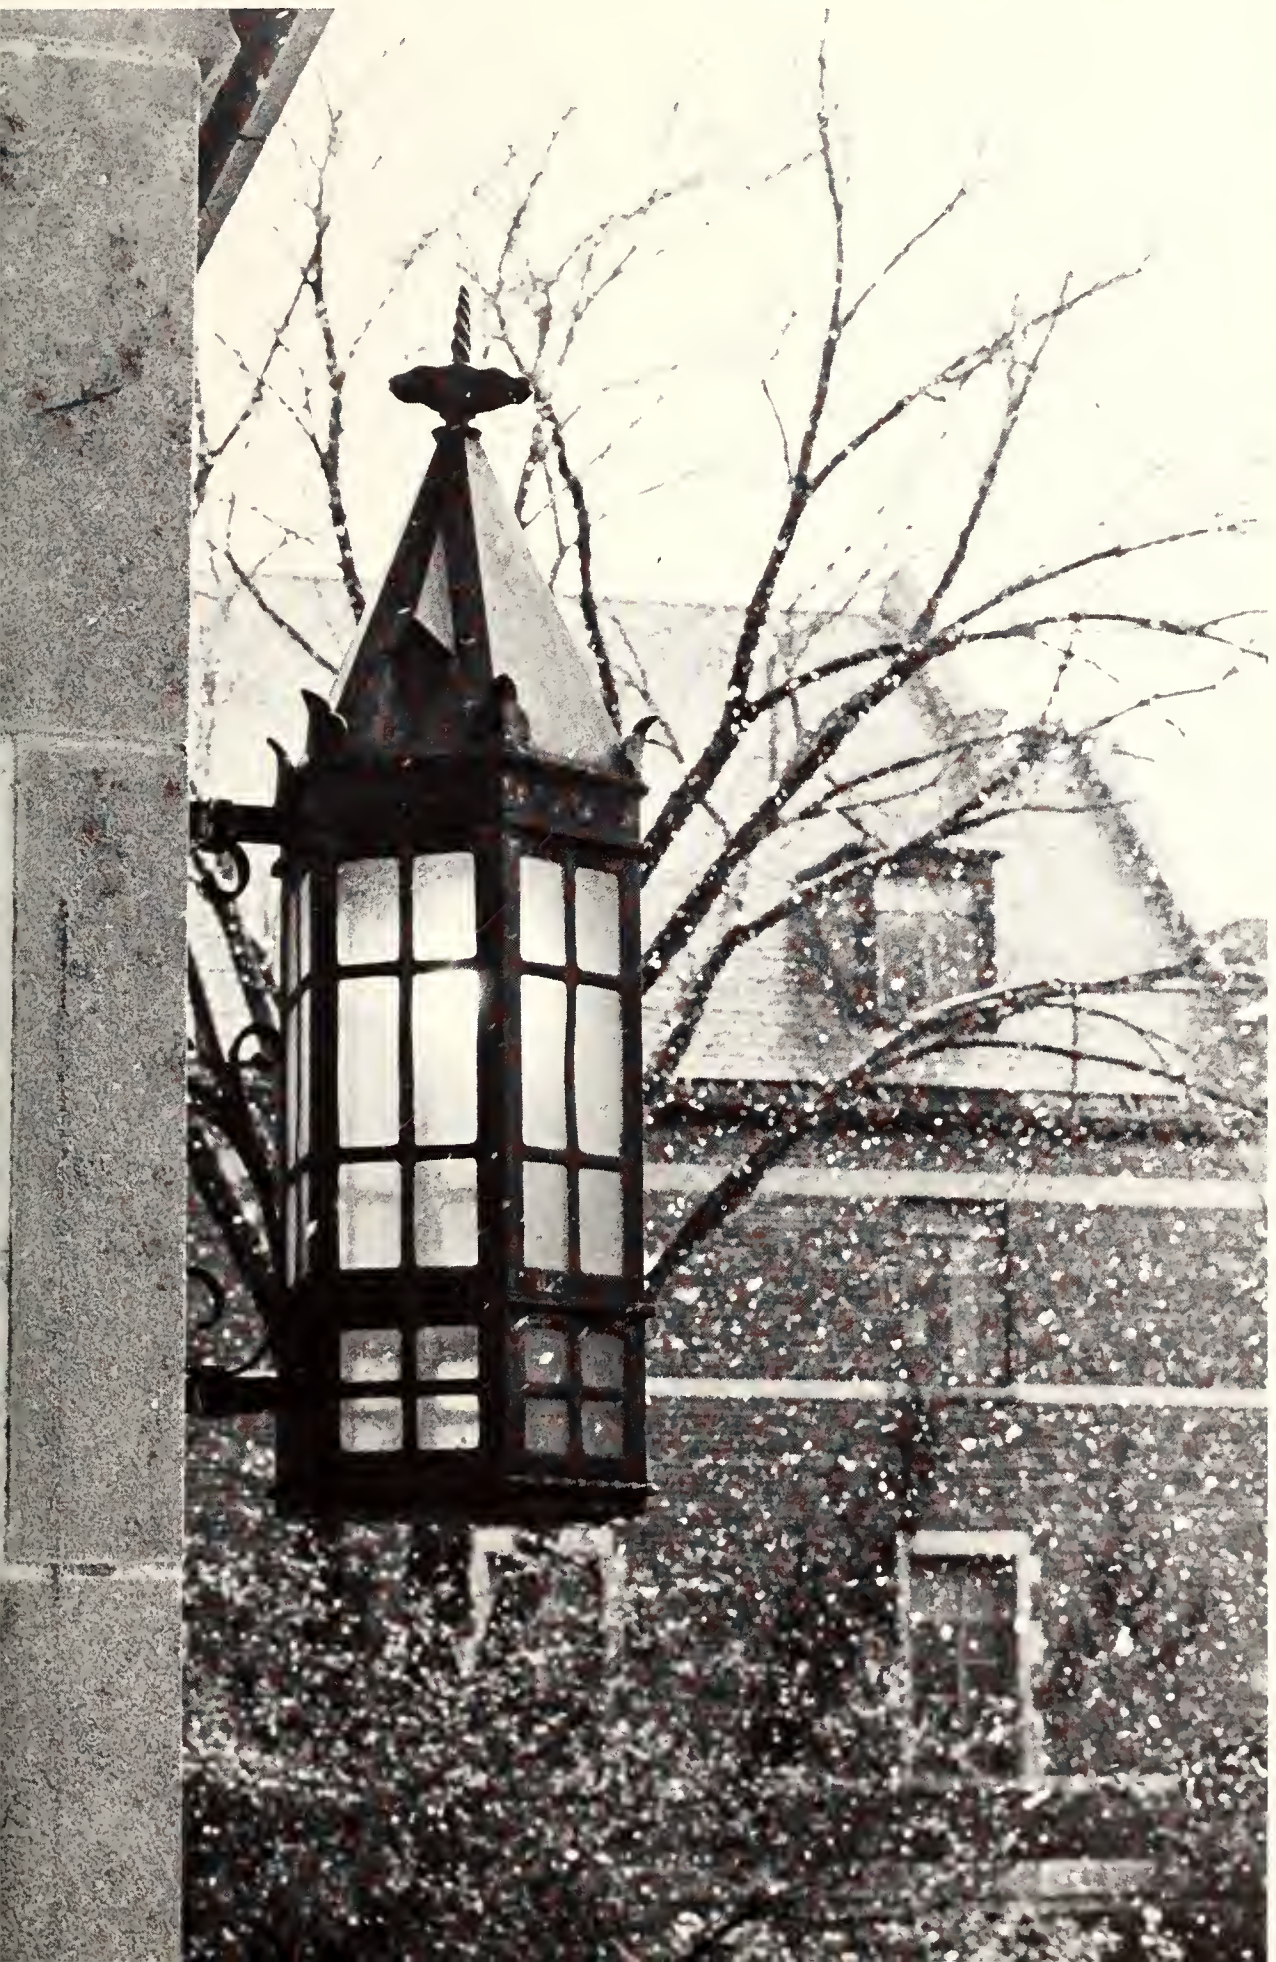
Students who are residence hall shopping can pick from the traditional interior of Gilchrist's Pub to the modern exteriors of the newer coed complexes.

HALL ATMOSPHERES VARY TO STUDENT TASTES

New York . . . Picasso . . . instant coffee . . . Frank Lloyd Wright. Are these part of your bag? Then the residence hall most suited for you is newly constructed Holden or twelve-story Hubbard.

Perhaps your mood is more on the line of quiet music, soft lights, velvet and New England. Then Williams with its elaborate entrance or Landon's plush lounge would be the most appropriate for you.

MSU provides a variety of dorms in various architectural styles and atmospheres to satisfy all individual tastes. With Brody at one end of the university compass and Fee at the opposite pole, the residence halls attract students with a variety of interests.



A house is not a home . . . until a student finds his own individual place in the society of the residence hall.

Freshmen soon realize the complexities of just one dorm and that it is just a tiny fraction of the gigantic university. Waiting in line for meals, waiting in line for linen, waiting in line for tickets, waiting, waiting . . . It's easy to be alone amidst thousands of people and yet easy to meet many of those people with just a flash of a smile. People soon get caught up in the whirl of dorm life — 8 o'clocks, bull sessions, meal complaints, endless telephone conversations, study breaks, committee meetings and social activities. Soon trips home no longer are a cause for excitement because the excitement is in coming back to "home."

THE HOUSE OF

BOREDOM NONEXISTENT IN RESIDENCE HALLS

The world's first ping-pong champ.

Bored, you say . . . nothing to do? Just get out of your bunkbed and look around, for the dorm provides the access to a whole range of activities to suit anyone's tastes. Want to attain glory for your individual residence hall? Homecoming and Water Carnival time provide a chance to achieve this aim. Want to know people better? Exchange dinners or floor functions furnish good opportunities to meet that interesting-looking guy on third floor Bryan or the kooky girl down the hall. Want to get involved in worthwhile projects? Hall parties for underprivileged children or complex-sponsored lectures are only a few ways. A flair for the artistic? Working on publicity signs and bulletin board displays, designing floats, or painting backdrops are sufficient to fulfill this need. When living in the residence hall, the question is never what can I do, but when will I ever find the time to do everything.

Special activities relieve the busy atmosphere of dorm life and allow residents to make new friends while enjoying themselves.

Some people feel they learn more from discussing certain topics with their friends and profs after class than from reading assigned textbooks.

RESIDENCE HALLS CREATE LASTING FRIENDSHIPS

Who would ever have guessed on that first day of one's freshman year that these strange people sharing one's room for the coming school year would become one's closest friends? Or that foreign student around the bend in the hall; how could anyone ever call him weird after getting to know him? Want to know if Ft. Lauderdale is really that swinging? Tanned Carol next door will give the real low-down. Who can the girls of Williams Hall get to help them with their Homecoming float? Bailey Hall has the guys and the willingness to make it a winning display and will also provide some fun times together. Surprisingly enough, those ATL and Nat Sci profs aren't as forbidding to talk to when they are in the dorm grill. All of these friendships, some of which grow into deep and wonderful relationships, happen daily in MSU residence halls.

Hall activities provide many opportunities to meet people of all ages and sizes.

MARY MAYO AND EAST SHAW FORM HALL UNITY

The academic year of 1968-69 brought about the unity of Mary Mayo and East Shaw dormitory. Together, they sponsored field trips for their adopted third grade class from Cedar Street School. Visits to the zoo and the police department were enjoyed by all involved. The men of Shaw supplied the manpower in a rough tug of war while the women of Mayo supplied an effective cheering section. Victory was the happy result. The Mayo-Shaw alliance successfully presented to their residents two term parties, fall and spring terms. The year itself brought about a major strengthening in interresidence hall unity and cooperation.

Mason Hall, one of the older dormitories on the MSU campus, celebrated its thirtieth anniversary this year. Since its founding on October 30, 1938, the dorm has undergone many transitions. Up until 1952 Mason, along with Abbot, housed the men of Michigan State. During the Second World War the dormitory was "home" to many men from our Armed Services. In recent years Mason has kept up with the times with additions, such as a color television set for the Lower Lounge and remodeling of the grill.

Keeping in line with MSU's platform for a more personal touch, activities at Mason have now been geared for the individual. More things are done on the house level to encourage participation. Events such as floor hay rides, hot dog roasts, and swim parties done in conjunction with brother floors in Abbot, draw active involvement.

ABBOT HALL

"Involvement" described the activities and opinions of the men of Abbot Hall. With much of the concern focused on the apathy on the college campus, Abbot provided needed channels for active participation. For the first time in its history, a class dealing with the physiological, social, and legal aspects of Sexuality was taught in the dormitory. Throughout the year groups such as the Students For A Democratic Society were invited to discuss and explain their purposes and views. In December, Abbot held a referendum on the present US—Vietnamese War, and students were given six alternatives from which to choose. Leaders in the hall felt that to understand the involvement problem they must start at the beginning. Therefore they focused much attention on incoming freshmen. At the start of the year a Freshmen Dinner was held and guest speakers Dr. Linz and Mrs. Mary Sue Larson spoke on sex and dating in college. A carnival was held where both new and old students could get acquainted, and the councils of Abbot and Mason held a bus tour of the campus for all new students at MSU.

GILCHRIST HALL

So numerous were Gilchrist's extra-curricular activities this year, that leadership in the West Circle dormitory described their hall as the "hub of spirit" on the MSU campus. According to the dorm's newspaper, "Gilchrist Gab", highspots of 1968-69 included the crowning of "Miss Maude Gilchrist," and the freshmen skit night. A "Diet Count" with competition among the floors for total weight loss was also held. At the end of the year Gilchrist women choose a "Senior of the Year" and tapped many girls for the Gilchrist Honorary.

HUBBARD HALL

Hubbard Hall, in tune with the 1968 Presidential Election, sponsored speakers for each candidate in order to provide insights and explanations of the issues involved. This was followed by a mock election in which the students were able to express their preferences by vote. Hubbard provided its residents with "International Dinners." Featured at each dinner were the foods and beverages associated with the theme country. Early in fall, the All Hall Council planned and presented a Student-Faculty Forum to promote ideal student faculty relationships.

PHILLIPS HALL

Phillips Dormitory strove to promote the cultural aspects on campus. With this in mind, Phillips sponsored a great many art shows featuring local and other artists. These exhibits were free of charge to all interested persons. Phillips also sponsored a bus trip to Stratford, Ontario. The girls and guests were spectators at the annual Shakespearean Festival. In an effort to improve the study facilities for its residents, Phillips has initiated a program of study open houses. Scholastic honors are not uncommon in Phillips, which has one of the highest GPA on campus. Special dinners are awarded to those high achieving students.

Although mixers were always popular recreation for residents, Phillips sponsored many other activities as the residents strove for a variety of social and cultural experiences.

Maggetti; P. Stefani. third row: S. Dillingham; E. Lindner; B. Langam; R. Gangnath; P. DeCarlo; C. Vocht; L. Yeagley.

RATHER HALL

Rather's hall government this year emphasized informality. There was little "red tape" involved in the planning of Rather's hootenannies, coffee houses, and Christmas decorations. The spontaneity of the activities of this progressive dorm required only the desire of the residents to initiate its programs. Projects such as the adoption of a child by the Rather women showed the civic interest of the dormitory. Provision to keep the Rather coeds informed of the projects and possibilities in their residence hall was made through the dorm news media, the "Rather Reflections."

Majors Night at West Wilson had a successful turnout.

WEST WILSON HALL

The emphasis in the hall government of West Wilson was house participation. The individual floors become involved through adoption of individual faculty fellows with whom they shared ideas and problems. Guest speakers such as Mrs. George Romney, Don Olson, and Dr. Beatrice Moore added to the intellectual contacts provided for the West Wilson coeds. W-O-W, The dorm's bi-weekly news publication, helped to unify the separate floors. By working together this hall created a dorm exercise room to keep its women in the best of shape.

YAKELEY HALL

Early each year councils meet, and plans are formed for the up-coming year. At this time, leaders in the West Circle dormitory made sure that the 1968-1969 calendar provided an interesting list of happenings for the members of Yakeley Hall. The most looked-forward-to of these events was the visit of MSU's president, Dr. John Hannah. Reviving an old tradition of inviting the university president to an informal evening of dinner and small talk, Yakeley decided to quell rumors that Dr. Hannah was really a spirit that is seen only at convocations and graduations. Much to the happiness of the Board of Trustees and four hundred Yakeley women our admired president arrived as the evening began.

AKERS HALL

Emphasizing diversity and reorganization, Akers Hall began its fourth year as a living-learning dormitory. After a year of trial and error, the co-ed dormitory government started by extending grill hours past the usual closing time of eleven-thirty. Greeting men and women first floor residents this fall were wall to wall carpets in the halls, study lounges, and pressing rooms. Carpeting was an experiment in giving a new atmosphere to dormitory life. Future actions as to the extent of this operation were studied and evaluated in accordance with student opinion.

BUTTERFIELD HALL

Butterfield Hall began the year with a new constitution which made hall government more effective and meaningful to each individual. Upperclassmen welcomed the freshmen with feelings of friendship and opportunities for involvement which, this year, produced the first place Homecoming float in the on-campus division. The inter-dorm activities included the favorite banana split parties, pizza parties and chicken dinners. Butterfield women have also adopted a foreign war orphan, who is supported by a portion of each resident's hall dues.

BUTTERFIELD: bottom row: R. Thomas; C. Hetsler, v. pres.; L. Johnson, pres.; P. Hamilton, treas.; M. Ketchum, sec. second row: K. Lawrence; M. Epker; J. Casbon; K. Sheehan; C. Mitchim; B. Hart. third row: K. Johnston; M. Reeber; J. Holmes; M. Eisenmann; P. Lowry.

CAMPBELL HALL

Following the tradition of ivy covered halls, Campbell lends a casual atmosphere for study, relaxation and fellowship. The smallness of the predominately upper classman dorm seems to encourage a sense of unity which is prevalent in all the girls. Fall term exhibited a unified flower-making brigade which produced overy twenty thousand paper flowers. Also on Halloween night, the girls of Campbell were busy finding the ugliest witch on campus. Winter term brought snowball fights, toboggan parties and hot chocolate. The girls will remember these but longest remembered will be the friendships they made.

WEST SHAW HALL

With the trend toward change on college campuses today and with a general change in atmosphere as a major goal, West Shaw undertook a program of government reform. The debate here was not one concerned with the generation gap but rather the growing break between the dormitory resident and his hall governing board, due, in part, to the complexity of the system. Committees were consolidated and new rules concerning election procedure were instituted. Under the new arrangement better living conditions were studied, and, as a result, new lighting, as well as newly decorated study halls became a permanent part of this mid-campus dormitory.

NORTH CASE HALL

The women of North Case Hall aimed to unify residents in the University College and James Madison College. New management and the students worked closely together to create this desired goal. A co-ed conference was established to help bring the students in North and South Case closer together. Guest speakers at the weekly coffee hours, which were open to all residents and faculty members provided a setting for lively discussions for residents of both colleges.

EMMONS HALL

Emmons Hall began the year by capturing first place in the co-ed dormitory division of the Homecoming floats. The men of Emmons continued to exhibit this distinctiveness at Christmas time when they combined with Landon Hall to provide a dinner for the Lansing area orphan children. Later in the year the Emmons men provided the Brody Complex with some Left Bank theatrical productions. At the end of spring term the scholars of the dormitory were honored at a special banquet.

Wellman; R. Curtis.

HOLMES HALL

The combined governing body of Holmes Halls in cooperation with the dormitory's residents placed the greater part of its emphasis this year in furthering student rights at M.S.U. Holmes, offered its students an active involvement in the democratic and intellectual workings of the multiversity. "Dialog 68," for example, a campus-wide activity, was sponsored and housed in Holmes Hall. The keynote address by Judith Crist began seven nights of probing into some of the deepest problems of our society today.

LANDON HALL

Service is a constant interest for residence halls, but Landon concentrated on new acquisitions to the decor of the hall. As one of the older dormitories on campus Landon began its twenty-first year by welcoming its newest resident, a stereo phonograph. The stereo, located in the newly re-named Blue Lounge, provided a break from daily stresses for Landon co-eds. But responsibilities were not forgotten as the women of Landon became involved in a charity project for a local Home for the Aged.

LANDON: bottom row: D. Ruppert; C. Miller; M. Stone; S. Kirkland, V. Pres.; K. Moon, Pres.; J. Bauer, Treas.; H. Sellick; D. Williams, Sec.; second row: M. DeLuca; M. Devet; M. Pastuszka; R. EAST McDONEL

The Scottish clans of East McDonel Hall accomplished goals both in the line of tradition and of innovation. The coffee houses attracted both performers and audiences in huge numbers to McDonel's transformed cafeteria. The tradition of the fall term party in the sparkling 1968-9 version, "Charisma" highlighted the Christmas holidays for McDonel residents. Under new activities this year, East McDonel Hall developed both a "Trivia Tournament," and a guitar workshop to aid all novices.

VAN HOOSEN

Differing from the usual definition of on-campus housing, Van Hoosen Hall provided a feeling of independent living within the setting of campus life. Each apartment, consisting of a living area and kitchen, with four to six women, brought residents in close contact with the experiences and problems of living and working together. An easy going atmosphere, with added responsibilities, and more freedom are the basic reasons co-eds chose Van Hoosen over dormitory life.

Scott; P. Wilkins; J. Gebhart; P. Krohn; C. Cooper. fourth row: M. Keith; C. Kaswora; A. Bass; S. Pribble; G. Gust; P. Bartels.

WILLIAMS

Williams Hall, one of the older dorms on campus, began the year with their annual Halloween Party. It was held in the cafeteria which was decorated in the traditional orange and black scheme. Because all-hall parties are such an essential element in Williams living, the girls have used their ingenuity to make each party different. The Old-Fashioned Ice Cream Social provided the girls not only with a delicious bill of fare but also with opportunities to meet each other and form new friendships. Another Williams original was Mama Sara's Sweet Shop which found the girls working together and increasing unity among the residents.

SOUTH WONDERS

Breaking tradition this year, South Wonders presented a new concept in spirit. During the annual homecoming weekend returning alumni found a whole dormitory decorated and dedicated to M.S.U.'s athletic teams and former students. As in previous year, South Wonders continued its program of Mother-Daughter and Sister weekends. To increase affectiveness of these projects it was decided not to limit these weekends to one particular date for the whole dormitory; but instead to give each house the choice of picking their own dates.

Whether your spouse is there relaxing at your side or the apartment is all to yourself, there is always a certain atmosphere of belonging somewhere; of having someone to come home to and make the day seem more complete.

When a student starts college as a freshman, he or she has plans of graduating, perhaps going to grad school and working for a few years. All the while, they resolve to "play the field" before settling down with just one person for the rest of their lives. But there comes a time when "he" is introduced to her or "she" walks past him in class. Suddenly, big plans for the future are given second perogatives as their soul mate becomes the dominant focus of their lives.

Marriage follows and despite all the difficulties encountered, there are the good times too. Having neighbors with similar problems make one's own problems seem smaller. Living in either Spartan Village, University Village or Cherry Lane Apartments is also less expensive than the residence hall. The beautiful Michigan State campus can make a perfect setting to fall in love and to spend the beginning years of married life.

Love is doing someone else's laundry.

MARRIED HOUSING; THAT WONDERFUL CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Things are looking up

There is something you forgot. She said to stop at the store, but what did she say to get?

Home. Home is where the bills are; rent, groceries, clothes—all this plus tuition. Home to the wife and kids. Would you come help with dinner? Finals are tomorrow. Hamburgers tonight so you can get right to work. After dinner, the kids in bed, a pot of coffee and the long night of studying is ahead. If you can only hang on until graduation, maybe then, it will all be worth it.

Married Students Build for Future Happiness While Creating a Present.

The culmination, the product of a process begun in ignorance, continued in faith and finished in some blind rush toward a glimpsed future. Good fortune be yours, if fortune be enough to aid you in your search.

Thank you for your attention. You've been a good audience and a better subject. If we have offended anyone, we are apologetic. If we have pleased you, we are pleased. If you agree with our protrayal of your (and our) university, we are grateful. If you do none of these things, thank you for your patience. It's been a long and sometimes trying year. It hasn't always been a good year but we've learned — from all of you and sometimes in spite of some of you.

464 pages is a lot of book and they were finally finished only through the efforts of a lot of good people. Many of those who are leaving will be sorely missed: Jack Burns, who made sure that the book came out; Maryellen, who sold the damn things; Dick, who made sure that most of the pictures got taken; Mary Beard, who read most of the copy; J.J., who counted the money; and Sally, Thayer, Elaine and Jeanne, who did excellent jobs on difficult sections; Pete Grant, who knows that his efforts to bring quality and excitement to the Wolverine are not unappreciated; and the countless other people who typed and who wrote copy and who took pictures and who got discouraged and left and who worked late and without whom this whole project would have been a lot harder and a lot less fun. Thank you all. Thanks also to the people who remain — Eleanor, Bru, Mary, Renee and all the rest. I have no doubt that "your" Wolverine will far surpass this attempt. And finally, thank you Mr. McIlrath, for your help, your support and your knowledge, all of which you were constantly willing to give.

A final word of appreciation to the professional people listed below and a word of caution to you, the reader. Keep this book carefully, for in not too many years to come, you may need it to remind yourself what the schoolyear 1968-69 looked like. Peace and thank you.
